FINE FARM FOR SALE.

That beautifully located Farm,

The West half of lot 26, in the 12th Concession of Otonabee.

Situated east of the old Cobourg Railway. The property comprises 98 acres more or less. The soil is excellent and well adapted to gardening purposes. Its situation is very desirable, it being only one mile from the market square, and commanding a fine view of the town of Peterborough. Since the property came into possession of its present proprietor, over $3,000 has been spent on its improvement. It is one of the best watered farms in Ontario, being supplied by a never-failing spring well, so situated as to provide ten feet head. From this are laid nearly 700 feet of iron piping. At a distance of 240 feet from the spring this pipe loads to a watering trough in the barn. A continuation of the pipe carries the overflow from this, 440 feet further to another watering trough into another field. From the latter the overflow passes into a tile drain on the road side, and thence away. This pipe is provided with two taps, by which the water supply to the stock may be regulated. This water supply makes the farm eminently fitted for grazing purposes; stock can be supplied with continual access to an unlimited supply of pure living water. Or for market gardening the facilities for irrigation would admit of setting dry seasons at defiance, this together with the proximity to a first-class market (only one mile) makes this farm unequaled for this purpose.

For either a gentleman of leisure who wishes to devote his retirement to agricultural pursuits or for a pushing man who desires to make money, this farm for fertility of soil, water supply, beauty of situation and convenience to town, can have no superior.

TERMS: One thousand dollars to be paid down when deeds are handed over, the balance may remain on the property at 6 per cent interest for any term agreed upon.

Ex-Mayor Smith on invitation being present took a seat beside the Mayor on the dais and petitions were received

COMMUNICATIONS

From the Silsby Manufacturing Company, inclosing price of heater for steamer—$200, with 5 per cent. off for cash.—Fire, Water and Gas Committee to report.

From Conner Bros., requesting the transfer of W. J. Hopkins' livery license to them.—Request granted.

From R. Kingan, asking part remission of taxes on account of loss by fire.—Court of Revision to report.

From George Schnieder, asking the grade to be struck on corner of George and Dalhousie streets.—Street and Bridge Committee.

From Wm. O'Connor, late High School headmaster, asking remission of taxes for six months, instead of twelve, on income, he having only been drawing salary for eighteen months.—Court of Revision.

From James Coughlin, asking to be relieved of statute labor tax, as he pays taxes on the premises he occupies.—Court of Revision.

From Catharine Leonard, requesting that the crossing at George and Wolfe streets be repaired.—Street and Bridge Committee.

From Charles Milledge, asking remission of dog tax.—Court of Revision.

From W. J. Hall and four others, requesting payment of the annual charge due by the Midland Railway.—The Clerk requested to urge payment.

From Wm. Cluxton and 101 others, asking that electric lights be placed on George street, at the intersection of McDonnel, Murray, Brock, Hunter, Simcoe, Charlotte and King, and one at the corner of Charlotte and Aylmer streets, and that those at Brock, Hunter, Simcoe and Charlotte streets be kept burning all night, these to be paid for by local tax.—Received.

FINANCE.

Mr. Davidson, chairman, presented the report of the Finance Committee, recommending the payment of the following accounts:—Wm. Snowden, $3.00; the Treasurer of Ontario, $15.82; H. Rush, $5.50; Mrs. Costello, damages sustained on Hunter street (through its neglected condition), $25.—Report adopted.

ACCOUNTS.

The following accounts were referred to the Finance Committee or paid, as noted:

R. White, York Pioneers	4 00
R. White, streets	4 00
County Treasurer, conveying lunatics and sundries	45 98
R. Hudson, corporate work (paid)	5 77
C. McGinty, night watchman (paid)	6 00
M. O'Donnell, do.	4 00
John Fitzpatrick do.	4 00
W. Pidgeon do.	6 00

CHIEF OF POLICE.

Mr. Kelly, Chairman of the Committee on Appointments, said that the committee had no report, but had come to the conclusion to instruct the Clerk to advertise for a Chief of Police, which he had done.

Messrs. Cahill and Rutherford said that the matter had been referred to the Committee to merely report, and it was rather a high-handed proceeding to act without due authority.

Mr. Kelly said the matter was referred to the Committee with power to act.

TOWN CLOCK.

Mr. Rutherford reported that he had considered the matter of protecting the town clock and found that covering the face with wire would cost $100, which he considered too much. He thought it far cheaper to shoot, trap or poison the pigeons.

SPAULDING'S BAY.

A motion by Mr. McNeil, that the Clerk be instructed to request the Town Commissioners to furnish the Council at its next meeting with a copy of the deed of Spaulding's Bay and adjoining lands, the amount of lands still held by them, and an account of all lands sold and of the money received, was agreed to.

RAILWAY WHISTLING.

On motion of Mr. Rutherford, seconded by Mr. Hartley, the Town Solicitor was instructed to prepare a by-law with a view of suppressing the nuisance of railway whistling on Sundays.

ST. PAUL'S CHURCH.

On motion the Street Inspector was instructed to raise and repair the sidewalk on two sides of St. Paul's Presbyterian Church.

ELECTRIC LIGHT.

Mr. Davidson moved, seconded by Mr. Yelland, that the petition of Wm. Cluxton and others be granted, and that the Fire, Water and Gas Committee sign an agreement with the Electric Light Company for the same at prices quoted by Mr. T. G. Hazlitt, viz: 25 cents per light nightly until midnight, and 25 cents each for the four from midnight until daylight, and that the Clerk notify the Peterborough Gas Company to discontinue their lights to the extent of 15 jets in the vicinity covered by the proposed electric lights, such discontinuance to take effect from 1st December next; also, that the Clerk first ascertain if the required number of names are on the petition in order to make a special tax.—Carried.

SPECIAL TAXATION.

Mr. Millar moved, seconded by Mr. Green, —That the Clerk be hereby instructed to furnish to the Council at its next meeting a statement showing the total amount of taxes levied upon the ratepayers situated on George street, from Brock to Charlotte streets, also that portion of Hunter and Simcoe streets situated between Aylmer and George streets, such statement to cover both real and personal property and to be taken from the last revised assessment roll—Carried.

The Council adjourned for three weeks.

LOCAL MUTUAL INSURANCE COMPANIES.

To the Working Men of Peterborough:

It must be apparent to those of you who may be fortunate enough to own a house and lot, or other property, that there is some unfairness (not to say imposition) in the present mode of insuring against fire. There is a very small proportion of this class of property that suffers from fire, and while we pay, and continue to pay, we only become poorer thereby. This state of things is, or has been permitted to go on in the very teeth of those very successful mutual benefit societies which have sprung up of late. I see no reason why our homes, which we value much, cannot be protected in the same way by our own selves. Instead of sinking our money as we do by the present method of insurance, we could use our surplus funds to our own benefit, or keep it in our own pockets until it is required to pay the man who unfortunately suffers from fire. The principal idea, I suppose, in an insurance company is for the many to help out the few, and for the surplus, if any, to go into the pockets of the organized company. And there is no doubt in my mind, judging from the earnest preseverence of the agents, that there is something substantial comes of it to compensate them for their labours. Further than this, I believe the company are in no way responsible for the acts of their agents, they never refuse our money, but if a property happens to be incorrectly described through the carelessness of agents or any other trivial matter, said company will leave no stone unturned to get out of payment.

I am confident that a company can be formed by us and worked in a successful manner, in this exceptionally prosperous town—it need not of necessity be small or meagre in a town like this, if care be taken in selection of risks.

I shall be glad to hear the views of any person who may feel interested, with the view of organizing at once, if the scheme should meet with approval.

I am Sir,

Yours respectfully,

A WORKING MAN.

AN APPEAL TO THE PUBLIC.

To The Editor of THE EXAMINER.

DEAR SIR,—Will you be good enough to give a place in your columns, to the following circular, which has been directly sent to a large number of the people of the Dominion. Not being able, however, to send a copy to everbody, I ask the publication of this in your columns, trusting that it will have desired effect.

Yours truly,

WM. BENNETT.

DEAR SIR,—You must be aware that Mr. Chiniquy has a book ready for the press, entitled "Fifty years in the Church of Rome." The book is three-quarters printed, but further progress is arrested for want of funds.

Mr. Chiniquy has appealed to 50,000 Protestants, to purchase copies in advance, but as yet he has received only from 25 to 30 subscriptions. The book will contain 700 pages. The price is $6 per copy. The proceeds after paying expenses connected with publication, will be devoted to the furtherance of the work at St. Anne.

Will you kindly subscribe for a copy yourself, if convenient? Will you also kindly ask for subscriptions from those of your friends, who are able and willing to advance $5 for a copy? In addition may I ask you to use your influence to place copies on the shelves of your Congregational and Sabbath School Libraries?

Love to Mr. Chiniquy, and anxiety to promote the reformation cause, constrains the writer to undertake this work of faith. He has been all along a firm believer in the honesty of the author of the book and has done something to sustain him in his conflicts.

Contributions can be sent either to Mr. Chiniquy at St. Anne, Kankakee, Illinois, or to myself at Peterborough, Ont., Box 268.

I am, yours very sincerely,

WM. BENNETT.

Peterborough, Ont., November 1st, 1884.

THE EXHIBITION GROUNDS.

To the Editor of THE EXAMINER:

DEAR SIR,—Since writing you last week I have called upon Mr. Cox and he assures me that the directors of the West Riding Agricultural Society can procure tenders of land adjoining that offered the Society by him at the same price per acre as he offered his, viz: $200. I do trust, Mr. Editor, that the directors at their next meeting will reconsider the unwise steps they have taken and remedy it before it has gone too far. That the land in Smith is the proper place for the exhibitions there can be no two unprejudiced opinions, without taking into consideration the saving of $5,500, which the Society, should it go on in its mad plunge, will never be able to pay.

Yours truly,

EXHIBITOR.

November 11th, 1884.

THE MASSES AND MAGNIFICENT CHURCHES.

A congregation not far from Peterborough, was addressed on the above subject on Sunday. The text was, Isaiah XL, 9, on the clause, "Get thee up into the high mountain." The preacher said:

The Gospel is to be preached conspicuously. The preacher is to occupy the most prominent place possible for the delivery of his message. He is to go where he can be seen and heard by the great multitude of people. That would seem to be the meaning of the clause "Get thee up into the high mountain." What if we are wasting time and energies by our pulpit and indoor preaching! The hill side, the crowded market square, the public park, would seem to be more appropriate as places of public assembly. Do we not exclude many from hearing the Gospel message, by shutting ourselves within the walls of a church building? How unlike our churches are to the places to which the messengers of the text were instructed to go! Should not ministers economise with time and talent and energy! Should they not try to spread their influence over the widest area possible! Field preaching is perhaps after all, the nearest to the original plan. What if our expensive churches should prove after all, to be only so much hard cash, to a large extent, wasted! How many missionaries, coiporteurs, Bible agents could be sustained by the superfluous money invested in them! We must have church buildings, but why so luxurious ones and why as preachers should we confine ourselves to these? Efforts towards church extension means leaving the church, not only occasionally, but frequently—going out into the highways and hedges and compelling the poor, the lame and the blind to come in. The church must go to the crowds, before the crowds will go to the church. Places of worship of stone and brick, 60 by 30, and with doors so small as that only one at a time can find convenient entrance, are not inviting to the multitudes without. How are the masses to be evangelized? Yes, the mass of the people are still out of the church—not in this neighbourhood perhaps, but in the larger cities of the world. In London, Glasgow, New York, Chicago, not one in four attend any place of worship. Should not the churches aim at the conversion of these? If so, they must make a change. They must do something analagous to what Zion and Jerusalem are here exhorted to do—to go up to the tops of the mountains, and cry with loud voice to those living in her very midst, but still in absolute heathenism.—[COM.

It cures Dyspepsia, Biliousness and Torpidity of the Liver, Constipation, and all diseases arising from Impure Blood, Female Complaints, etc.

THE SAVED ARMY

Council of War.

To resume the report of the proceedings of the council of war. Last issue we gave a list of the various committees. The printing committee was instructed to consider the advisability of enlarging the organ of the Army, the Trumpet, to an eight page paper.

The territory of operations was made into divisions. The Eastern Division is for the counties of Hastings and Prince Edward east. The western division, from the counties of York and Wellington westward. The Central division, between the first two.

An Auditing Committee consisting of Bros. Moore, Campbell and Bick, were instructed to audit the accounts of the different stations. After some discussion appertaining to the successful working of the Army, it was decided that the next meeting of Council be held in the following order:—Brockville, for the Eastern Division; Wingham, for the Western Division; Cobourg, for the Central Division, and that the Executive Council meet at Peterborough in May next. The report of the Secretary and Treasurer were read and received.

On Thursday, after routine, Bro. Harper, Lakefield, owing to business engagements, resigned, and Bro. J. W. Moore, the delegate elected to represent the station, was introduced and his name placed on the various committees, instead of Bro. Harper.

It was decided to intrust to a committee the work of drawing up rules to guide and govern officers and stations, and a committee of ladies was appointed to decide upon a winter cap for lady officers. The principle was adopted of each division having control of its local officers.

The first Council of War for the Eastern Division, will be held in Brockville, on the last Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday in January, 1885.

The second Council of War, for the Central Division, will be held in Cobourg, on the first Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday in February, 1885.

The third Council of War for the Western Division, will be held in Wingham, on the last Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday in March, 1885.

The appointing of trustees, receiving of reports of committees and their adoption, brought this session to a close, the Executive Committee to meet again in Peterborough at the end of May.

The council adjourned, the greatest harmony and good-feeling having characterized its sessions. Mass meetings, well attended, were held in the evenings, that on Thursday night being particularly memorable. The Opera House, illuminated by the electric light, was filled to its utmost capacity. The meeting was conducted by Capt. Wills, Ottawa, and Capt. Auburn, Wingham, and Rev. Mr. Torrance, and General Lindsay and others delivered short addresses. Wm. Mitchell, a blind boy from Ashburnham, about sixteen years old, read a Scripture lesson from a Bible with raised letters.

The reports of the delegates attending the Council of War show that the work of the Army in Canada is prosperous, and is resulting in the doing of great good.

Just now, the Millinery Trade is Booming at Turnbulls. Several new and scarce Shapes by Express this week.

MYSTERIOUS DISAPPEARANCE.

Sudden Departure of Mr. K. Urquhart, of Lakefield—His Failure to Return after an Absence of Over Two Weeks—Last Heard of Near Niagara Falls—Fears that He has Met with Fatal Accident—Or Made Way with Himself in a Moment of Mental Aberration.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

Not a little surprise has been occasioned by the sudden and unexpected departure of Mr. K. Urquhart from Lakefield under most singular circumstances. Surprise was increased to astonishment when it was known that his friends were unable to find any trace of him. He left Lakefield on the 24th of last month and took the train from Peterborough to Toronto. From there he went to a friend's at Buffalo, where, after remaining for two or three days, he left during the night, and was seen by a policeman walking along a street which led to a station and also to the Niagara River. After this can be obtained of his whereabouts. There are various theories as to the cause of the strange course he has taken. He has had some financial difficulties, but, so far as is known to the public, they were not so great but that he might have overcome them, though no doubt a man of his temperament would likely feel anything of the kind very keenly. It appears his health, too, has not been very good of late. This may have made him despondent; but, whatever may have been the cause everyone seems to have been COMPLETELY TAKEN BY SURPRISE.

NO CLUE WHATEVER

Mr. Urquhart has been a resident of Lakefield for over 25 years, very well known, industrious, honest and upright in all his dealings with the public. He has always taken a lively interest in politics, has been a for the last two years, and took an active part in municipal affairs. Of a social and genial disposition, he was respected by all. When the fact became known that he was missing and could not be found, that there was a probability that, in a moment of temporary derangement, he may have found a watery grave in the Niagara, it called forth many deep expressions of regret and sympathy from the public. Every effort, we learn, has been made and is still being made to get some trace of him.

MEMBER OF THE VILLAGE COUNCIL

VILLAGE COUNCIL.

Present,—Councillor Moore in the chair, and Messrs. McWilliams and Cox, Councillors.

Moved by Councillor McWilliams, seconded by Councillor Cox, that the following accounts be paid:

Isaac Watson, wages	$13 20
Wm. Smith, do.	8 00
James Richardson, team	3 75
Jonathan Griffin, attending selection of jurors and Appeal Court	6 00
Alex. Bell, ditto	6 00
Total	$30 95

The motion was carried.

It was moved by Councillor McWilliams, seconded by Councillor Cox, that the Clerk be instructed to have a by-law prepared by next meeting to repeal by-law No. 21, as per motion passed March 10, 1884.

A resolution was passed instructing the Clerk to get a by-law prepared by the village solicitor, prohibiting interment of the dead within the corporation, said by-law to take effect 1st August, 1885.

Mr. H. Wynne addressed the Council in reference to getting back the road from Mr. Ross which had been given to him in exchange for another. He thought the exchange illegal.

The Clerk was instructed to write and ascertain if Mr. Ross would be willing.

ROWDYISM.

There was considerable of a row created on the street on Monday evening by a young man who had taken so much fire-water that he was anxious to shoot someone and thrash a great many more. No constables were to be found, so some of our citizens had to take charge of the fast youth and with some difficulty got him to his boarding house. The want of lock-up is very apparent on those occasions.

COLLISION AND RUNAWAY.

On Monday Mr. Maurice Hynes, with Mr. John Moher, while driving to Lakefield collided with the vehicle of Mr. Garret Galvin, who was on his way home, and were thrown out. The horse ran on to Lakefield, passing up Queen street in the dark at a very rapid pace. Mr. Thos. Wallace, at great risk to himself managed to catch him. Except some bruises, &c., no damage was done.

You can buy a good Gray Flannel at 20 cts. a yard, at Turnbull's, and extra good at 25 cts.

NORWOOD.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

CHANGE OF BUSINESS.

Mr. Robert Stewart, who has founded a large drug business in this village, and very successfully carried it on, too, has sold out his entire stock-in-trade and interest in the business to Dr. Ford, of this place, and Mr. Wm. Rutherford, son of Mr. A. Rutherford, of Peterborough. The latter young gentleman comes to us highly recommended as a druggist, having for many years past had a large experience as such, and can be thoroughly relied upon as a dispensing chemist. The Doctor, of course, is well known here and will give the new firm a name and standing that will ensure the confidence and patronage of the public. Mr. Stewart retires with the good wishes of the public generally.

ANOTHER CERTIFICATE.

With great pleasure we learn that Mr. Davidson, headmaster of our High School, received a third-class certificate for Mary E. King, a pupil of that school. This makes a total of thirty-one to the roll of successful candidates from the Norwood High School, and must certainly be very gratifying to the efficient teachers of that institution, as well as to the public generally. The examiners appear to be very dilatory in completing their work this year.

FOOTBALL.

On Thursday afternoon last a football match (Association rules) was played between the Norwood village and High School teams. A splendid game was played, although the mud rendered scientific play almost impossible. The school team, however, won an easy victory, owing to their better knowledge of the game and greater activity.

THANKSGIVING ENTERTAINMENT.

A rather pleasant and successful entertainment under the auspices of the Ladies' Co-operative Society of the Norwood Methodist Church was held here on the evening of Thanksgiving Day. After a substantial tea had been partaken of—to which ample justice had been done—a rich literary feast was enjoyed. Appropriate readings were given by Miss Lily Ford, Lily Scott, Mrs. P. W. Stevenson, Dr. Ford, W. J. Roseboro and J. Lewis. The vocal part of the programme was ably sustained by Mrs. John Patterson, Miss Fanning, G. W. Jackman, F. H Birt and Geo. Duffield, the choir of the church also rendering some choice selection of music in a very creditable manner. The whole programme gave a very enjoyable entertainment, and was deservedly appreciated by the large gathering present. During the evening Mr. F. H. Birt was presented with a silver butter cooler, syrup pitcher and spoon holder, as a token of the esteem in which he was held by his many friends of the Methodist Church, and in appreciation of his able and gratuitous services in leading, for many years, the choir of that church. An eulogistic address was read by Mrs. Patterson, while the presentation was gracefully made by Miss Annie Minaker. Proceeds of entertainment, $18.00.

KEENE.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

Dr. T. Miller has returned to the village for a visit. Mr. Lang's House has been plastered and will be finished in a short time. Mr. Harrison's house is nearly completed, and also Mr. A. Brices'. We understand that Mr. K. Mark of Allendale, has received the appointment of head teacher in the place of Mr. W. J. Campbell, who has resigned. Mr. R. B McIntyre intends to have the skating rink this winter. Mr. M. Kennally, who has been sick for some time, is, we are glad to say, improving.

NUISANCE.

One of the residents of this village undertook to dress up a pole cat in his house, and as a consequence, no one can go near the house. Some talk of indicting him for keeping a nuisance.

CHURCH.

The Presbyterian church is being rushed ahead. Mr. Fitzgerald, who is in charge of the workmen, is one who understands the work he has on hand.

TEMPLE.

The Lang Temple has now 103 members. There are not many more coming in, as all in the neighbourhood, or nearly all, are members of the Temple at present.

MITE MEETING.

The mite meeting at Mr. Miller's, on Thursday last was largely attended, and was in every way a success.

RIFLE MATCH.

The match held on thanksgiving day was a success. The wind was very high. The following is the order of volunteer match: 1st, Sergt. McIntyre, 2nd, Pt. Wedlock, 3rd, Pt. A. Dickson, 4th, Pt. Launderville, 5th, Lieut. Campbell, 6th, Capt. Birdsall, 7th, Sergt. McFarlane, 8th, Pt. James Miller, 9th, Drum Major J. C. Read.

All Comers:—1st, Wm. Wedlock, 2nd, R. Launderville, 3rd, R. B. McIntyre, 4th, R. K. Birdsall, 5th James Miller, 6th, S. M. Wylie, 7th, Wm. Campbell, 8th, A Dickson.

OTONABEE.

The following are the names of the scholars of S. S. No. 12, of the above school who are worthy of honorable mention for the month of October, Miss A. V. Weir, teacher: Girls: Lizzie McCarthy, Eva Weir, Kate Price, Essie Sedgwick, Mary Bean, Maria Lee, Lily Sedgwick, Charlotte Wheeler, Lottie Lee, Annie Hair. Boys:—Albert R. Price, Percy Price, James Hogan, Dannie Holland, Thos. McCarthy, Bertram Lawrence, Andrew Reanie and Arthur Whatley.

A. Maybee, Merchant, Wakworth, writes: I have sold some hundreds of bottles of Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil, and it is pronounced by the public "one of the best medicines they have ever used;" it has done wonders in healing and relieving pain, sore throats, &c., and is worthy of the greatest confidence.

Discourse by Rev. T. DeWitt Talmage.

THE UPPER FORCES.

And the Lord opened the eyes of the young man, and he saw, and beheld the mountain was full of horses and chariots of fire round about Elisha.—II Kings, vi. 17.

As it cost England many regiments and two million dollars a year to keep safely a troublesome captive at St. Helena, so the king of Syria sends out a whole army to capture one minister of religion—perhaps 50,000 men to take Elisha. During the night the army of Assyrians came around the village of Dothan, where the prophet was staying. At early daybreak the man servant of Elisha rushed in and said: "What shall we do? There is a whole army come to destroy you. We must die, we must die." But Elisha was not scared a bit, for he looked up and saw the mountains all around him full of supernatural forces, and he knew that it there were 50,000 Assyrians against him there were 100,000 angels for him; and in answer to the prophet's prayer in behalf of his affrighted man servant, the young man saw it too. Horses of fire harnessed to chariot of fire, and drivers of fire pulling reins of fire on bits of fire, and warriors of fire with brandished swords of fire, and the brilliance of that morning sunrise was eclipsed by the galloping splendors of the celestial cavalcade. "And the Lord opened the eyes of the young man, and he saw, and behold the mountain was full of horses and chariots of fire round about Elisha."

For two Sabbath mornings I have spoken of the Assyrian perils which threaten the destruction of American institutions — the bribery, the low morals, the drunkenness, the political abandonment. But this morning I speak of the upper forces of the text that are to fight on our side. If all the low levels are filled with armed threats, I have to tell you that the mountains of our hope and courage and faith are full of the horses and chariots of Divine rescue. You will notice that the Divine equipage is always represented as a chariot of fire. Ezekiel and Isaiah and John, when they came to describe the Divine equipage, always represent it as a wheeled, a harnessed, an upholstered conflagration. It is not a chariot like kings and conquerors of earth mount, but an organized and a compressed fire. That means purity, justice, chastisement, deliverance through burning escapes. Chariot of rescue? Yes, but chariot of fire. All our national disenthrallments have been through scorching agonies and red disasters. Through tribulation the individual rises. Through tribulation nations rises. Chariots of rescue, but chariots of fire. But how do I know that this divine equipage is on the side of our institutions? I know it by the history of the last 108 years. The American Revolution started from the pen of John Hancock in Independence Hall in 1776. The colonies without ships, without ammunition, without guns, without trained warriors, without money, without prestige. On the other side, the mightest nation of the earth, the largest armies, and the grandest navies, and the most distinguished commanders, and resources inexhaustible, and nearly all nations ready to back them up in this fight. Nothing as against immensity. The cause of the American colonies, which started at zero, dropped still lower through the quarreling of the generals, and through the jealousies at small successes, and through the winters which surpassed all their predecessors in depth of snow and horrors of congealment. Elisha, surrounded by the whole Assyrian army, did not seem to be worse off than did the thirteen colonies encompassed and overshadowed by foreign assault. What decided the contest in our favor? The upper forces, the upper armies. The Green and White Mountains of New England, the highlands along the Hudson, the mountains of Virginia, all the Appalachian ranges were full reinforcements which the young man Washington saw by faith, and his men endured the frozen feet, and the gangrened wounds, and the exhausting hunger, and the long march, because "the Lord opened the eyes of the young man and he saw, and behold the mountains were full of horses and chariots of fire round about Elisha." I do not know how any man can read the history of those times without admitting that the contest was decided by the upper forces. In 1861, when our civil war opened, many at the North and at the South pronounced it national suicide. It was not courage against cowardice, it was not wealth against poverty, it was not not large States against small States. It was heroism against heroism, it was the resources of many generations against the resources of many generations, it was the prayer of the North against the prayer of the South, it was one half of the nation in armed wrath meeting the other half of the nation in armed indignation. What could come but extermination? At the opening of the war the commander-in-chief of the United States forces was a dear old man with gout and vertigo and asthma, who could not mount a horse, and he rode on the battle-field in a carriage, asking the driver not to jolt it to much. During the four years of the contest, or during the the most of the four years of the contest, on the southern side was a man in middle life who had in his veins the blood of many generation, himself one of the heroes of Cherubusco and Cerro Gordo, Contreras and Chepultepec. As the years passed on and the scroll of carnage unrolled, there came out from both sides a heroism and a strength and a determination that the world had never seen marshaled. And what but extermination could come when Philip Sheridan and Stonewall Jackson met, and Nathaniel Lyon and Sidney Johnston rode in from north and south, and Grant and Lee, the two thunderbolts of battle, clashed? Yet we are a nation and yet we are at peace. Earthly courage did not decide the conflict. The upper forces of the text. They tell us there was a battle fought above the clouds on Lookout mountain; but there was some higher than that. The horses and chariots of God came to the rescue of this nation. In 1876, at the close of a Presidential election famous for devilish ferocity, a darker cloud yet settled down upon this nation. The result of the election was in dispute, and revolution, not between two or three sections, but revolution in every town and village and city of the United States seemed imminent. The prospect that New York would throttle New York, and New Orleans would grip New Orleans, and Boston Boston, and Savannah Savannah, and Washington Washington. Some said Mr. Tilden was elected, others said Mr. Hayes was elected, and how near we came to universal massacre some of us guessed, but God only knew. I ascribe it not to the honesty and righteousness of infuriated politicians, but I ascribe it to the upper forces of the text. Chariots of mercy rolled in, and though the wheels were not heard and the flash was not seen, yet all through the mountains north and south and the east and west, though the hoofs did not clatter, the cavalry of God galloped by. I tell you God is the friend of this nation. In the awful excitement at the massacre of Lincoln, when there was a prospect that greater slaughter would open upon this nation, God hushed the tempest. In the awful excitement at the time of Garfields assassination, God put his foot on the neck of the cyclone. To prove that God is on the side of this nation I argue from the last five great national harvests, and from the national health of the last quarter of a century, epidemics very exceptional, and from the great revivals of religion, and from the spreading of the church of God, and from the continent blossoming with asylums and reformatory institutions, and from Edenization, which promises that this whole land is to be a Paradise when God shall walk in the cool of the day.

If in two sermons I show you what was the evil that threatened to upset and demolish American institutions, I am encouraged more than I can tell you as I see the regiments wheeling down the sky, and my jeremiads turn into doxologies, and the Good Friday of the nations crucifixion shall become the Eastern morn of its resurrection. Of course God works through human instrumentalities, and this national betterment is to come among other things through a scrutinized ballot box. By the law of registration it is almost impossible to have illegal voting. There was a time, you and I remember it very well, when droves of vagabonds wandered up and down on election day, and from poll to poll, and voted here and voted there, and voted everywhere, and there was no challenge, or if there was it amounted to nothing, because nothing could so suddenly be proved upon the vagabonds, Now, in every well organized neighborhood, every voter is watched with severest scrutiny. Just think of it! The record is already made up and has been made up for nearly a week although yet the ordeal is nine days off. I must tell the registar my name and how old I am, and how long I have resided in the State, and how long I have resided in the ward, or the township, and if I misrepresent, fifty witnesses will rise and shut me out of the ballot box. Is not that a great advance? And then notice the law that prohibits a man voting if he has bet on the election. A steps further needs to be taken and that man forbidden a vote who has offered or taken a bribe, whether it be in the shape of a free drink or cash paid down; the suspicious cases obliged to put their hand on the Bible and swear their vote in, if they vote at all. So through the sacred chest of our nation's suffrage redemption will come. God also will save this nation through an aroused moral sentiment. There has never been so much discussion of morals and immorals, as during the present political campaign. Men, whether or not they acknowledged what is right, have to think what is right. We have had men who have had their hands in the public treasury the most of their lifetime stealing all they can lay their hands on, discoursing eloquently about disboneaty in public servants and men with two or three families of their own preaching about the beauties of the Seventh Commandment. The question of sobriety and drunkenness is thrust in the face of the nation as never before and to take a part in the great national contest. Prohibition, which was only a joke four years ago when Neal Dow ran for the Presidency, no longer a joke, but flushing the cheek of this nation with excitement, and agitating the land from Lake Erie to Mobile Bay and from Bangor to San Francisco, and will in four years from now decide who shall be the President of the United States.

The loug, loud laugh at the fanatical reformers has caught in the windpipe and turned into a paroxysm of strangulation and the question of national sobriety is going to be respectfully and deferentially heard at the bar of every legislature and every House of Representatives and every United States Senate, and an omnipotent voice will ring down the sky and cross this land and back again, saying to these rising tides of drunkenness which threaten to overwhelm home and church and nation. "Thus far shalt thou come but no further, and here shall thy proud waves be staid." I have not in my mind a shadow of disheartenment as large as the shadow of a house fly's wing. My faith is in the upper forces, the upper armies of the text. God is not dead. The chariots are not unwheeled. If you only pray more, and rub your eyes from the sleep of indifference and wash them in cool bright water fresh from the wells of Christian reform, it would be said of you as of the one of the text, "The Lord opened the eyes of the young man and he saw, and behold the mountain was full of hosts and chariots of fire round about Elisha," You ask me whom I vote for. I reply it is of very little importance whom I vote for; but it is a matter of vast importance what these throngs and throngs of people shall vote for, and so in these three or four sermons I put before you all the facts and principles so that you can intelligently decide. Vote for the best men, vote conscientiously, vote in the fear of God, vote as you will wish you had voted when you can vote no more. When the army of Antigonus, went into battle his soldiers were very much discouraged, and they rushed up to see the general and said to him. "Don't you see we have a few forces and they have so many more," and the soldiers were affrighted at the smallness of their number and the greatness of the enemy. Antigonus, their commandor, straightened himself up and said with indignation and vehemence, "How many do you reckon me to be?" And when you see the vast armies arranged against the cause of sobriety, it may sometimes be very discouraging, but I ask you, in making up your estimates of the forces of righteourness, I ask you how many do you reckon the Lord God Almighty to be? He is our commander. The Lord of Hosts is His name. I have the best authority for saying that the chariots of God are twenty thousand, and the mountains are full of them. You will take, without my saying it, that my only faith is in Christianity and in the upper forces suggest in the text. Political parties come and go, and they may be right and they may be wrong; but God lives, and I think He has ordained this nation for a career of prosperity that no demagogism will be able to halt. I expect to live to see a political party which will have a platform of two planks—the Ten Commandments and the Sermon on the Mount. When that party is formed it will sweep across the land like a tornado I was going to say, but when I think it is not to be devastation but resuscitation, I change the figure and say such a party as that will sweep across this land like a thousand spice gales from Heaven. American politics, you know as well as I do, will never be purified or made decent by anything less abandoned than the Christian religion. Take, for instance, the fact that we have now $100,000,000 of surplus in the United States Treasury. What is the great anxiety? I think the great question is with a vast multitude whether the Democratic party or the Republican part will have the privilege of stealing it. Will anything short of an infusion of Christain principle in this country lead this nation to be honest. There is only one honest thing to do with that $100,000,000 of surplus—subtract it from the taxation of this nation next year, letting the people up from this accused burden of overtaxation. Suppose you overpaid me in a bargain, what is the honest thing for me to do? Pay it back to you. Ought not a nation to be as honest as an individual? Will it be done? No, not unless we have great revival of religion in Congress and three-fourths of the members down on the "anxious seat." Have you any doubt about the need of the Christian religion to purify and make decent American politics? What is the fact now? Just look at it We are to have for our next President either a pictorialized and excoriated as a thief, or we are to have a man who has been pictorialxed and excoriated as a libertine. Now that is the simple fact. What a state of things it is! Never such a carnival of mud. All the candidates may have their faults, but I have no doubt great injustices have been done them. The trouble is we have in this country two great manufactories, manufactories of lies—the Republican manufactory of lies and the Democratic manufactory of lies—and they are run day and night, and they turn out half a dozen a day all equipped and ready for full sailing. Large lies and small lies Lies private, lies public, and lies prurient. Lies cut bias and lies cut diagonal. Long-limed lies, and lies with double back action. Lies complimentary, and lies defamtory. Lies that some people believe, and lies that all the people believe, and lies that no body believes. Lies with humps like camels and scales like crocodiles, and necks as long as storks and feet as swift as antelopes; and stings like adders. Lies raw and scalloped and pained and stewed. Crawling lies and jumping lies and and soaring lies. Lies with attachment screws and rufflers and braiders and ready wound bobbins. Lies by Christian people who never lie, except durin elections, and lies by people who always lie, but beat themselves in a Presidential campaign. I confess I am ashamed to have a foreigner visit this country in these times. I think that he would stand dazed, his hand on his pocketbook and dare not go out at night! What will the hundreds of thousands of foreigners who come here to live think of us? What a disgust they must have for the land of their adoption! The only good thing about it is many of them cannot understand the English language. But I suppose the German and Italian and Swedish and French papers translate it all, and peddle out the infernal stuff to their subscribers. Nothing but Christianity will ever stop such a flood of indecency. The Christian religion will speak after a while. The billingsgate and low scandal through which we have waded for the last three or four months must be rebuked by that religion which speaks from its two great mountains, from the one mountain intoning the command, "Thou shall not bear false witness against thy neighbor," and from the other mount making plea for kindness and love and blessing rather than cursing. Yes, we are going to have a national religion. There are to kinds of national religion. The one is supported by the State, and is a matter of human politics, and it has great patronage, and under it men struggle for prominence without reference to qualifications, and its archbishop is supported by a salary of $75,000 a year, and there are great cathedrals with all machinery of music and canonicals, and room for a thousand people, yet an audience of fifty people, or twenty people, or ten, or two. We want no such national religion as that; but we want this kind of national religion; the vast majority of the people converted evangelized, and then they will manage the secular as well as the religious. Do you say that is impracticable? No. The time is coming just as certainly as there is a God and that this is His Book, and He has the strength and the honesty to fulfil his promises. One of the ancient emperors used to pride himself on performing that which his counsellors said was impossible, and I have to tell you to-day that man's impossibilities are God's easiest. "Hath he said and shall he not do it? Hath he commanded and shall he not bring it to pass!" The Christian religion is coming to take possession of every ballot-box, of every school-house, of every home, of every valley, of every mountain, of every acre of our national domain. One of the seven wonders of the world was the white marble watch-tower Pharos of Egypt. Sostratus, the architect and sculptor, after building that watchtower cut his name on it. Then he covered it with plastering and to please the king he put the monarch's name on the outside of the plastering; and the storms beat and the seas dashed in their fury and they washed it out and washed it down, but the name of Sostratus was deep cut in the imperishable rock. So across the face of this nation there have been a great many names written—across our finances, across our religion—names worthy of remembrance names written against the architect of our churches and our schools and our asylums and our homes of mercy; but God is the architect of this continent and He was the sculptor of all its grandeurs, and long after, through the wash of the ages and tempests of the centuries, all other names shall be obliterated, the divine signature and divine name will be brighter and brighter as the milleniums go by, and the world shall see that the God who made this continent has redeemed it by His grace from all its sorrows and from all its crimes. Have you faith in such a thing as that? After all the chariots have been unwheeled, and after all the war charges have been crippled, the chariots which Elisha saw on the morning of his peril will roll on in triumph followed by all the armies of heaven on white horses. God could do it without us, but he will not. The weakest of us, the faintest of us, the smallest brained of us shall have part in the triumph. We may not have our name, like the name of Sostratus, cut in imperishable rock and conspicuous for centures, but we shall be remembered in a better place than that even in the heart of Him who came to redeem us and redeem the world, and our names will be seen close to the signature of His wounds, for as this morning he throws out his arms towards us, He says: "Behold, I have graven thee on the palms of my hand. By the mightiest of all agencies, the potency of prayer, I beg you to be before God until after the first Tuesday in November.

There are 4,600,000 letters in the Dead Letter Postoffice at Washington—letters that lost their way, but not one prayer ever directed to the heart of God miscarried. The way is all clear for the ascent of your supplications Heavenward in behalf of this nation. Before the postal communication was so easy, and long ago, on a rock 100 feet high on the coast of England, there was a barrel fastened to a post, and in great letters on the side of the rock so it could be seen far at sea, was the word, "Postoffice," and when ships came by a boat put out to take and fetch letters and so sacred were those deposits of affection in that barrel that no lock was ever put upon it, although it contained messages for America and Europe and Asia and Africa and all the islands of the sea. Many a storm-tossed sailor, homesick, got messages of kindness by that rock, and many a homestead heard good new from a boy long gone. Would that all the heights of our national prosperity were intrenchments of sympathy—prayers going up meeting blessings coming down. Postal celestial. Not by a storm-struck rock on a wintry coast, but by the Rock of Ages. In the cleft of that rock let this nation hide until all its calamities be overpast.

was the first preparation perfectly adapted to cure diseases of the scalp, and the first successful restorer of faded or gray hair to its natural color, growth, and youthful beauty. It has had many imitators, but none have so fully met all the requirements needful for the proper treatment of the hair and scalp. HALL'S HAIR RENEWER has steadily grown in favor, and spread its fame and usefulness to every quarter of the globe. Its unparalleled success can be attributed to but one cause: the entire fulfilment of its promises.

The proprietors have often been surprised at the receipt of orders from remote countries, where they had never made an effort for its introduction.

The use for a short time of HALL'S HAIR RENEWER wonderfully improves the personal appearance. It cleanses the scalp from all impurities, forms all healthy, and (if dry) adds that glossy appearance which prevents baldness. It stimulates the unnatural glands, and enables them to push forward a new and vigorous growth. The effects of this article are not transient, like those of alcoholic preparations, but remain a long time, which makes its use a matter of economy.

BUCKINGHAM'S DYE FOR THE WHISKERS

Will change the beard to a natural brown, or black as desired. It produces a permanent color that will not wash away. Consisting of a single preparation, it is applied without trouble.

Livesey's Life Work.

A few months ago there passed away, at Preston, England, a man named Joseph Livesey, whose position amongst social reformers is most unique. He has lived to see the cause, to which he devoted his life and energy, rise from being a thing despised, unnoticed and unknown, to be one of the factors of modern civilization, its principles advocated by the foremost thought of the day, its influence permeating every department of life. As a rule, social reforms work with exceeding slowness. Ideas do not grow with lightning rapidity. A truth which is of the deepest importance and value may take centuries to ripen into action. And very rarely, indeed, are the customs of society overturned or even rudely shaken in the lifetime of the iconoclast who first attacked them.

The temperance movement, however, with which Joseph Livesey's name is so closely connected is a notable exception to this almost unvarying rule. Livesey was born near Preston, in 1794. His parents died when he was about five years of age, and he was brought up by his grandfather and taught the art of a weaver. From an early age he had an unquenchable thirst for information, and the scanty books within his reach were carefully studied, often by the glimmering light of the kitchen fire, when the rest of the family were asleep. He entered business after his marriage in 1815; but having foolishly entered into an unprofitable partnership by which he lost $10,000, he on one occasion was led to drink. The next day he pondered deeply on the dangers that lay in intoxicants and on the enormous power of example, and was so impressed by these considerations that he resolved never to touch drink again. This resolution he strictly kept.

In 1832 he commenced an adult Sunday school, and in connection with this was developed the temperance movement, by which his name has become famous. One can hardly realize in the face of such widespread temperance principles as are at present spread temperance principles as are at present spread abroad throughout the universe, that the first total abstinence pledge was taken only a little over fifty years ago! On the night of the 23rd of August, 1832, a meeting was summoned by Mr. Livesey at Preston, to consider the temperance question. There was but a small attendance, but here the first total abstinence pledge was signed by Joseph Livesey and six others. Those were "the seven wise men of Preston," whose fame is known throughout the temperence world. The little pledge which has been so fruitful of good results still exists, and is, we understand, to be placed as a precious national memorial in the British Museum.

The movement thus inaugurated at Preston was taken up with extraordinary zeal. For nearly half a century Mr. Livesey's sacrifices on behalf of temperance were simply unparalleled. He delivered thousands of lectures and addresses and circulated millions of pamphlets, tracts and leaflets. He established the Temperance Advocate, which afterwards became the organ of the British Temperance League. He also commenced the Preston Guardian in 1844, and in the conduct of this newspaper he was ably assisted by four of his sons. His services to his native town have been of extraordinary duration and value. He was one of the originators of the first mechanics' institute, and aided in its management for many years. He was a benevolent, kindly man, and in all times of need the poor could confidently rely on his sympathy, and more material help. He died at the age of ninety, and the large public funeral attended by representatives from nearly every important English town and city, and numbering about ten thousand, testified to the worth of the long career which in fulness of years and of honors had come to an end. Surely the lessons of such a life are "writ large" on history, and its power and influence remain with us as an abiding heritage. Livesey's life-work deserves to be studied; his example ought to be carefully followed, and his career will thus prove a powerful incentive to all interested in the well-being and social elevation of the human race.

CHAPTER I.

"I was taken sick a year ago
With bilious fever."

"My doctor pronounced me cured, but I got sick again, with terrible pains in my back and sides, and I got so bad I

Could not move!

I shrunk!

From 228 lbs. to 120! I had been doctoring for my liver, but it did me no good. I did not expect to live more than three months. I began to use Hop Bitters. Directly my appetite returned, my pains left me, my entire system seemed renewed as if by magic, and after using several bottles, I am not only as sound as a sovereign, but weigh more than I did before. To Hop Bitters I owe my life."

CHAPTER II.

"Malden, Mass., Feb. 1, 1883. Gentlemen—I suffered with attacks of sick headache," Neuralgia, female trouble, for years in the most terrible and excruciating manner.

No medicine or doctor could give me relief or cure, until I used Hop Bitters.

HOW TO GET SICK.—Expose yourself day and night; eat too much without exercise; work too hard without rest; doctor all the time; take all the vile nostrums advertised, and then you will want to know how to get well, which is answered in three words—Take Hop Bitters!

None genuine without a bunch of green Hops on the white label. Shun all the vile, poisonous stuff with "Hop" or "Hops" in their name. 46-4t

O'Donoghue; 2nd, John Costello; 3rd, Mary Galvin.

WEATHER NOTES.

During the first half of October we had fine, genial sunshiny weather, but from the 15th we had a cold, cloudy, unpleasant time, scarcely ever seeing sun or moon. Rain fell during the month on 12 days, to the depth of 2 inches and 8-100 of an inch. First snow of the season fell on the 16th, but on the 23rd we had 1 inch, and on the 24th 2 of an inch, making for the month 1¾ inches of snow. The 4th was the hottest day of the month, and, on that evening, after sun-down, our first flock of wild geese went south. Our coldest day was on the evening of the 25th, the thermometer going down to 23 degrees. The average temperature of the month was 47 degrees.

The Kindly Raven.

"Bird that with thy jet wings flapping, come't against my window tapping,
Tell me, is there no kind potion that can woman's bloom restore.
When, by wearing sickness jaded, all her charms grow wan and faded,
Till love's self scarce recognizes the fair face
he praised of yore?
"Yes," the gentle raven spoke, with a sympathizing croak,
"Pierce's Favorite Prescription can renew her bloom once more,
And that remedy is found in each pharmaceutic store."

It is to be hoped that a new fence will be soon built.

Better than Diamonds, and of greater value than fine gold is a great tonic and renovator like Kidney-Wort. It expels all poisonous humors from the blood, tones up the system and by acting directly on the most important organs of the body stimulates them to healthy action and restores health. It has effected many marvelous cures and for all Kidney diseases and other kindred troubles it is an invaluable remedy.

A CONTRAST.

Thus, in addition to his $300,000 to the Exchange Bank, his $30,000 to the Prince Edward Island Bank, his $30,000 to the St. Stephen cotton mill, and his other $30,000 to the Londonderry rolling mills, Sir Leonard caused a loss of $1,000,000 or so to the country by his generosity in bolstering bankrupt concerns. Canada is paying dearly for the luxury of an incompetent Finance Minister. On the other hand, the Tory organs will look in vain for an instance where a dollar was lost to the country under Sir Richard Cartwright's administration by loans to rotten institutions upon insufficient security.

Few are the remedies whose beneficial qualities and real merits have made them so popular with the public, and increased from year to year their consumption, which, whilst simple in their compound, and so easy to take, as The Quinine Wine, prepared by Northrop & Lyman of Toronto. This article is prepared from the pure Sulphate of Quinine, combined with fine Sherry Wine, and choice aromatics, which relieves the Quinine of its bitter taste, and does not impair in the least degree the efficacy of its action upon the patient; while small doses, frequently repeated, strengthen the pulse, increase muscular force, and invigorate the tone of the nervous system, and thus, by the general vigor which it imparts, creates an appetite, which gives to the stomach tone and energy, and fortifies the system against all infectious diseases. Ask for Northrop & Lyman's Quinine Wine, sold by all druggists.

BEWARE THE BOOK AGENT.

At the session of the Eastern Division Court in Toronto, on Tuesday, Judge McDougall presiding, Peebles & Co. vs. Nolan, the first case was a test one. It seems that the defendant signed an order for a book published by the plaintiffs, and afterward countermanded the order to the publishers. Judgment was given for the plaintiffs, His Honor holding that all orders for subscription books, etc., were binding on the subscriber, and any outside contract with the agent did not affect the written contract or bind the publishers.

R. C. Bruce, druggist, Tara, says: I have no medicine on my shelves that sells faster or gives better satisfaction than Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil, and the sale is constantly increasing, the past year being the largest I have ever had. One of my customers was cured of catarrh by using three bottles. Another was raised out of bed, where he had been laid up for for a long time with a lame back, by using two bottles. I have lots of customers, who would not be without it over night.

Sunday theatricals are tolerated by law in five of the principal cities of the United States. They are San Francisco, Cincinnati, St. Louis, New Orleans and Chicago.

Rest and Comfort to the Suffering.

"BROWN'S HOUSEHOLD PANACEA" has no equal for relieving pain, both internal and external. It cures Pain in the Side, Back or Bowels, Sore Throat, Rheumatism, Toothache, Lumbago and any kind of a Pain or Ache. "It will most surely quicken the Blood and Heal, as its acting power is wonderful." "Brown's Household Panacea," being acknowledged as the great Pain Reliever, and of double the strength of any other Elixir or Liniment in the world, should be in every family handy for use when wanted, "as it really is the best remedy in the world for Cramps in the Stomach, and Pains and Aches of all kinds," and is for sale by all Druggists at 25 cents a bottle.

THE FALL IN THE PRICE OF WHEAT

NOWHERE, AS COMPARED WITH

THE STILL GREATER FALL IN THE PRICE OF CLOTHING

LeBRUN'S.

It will pay Farmers better to sell their wheat now at present prices, and buy their Winter's supply of Clothing at the City Clothing Store while you can buy so very cheap, rather than run the chance of waiting to get a few cents more for their wheat and pay 25 per cent higher for their Clothing later on. The Farmers and LeBRUN are in the same position—both have large stocks on hand, and nothing will be gained by holding on to them at present. Sell your wheat now and exchange it for cheap clothing at LeBrun's.

I am determined to offer the bulk of my present very large stock without reserve for the next three months. Remember the prices will be lower than ever offered in Peterborough before.

JUST LOOK AT A FEW OF THE QUOTATIONS:

OVERCOATS—$4.50, $5.00, $6.00, $7.00, $9.00.

TWEED SUITS for $6.50, $8.00, $9.00, $10.00. These prices are fully 28 per cent lower than the regular prices.

ORDERED CLOTHING made up at prices to correspond in cheapness with the above, as for example:

FINE SUITS to order for $14.00, $15.00, and $16.00. No better value ever offered for the money. Activity in every department.

BOYS' AND YOUTHS' CLOTHING.—It will pay you to see our large stock. It is suitable for all ages; made nobby and genteel.

TWEEDS & FULLCLOTHS for common wear at very low prices. Can be cut on the premises free of charge.

UNDERWEAR—I have the best assortment of sizes, largest stock and cheapest Fall and Winter Underwear in Peterborough.

GLOVES.—I have a large assortment in this line, as I make a specialty of Gloves, and sell for less than any house in the trade.

SHIRTS, COLLARS AND CUFFS.—As usual, selling lower than any other house.

TIES.—The run on our Ties this season is immense. Our 25 cent Ties are equal in quality to any 50 cent Tie in the town.

My great aim has always been to give superior goods at inferior prices. My increased business shows how well I have succeeded.

PETERBOROUGH, NOV. 11, 1884.

The Presidential Contest.

The election of Grover Cleveland and Thomas A. Hendricks, as president and vice-president respectively, of the United States, is generally conceded and it is morally certain in spite of contradictory returns, that such is the verdict of the people. There is still talk by the defeated Republicans of "counting out" possibilites, but that is a proceeding which would probably be attended with revolutionary consequences.

Situated as Canadians are, relative to the United States, with such intimate commercial relations, the result, dependent on two chief causes, is an important one to this country.

In the first place it leads the people of this country, friendly to good government, to hope that the days of misrule and corruption in Canada, must eventually touch the limit of the people's patience, in spite of the cunning and unscrupulous means employed by the Conservative party to retain power.

The Democratic party has been out of power for nearly a quarter of a century, and as it is at present constituted, did not intrinsically commend itself so much to the American people, as under the aspect of the lesser of two evils. The Republican party had become notoriously corrupt, at least its control was in the hands of men who are as arrant political tricksters and ringsters as can be found anywhere. The selection of Cleveland is a practical rebuke to dishonest and corrupt politicians, for his career as a public man has been conspicuously marked by good common sense and honesty of purpose. That the people should have chosen him, allied as he was and is, to a party which is not so much better, than the prostrated Republicans as less bad, shows that love of honesty and honest political methods dies hard in the hearts of the people. If then, the people of the United States, with an obviously less elevated political character, rise in their might and put the seal of condemnation on political corruption, it is not too much to hope that Canadians, ere long, will come to their moral senses and pronounce the verdict that sweeps our present corrupt rulers out of the positions, they have done so much to politically disgrace and degrade.

Another manner in which the result of the presidential contest has a vital interest for Canadians, is its condemnation of the fallacy of protection. Cleveland is committed by his platform to the principle of a tariff for revenue only. His return shows that public opinion on the trade question, of which the frantic efforts of protection, generated by monopolists, did not avail to stifle the expression, has un dergone a decided change. The New York Sun, a pronounced Blaine organ, despondently says:

> The advocates of free trade throughout this country will be justified in maintaining that the people have decided in favor of their peculiar doctrine, and that the legislation of the country should immediately be turned in the direction they desire.

If the people of the United States have, after mature experience, pronounced against the protection principle, it is not too much to hope that Canadians, who have equally good sense, will soon speedily follow their example. We have the benefits of our own expensive experience as well as of the example of our neighbours, and it will not take 24 years for us to come to a decision. The "N. P." received its death blow last Tuesday in the United States, and though it may linger for four years longer in a largely modified state, it is possible that the next election will see free trade principles adopted out and out.

During the cheese season of 1884, there has been shipped to the Old Country, from the port of Montreal, one million one hundred of cheese of the value of six million dollars. The Montreal Gazette, extreme Tory and protection journal as it is, does not idiotically attribute this splendid showing to the N. P., but "to the great natural advantages which this country enjoys." But what would have been the result if England had retaliated for our high tariff, which taxes British goods and makes the price higher to the Canadian consumer? What the result if England, like Canada, had put a specific duty of three cents per pound on cheese? Simply this, the Canadian cheese-makers would have realised three million dollars less for their cheese.

Farmers' Institutes.

The world is daily progressing, and with the general advance the profession of farming is being carried along. The farmer who does not keep up with the procession will soon find himself behind in more ways than financially. In several go-ahead counties movements are being made with a view of establishing Farmers' Institutes. The object is to arouse farmers to a greater interest, sentimentally as well as practically, in the subjects which belong to their calling—of which a practical knowledge of the best and most improved methods is essential to the largest measure of success. The first step proposed is the right one—it begins at the beginning. The subjects taught in public schools are to be considered and an effort made to add to them the study of subjects having a practical bearing on the profession of agriculture. In the county of Wentworth the Inspector of Public Schools has taken steps to secure the co-operation of farmers in so important a matter, and has issued a circular calling a meeting of trustees and all others interested in the subject. At this meeting, to be held in the Court House, Hamilton, on Tuesday, Nov. 18th, the following subjects will be submitted for consideration:

1st.—Irregularity of attendance, and how to remedy it.

2nd.—The introduction of the study of agriculture into our Public Schools.

3rd.—The revision of the list of text-books with a view to the introduction of a suitable work on agriculture.

4th.—The propriety of organizing "Teachers' Clubs" or "Reading Circles" for the systematic study of agriculture.

The Hon. G. W. Ross, Minister of Education, and James Mills, Esq., M.A., President of the Agricultural College, Guelph, have consented to be present.

A Parable of the N.P.

The Welland Tribune publishes the following pertinent parable of the N. P., as applicable to that county. With little change—merely verbal—it fits this riding as well. It is as follows:

1. And, behold, in the sixth year of the N. P., and the third of the reign of Docferguson, its prophet, a Granger from the land of Humberstone (a township in the riding) came to the market at Welland, laden down with the fruit of his toil, even wheat and potatoes.
2. As he journeyed by the way he meditated on the promises made by Docferguson and his forerunner, Chris. Bunting, known also as the Great Promiser.
3. That he should have Canada for a home market, and the prices of his products would be increased manifold, so that he would wax fat and encompass much filthy lucre in the land.
4. Whereat he chuckled and did rejoice greatly.
5. But, lo and behold! when he came unto the market place, although he journeyed far and near and did seek to beguile traders with much cunning words,
6. All the same, he he could only get 68 cents for his wheat, and of his potatoes, lo he did not sell the same at 15 cts. for the bushel.
7. Whereat he gnashed his teeth and did use forbidden speech;
8. And he went to one of the chief men of the tribe of Tories and enquired concerning this thing.
9. And the chief Tory made reply and said: "Verily I say unto you, are not these prices all regulated by supply and demand, and the supply being greater than the demand, therefore are the prices low—even away down."
10. Then the Granger from Humberstone smote upon his breast and spake, saying: "Lo, is thy servant a fool that thou shouldst speak in this manner unto him?
11. "Did not the Grits say the same things aforetime, even at the time of the election?
12. "And didst not thou and all thy tribe, and even Docferguson and Bunting, the Great Promiser, declare that they lied and the truth was not in them,
13. "And that verily they were as flies on the wheel?
14. "And now thou tell'st me those self-same things as of verity, and thus confirm ye the sayings of the Grits, in whom ye declared the truth dwelt not."
15. And the horny-handed son of toil sware even yet again and refused to be comforted, for he saw it was a true saying that the N. P. was a fraud.
16. And he departed unto his own house, heavy of heart but light of pocket, vowing that he would take no more stock in the sayings of Docferguson and his runners.
17. For, lo! had they not been tried and found wanting?

Scalette Mantles is the order of the day, at Turnbull's; quality and price please all who inspect.

Editorial Notes.

Hon. A. Mackenzie, M. P., has gone to New York to consult eminent medical men in regard to the throat affection from which he suffers.

Sir Richard Cartwright, in the course of a week or ten days, will commence a tour of his constituency speaking, in each municipality of the riding.

The Central Association of Congregational Ministers and Churches, at a recent meeting, declared against State aid to denominational colleges and in favor of the Scott Act.

When the farmer is returning thanks for the bountiful harvest, he will be a little more than human if he can evoke a grain of gratitude for the high prices the N. P. has brought him—wheat seventy cents a bushel.

The Tory party in Quebec is tottering and crumbling with its own rottenness. The victory implied in the return of the Liberal member for Megantic, by a majority of more than three times as large as at the last election, is a "sign of the times."

The Scott Act was carried on Thursday last in the county of Renfrew by over five hundred majority, with several places to hear from. This makes the fifth county out of six in which the Scott Act has been voted on within a fortnight, with the result of adopting it.

In the House of Lords on Friday last, the Franchise bill was read a second time by a majority of 142. This is the second time the bill has reached this stage. We shall see if the Lords have the temerity, the second time to throw it out, and thus baulk the popular will and obstruct a great reform.

Argument in the East Simcoe election case was heard before the court of Appeal on Friday. At the first hearing Chancellor Boyd and Chief Justice Cameron disagreed, the former being in favour of dismissing the petition, and the latter of declaring the election void. Judgment was reserved. The East Middlesex case was also argued on Tuesday, and

Of the 1,239 millions of pounds sterling, representing the national income of Great Britian, the aristocracy only contribute 37 millions. Is it not supremely absurd that this privileged class, having comparatively so little at stake financially in the country, should be honored with an irresponsible chamber—the House of Lords—of some seven hundred members?

The House of Commons, on Monday, rejected by a vote of 194 to 109 an amendment to the Franchise Bill introduced by a Tory, to prevent the bill going into operation till a scheme of redistribution had been adopted.

On the question of the admission of Jamaica to Canada, Sir John has received the snub direct—a dose of Jamaica ginger—"hot i' the mouth," too. The Council of that Island have pronounced against the wild scheme; only Mr. Solomon, who in this matter has done little credit to his illustrious Scriptural namesake, voting for it.

Here is a practical proof of the wisdom and economy of the administration of Ontario affairs by Mr. Mowat. During his twelve years' of his lease of power, though the population of this Province has increased 18½ per cent., the annual expenditure has only increased $87,000. What intelligent citizen will call for the return to power of the Tory party, which in Quebec has plunged that Province twenty million dollars in debt and reduced her to the verge of bankruptcy?

The United States authorities have begun, and not a day to soon, a crusade against Mormonism's peculiar feature, polygamy. The first trial resulting from the attempt to enforce the law was that of the son of "Bishop" Clawson. The first jury was so intimidated that it disagreed, but a second jury found a verdict of guilty. The verdict has struck terror to the hearts of the men of many wives. It is to be hoped the crusade will by pushed till this social leprosy that disgraces American civilization shall have been swept away.

Mr. James Miller, who lately represented Manitoba in the attempt of that Province to get some of Ontario's territory, appears, suggests the Hamilton Times, to have lost popularity in Winnipeg. A prisoner was flogged for breaking jail, and the Winnipeggers blamed Attorney-General Miller for what they regarded as an inhuman punishment. They hung and burned his effigy and then looked for him, but fortunately for all concerned Mr. Miller was not to be found. They seem to be an excitable race up north. The effect of the whiskey is too sudden in the dry, bracing atmosphere.

While the cotton mills of protected Canada and the United States have been standing idle or running on short time, free trade England has been demanding more cotton to keep hers going. This year England imported from the United States, 160,574 bales of raw cotton, more than in 1883. The Hamilton Times thus explains the matter:—England is the only country that can, at the present time, find a market for the product of her mills, because she is the only country that will take other commodities in payment without obstructing the importation by senseless taxes.

The half-yearly meeting of the Grand Trunk Railway Company was held in London on Thursday. The report showed that the net revenue balance for the year is £114,192, and that after the Great Western's proportion of £34,258 was deducted there was £79,394 for division among the Grand Trunk shareholders. Sir Henry Tyler attributed the unsatisfactory financial showing of the half-year's exhibit principally to the poor harvest and to the sharp competition in through rates for western traffic. A dividend of 4 per cent. on the guaranteed stock and 5 per cent. preference shares was agreed to without discussion. Lord Claude Hamilton gave a brief account of his recent tour over the Grand Trunk lines, and testified to the excellent condition and able management of the road, the credit of which was due to the managers of the road, from the highest to the humblest.

AN AGE CREEPS ON APACE, the various functions of the body grow weaker in their performance. Old people who suffer from increasing indigestion, torpidity of the liver, and constipation, should give renewed impetus to the action of the stomach, bile-secreting organ and bowels, with Northrop & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery and Dyspeptic Cure, from which aid is never sought in vain. It works wonders as a blood purifier.

Sell and Pay Up.

The message we have to convey may be put in these words, "Sell and pay up." Don't sell if you do not require to, and if you do not want to; but pay up your accounts anyway, or rather your debts. This notion of leaving accounts unpaid is ridiculous and old-fashioned. It should be obsolete. Non-payment of these debt at the time when they ought to be paid, and at the time, too, when everybody expects them to be paid, has a depressing and deadening effect on general business, and increases considerably the costs and worries of trade. It is the bounden duty of every man who owes two dollars, or ten dollars, or one hundred dollars to the merchant to go and pay it now, and not put it off till winter or spring. Bills due the Harnessmaker should be paid now; and this is to be taken as a general intimation or command to all concerned to govern themselves accordingly, and promptly pay up.

It devolves upon the farmers at this particular season to set the money ball rolling. They have their harvest to realize upon, and fortunately it is a large harvest. Prices for wheat are low, too low, but for other farm produce fair figures are ruling. Barley is not so bad, compared with former years, except those abnormally high; oats and peas are good; hay, pork, beef live stock, butter, eggs, and a good many other things command good prices, and on the whole the farmer has had a good year. Farmers, then, should realise upon their surplus and pay their debts now. Let every farmer interested act upon this and come and get their Robes, Horse Blankets and Harness, of which I have a large and well-assorted stock, which I am determined to sell on a small margin.

NEWS NOTES.

Renfrew county has adopted the Scott Act by a majority of about 600.

The Hon. L. R. Masson was on Friday sworn in as Lieutenant-Governor of the Province of Quebec.

Mr. Gladstone has decided to apply £1,200,000 to increase the navy.

An explosion has occurred in a British coal mine, which sacrificed fifteen lives.

The Grand Trunk engineers and firemen have refused to accept the proposal for the continuance of the reduction in their pay.

Victoria has decided against county gravel roads. The expected expense—equivalent to $8,500 taxation per year—frightened the committee to which the matter was referred.

Religion cannot pass away. The burning of a little straw may hide the stars of the sky, but the stars are there, and will re-appear.

When fortune comes smiling, she often designs the most mischief. When fortune caresses a man too much, she is apt to make a fool of him.

In the House of Commons, Wednesday, Mr. O'Donnell, Home Ruler, was suspended for a week for disregarding the authority of the speaker.

Avoid the harsh, irritating, griping compounds so often sold as purging medicines, and correct the irregularities of the bowels by the use of Ayer's Cathartic Pills, which are mild and gentle, yet through and searching, in their action.

Chinese mobs have been committing fearful outrages on places of Christian worship and persons at Canton and interior points. Several Christian churches have been destroyed and 120 Christian residences, and Christians warned that they must either worship idols or leave.

The Tory papers are rejoicing because they see in a little demonstration of a "rustic burgh" in favor of a protective tariff, that England will soon adopt the principle of protection by high taxes. These journals ought to reflect: With the Canadian farmer selling wheat at 70 cents per bushel, what would be his plight if the British market, the only one requiring our surplus grain, were closed by a tax? The price of wheat would be reduced by the amount, at least, of the tax, which, if no higher than the Canadian impost, would bring down the selling figure of wheat to 55 cents! Protection in Canada is hard enough on the farmer, but if Great Britain adopted the fiscal lunacy also, it would be ruin outright.

Since the N. P. has ceased to be a name to conjure with, and since Ontario won't stand another gerrymander, Sir John is taking time by the forelock, by devising another scheme to keep him in power when the day of reckoning shall come, at another general election. Sir John's visit to England for his health was only a blind—one of his "statesman-like" tricks. His health is as good as usual. His real business referred to the annexation of Jamaica, which he is all the more anxious to add to the Dominion, because it is said Hon. Mr. Solomon, of that island, has promised Sir John the solid vote of the representatives of Jamaica, if the latter will bring it into the Confederation. Annexation, of Jamaica will add immensely to the expense of the Dominion government, but Sir John has shown that he cares little for cost so long as he can carry out his political schemes. The welfare of the country is his last thought. Besides being a political blunder, the annexation of Jamaica is a geographical absurdity. The island is situated fifteen hundred miles from Ottawa, and there are a thousand miles of foreign territory lying between it and the capital.

PETERBOROUGH, Nov. 12, 1884.

Receipts of grain are not large. Prices continue much the same. Wheat is weaker—downward tendency. Fall selling at 74c. to 77c. Spring about 70c. Barley from 59c. to 65c., according to color. Rye, 59c. Peas, 60c. Oats, 32c. On the market:—Saturday's market was a very large one. A large quantity of keg butter was offered and sold, the top price being 20c., which was a decline of one to two cents. About 300 kegs were sold, which would amount to between five and six thousand dollars. A great abundance of poultry was on sale, but was disposed of at about the following prices: Geese, 50c. to 60c.; Ducks, 50c. to 65c.; Turkeys, 50c. to 75c.; chickens 40c. to 50c. In some cases a little more was obtained. Roll and print butter, 20c. to 22c. Eggs sold from 18c. to 20c., with more asked. Dressed hogs, $6.50 to $6 60, few offering. Apples in better demand; sold from 60c. to $1.00 per bag. No change in other commodities.

WHAT TORY RULE HAS DONE.

Is it not a known fact, admitted by our adversaries themselves, that the various Conservative regimes since 1867, after having assumed the control of Quebec when it had not a cent of debt, but, on the contrary, a considerable amount to it credit, plunged it into debt for more than $20,000,000? Is it not a fact that the annual deficits are now of over $500,000, and that they are accumulating with disastrous persistency, forcing the people of the Province to look upon the hideous spectre of direct taxation?—L'Electeur.

HOW HE ESCAPED.

First thief: "You're a lucky dog, I didn't expect to see you out so soon. So the jury didn't convict you?"

Second theif: "No."

"And yet there you stood before them with the stolen money in your pocket. It's lucky they didn't search you."

"They did."

"They did? Then they didn't find it?"

"No. I didn't have it."

"Why, what had you done with it?"

"Paid it to my lawyer."

KING'S EVIL

Was the name formerly given to Scrofula because of a superstition that it could be cured by a king's touch. The world is wiser now, and knows that can only be cured by a thorough purification of the blood. If this is neglected, the disease perpetuates its taint through generation after generation. Among its earlier symptomatic developments are Eczema, Cutaneous Eruptions, Tumors, Boils, Carbuncles, Erysipelas, Purulent Ulcers, Nervous and Physical Collapse, etc. If allowed to continue, Rheumatism, Scrofulous Catarrh, Kidney and Liver Diseases, Tubercular Consumption, and various other dangerous or fatal maladies, are produced by it.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla

Is the only powerful and always reliable blood-purifying medicine. It is so effectual an alterative that it eradicates from the system Hereditary Scrofula, and the kindred poisons of contagious diseases and mercury. At the same time it enriches and vitalizes the blood, restoring healthful action to the vital organs and rejuvenating the entire system. This great

Regenerative Medicine

Is composed of the genuine Honduras Sarsaparilla, with Yellow Dock, Stillingia, the Iodides of Potassium and Iron, and other ingredients of great potency, carefully and scientifically compounded. Its formula is generally known to the medical profession, and the best physicians constantly prescribe AYER'S SARSAPARILLA as an

Absolute Cure

For all diseases caused by the vitiation of the blood. It is concentrated to the highest practicable degree, far beyond any other preparation for which like effects are claimed, and is therefore the cheapest, as well as the best blood purifying medicine, in the world.

LOVE FOR A DAY!

When I went back to the house after those hours of peace and rest, my mind was braced for the day. If I had not seen Mark, I had looked long and lovingly at the blue heaven where he was. I had not spoken to him; but the whisper of the wind, the ripple of the leaves, the song of the birds, all seemed so many messages from him. After ten o'clock I had never another moment to call my own. Then Lady Yorke was in her boudoir, and every morning she had a thousand new wants. It was a puzzle to me how she invented them. There were letters to answer, invitations to send out. She liked to hear me read. Every day brought its papers, periodicals, magazines, new novels, all of which must be read to her. Then we walked or drove. At luncheon Lord Yorke joined us; and then her ladyship rested. We had another drive in the afternoon, dinner at seven, and in the evening Lady Yorke requested me to sing. I liked that time best, for I sang every sweet love-song I knew, and I sang always to Mark. Oh, my love, how I loved you!

Lord Yorke was a kindly, generous man, quite fifteen years older than his beautiful, languid young wife. He worshipped her, and she in her helpless way was fond of him. They were very rich. They owned this fine estate at Westwood, and they had a magnificent house in London and a villa in Florence. That was Lady Yorke's whim. When the winter was too cold and the spring too wet, she went to Mentone, where she could bask in the sunshine the whole day long. They had numerous visitors and friends. It was to fill the interval between the departure of one set of visitors and the coming of the next that I was wanted. Lady Yorke could not endure to be alone: she must be constantly amused. They had no children, and that was the one drawback. I liked Lord Yorke; he was always kind and courteous to me. He was not much interested in politics; the care and well-being of his estate occupied his whole time. He would not have a land-agent or a steward: he did everything himself—kept his accounts, received his rents, saw his tenants, overlooked the home estate. Hardly a weed was pulled up without his orders. He was just as industrious as his young wife was the reverse. We were always excellent friends. At times he asked me to help him, and his thanks always pleased me.

Poor Lady Yorke! Young, beautiful, wealthy, she was yet one of the most miserable and discontented of women. She had not a useful interest in the world. She had servants who waited upon her hand and foot; she had a husband who indulged her and granted every wish that she expressed; she was never called upon to make any exertion either of body or mind. She was never compelled to think; Lord Yorke and Mrs. Masham thought for her. If twenty visitors were coming, it made no difference to her. Before I had been many days there, I had read her character accurately. She was ill from indolence.

Watching her for a whole day, seeing her study nothing but herself, her wants, her wishes, her whims and caprices, ordering things because she fancied and not because she wanted them, spending money profusely without even looking at what was purchased—seeing her send away the most delicate of fruits, the most recherche of dishes, the most costly of wines, under some pretext or other too absurd to mention—I thought of the many poor women dying from want of food, of the many children perishing from hunger, and have wondered. She did not seem to know anything of the hard side of life. She ate from silver plate; she drank from the rarest of Bohemian glass; tea was served to her in the finest of Dresden china. She wore the finest of linen, of lace, silk, velvet, and satin; she had jewels of priceless value; in all her life she had never wished for one thing that had not been granted to her. She perhaps had read the words "hunger," "cold," "privation," "starvation," but she did not understand their meaning. How could she when she had never felt either cold nor hunger in her life? Her life had been a Sybarite life of pleasure, and the result was that beyond herself she had not a care or thought in the world. It seemed to me that if I could awaken this sleeping soul, I should not have lived in vain.

I remember the first time that she seemed to wake to a consciousness of suffering. She had never been ill herself, and she had never seen any one in pain. We were crossing the park, when suddenly above our heads we heard the discordant cry of birds. Suddenly a little bird fell fluttering and dying at our feet. It had been attacked and wounded by some bird larger than itself. I shall never forget the look in the dark eyes, the faint fluttering of the little wings ere it died. I had raised it in my hand, and it had died there.

"Poor little thing," I said. "It has had a short life but a merry one, I hope, in those great green boughs."

"Is it really dead?" Lady Yorke asked, drawing near with a pale face. "I do not think I have ever seen anything dead."

"Is that true, Lady Yorke?" I asked, looking at her in wonder.

"Yes, quite true."

"Have you ever wondered what death is like?" I inquired.

"I do not think so. I have never thought of death at all."

"Have you never lost any friends?" I asked again. "Has no one whom you loved died?"

"No—no one whom I loved. People I have known have died; but then they always seemed to me quite apart from the rest of us."

I looked in wonder at the beautiful face.

"Have you ever thought that you yourself must die?"

"I suppose I shall die sometime," she replied; "but I am young now—I need not begin to think about it yet."

"Have you ever heard of young people dying, Lady Yorke?" I asked.

"Yes; but that does not often happen, I should think. Age and death naturally go together."

"My Mark was young," I said, "and strong; he never had a day's illness, and he died."

"Where did he die?" asked Lady Yorke; and suddenly I remembered that I did not know. That which seemed so certain to me might be very uncertain to others. "I try never to think of such disagreeable things," continued Lady Yorke. "It does no good, and makes one's life miserable."

"No life can be really happy that is not ruled by such thoughts," I replied. "We ought to live for the next world, and not for this."

"Madame de Belfand said you were very serious. For my part I could not give my mind to such ideas. The very sight of that dead bird has made me feel ill and miserable."

"Yet everything living in this world has to die sooner or later," I said.

She made no remark, but I saw that the indolent, selfish soul was roused from its long sleep. The first thought of death and pain had come to her, never to be forgotten.

CHAPTER VI.

One morning, when several visitors were at Westwood, the conversation turned upon the Indian famine. We were all seated at luncheon. Some of the gentlemen remarked what a charitable country ours was—what large sums of money were forthcoming when any great disaster occurred.

Lord Yorke agreed.

"But," he said, "I do not think we realize what the word 'famine' means. In our happy land we have not seen women and children dying by the roadside, plucking the dry grass and the grass in the pangs of hunger."

"I have seen something like it," said Mr. Devine. "I was in Ireland during the 'potato famine,' and I saw there scenes that will haunt me to my dying day—gaunt, hungry men, in whose eyes was a wolfish gleam, pale, patient women, dying without complaint, children like spectres, with famine written in their faces. I have seen mother and children lying dead together—and it takes a long time for hunger to kill."

"Did you really witness all this?" asked Lady Yorke.

"I did indeed," replied Mr. Devine.

"I did not know," said Lady Yorke, with a slight shudder, "that people ever died of hunger. I do not suppose that I quite understood the meaning of the word 'famine.'"

"Your life has been a happy one, Louise," said Lord Yorke. "You have seen only the rose-colored side of existence."

"That must be true," she allowed more gravely than I had expected.

The next morning I had to drive with Lady Yorke to Woodheaton; she wanted to make some purchases. The morning was lovely, but her mind was evidently still disturbed by the conversation of the previous day.

"Miss Chester," she said suddenly, "have you ever seen people who were really ill from want of food?"

"Yes, very often, when I was at home with my mother. She, out of her limited means, made a point of relieving some poor person or other every day."

"And I," said Lady York, "have never, so far as I remember, relieved a poor person in my life. We send money to various charities; but I have never personally given any away. I have seen so few poor people."

I saw that her mind was awakened. We talked on the same subject during the whole of our drive. I told her what I had seen amongst the poor at Gracedieu—their patience, their industry, the pathos and beauty of their lives.

"The true heroes and heroines of this world," I said, "are the uncomplaining poor."

"Heroes and heroines!" she repeated. "Why, Miss Chester, what can there be heroic in poverty?"

"Poverty bravely borne is true heroism," I said. "It is easy to be happy and contented when everything goes well, when one has plenty of money, plenty of food, and everything one can desire. What can be more heroic than the endurance of hunger and cold without complaint? I have read of what the world calls heroines—Joan of Arc, who won a throne for her king, Charlotte Corday, who slew the enemy of France; but, to my way of thinking, the real heroine is the wife and mother whose life is one continual struggle, who denies herself that her husband and children may have enough, who works without ceasing, never complains, comforts her husband, brings up her children well, and practices heroic virtues unseen by any one, unknown even to herself. That woman is one of Heaven's own heroines."

During their long absence abroad, Lady Yorke had pleasures and sorrows. She lost much of her indolence. She was no longer content to spend the greater part of the day on a couch. She thought more of the widow and orphan in their desolation, of the sick and ailing who wanted help, of the hungry who wanted food.

So life passed on at Westwood, and no great change came until the spring. To me every birthday, every Christmas day, were as milestones on the way to Heaven. As I passed each, I was nearer to Mark.

Again the lilacs were in bloom. They were not so plentiful or so beautiful at Westwood as at Gracedieu, but the sight and the fragrance of them brought back forcibly the remembrance of my lover to me. No words can tell the sharp pain that pierced my heart when I saw the nodding plumes. Lady Yorke was fond of lilacs. While they lasted she would have them in the rooms. I never told her what the sight of them cost me.

The keeper of the west lodge having found a better situation, Mrs. Clinton, with her little daughter, through Lord Yorke's kindness, went to live there. By Lady Yorke's wish I went to visit them almost every day. The lilacs grew all round the west lodge—tall, fine trees, with a wealth of fragrant blossoms. Mrs. Clinton, who could never do enough for me, had gathered some of the finest sprays; and one morning, when I went to see her, she held the branches of lilac-bloom close to my face.

"See, miss," she said, "how fresh they are!"

If I had seen some one risen from the dead, I could not have grown more sick at heart. I went home sad and weary. Here was the world waking up again to the beauty and glory of spring, and my heart was sinking, my hope was death. My lover, to whom my love, my troth, my faith was plighted, was dead. What could spring, sunshine, or bloom of flowers say to me? As I walked home and saw the yellow primroses shining like stars in the grass, and the buds bursting into leaf, I sobbed aloud. I felt so tired of waiting. If some angel hand would but draw me up to Heaven and place me by Mark's side. Oh, my love, how I loved you! All the beauty of earth, the fairness of spring, the brightness of life, were as naught to me, because you were no longer with me!

There were times like these when my courage failed me, when my heart ached, and I could only weep and call on one who would hear me never more. It was the sweet odor of the fresh lilacs that had brought Mark so vividly back to me. I could see his face, I could hear his voice, his warm, strong hand seemed to clasp mine—and he was dead!

As I entered the house I met Lady Yorke in the hall.

"Will you come to the library, Miss Chester?" she said. "I have some letters I must answer, and some for you to write."

When we were seated there, and she had made those inquiries about the sick child which she never omitted, she showed me a bundle of letters.

"We shall have a large party here soon," she said. "This morning I had a letter from Lord Severne. We met him and his wife last year in Italy, and I made him promise that ours should be the first house in England that they would visit. Lord Severne is a great favorite of mine. You have heard of the Severnes of Mount Severne?"

"No," I replied. The name was quite strange to me.

It was a very old title, Lady Yorke told me, but the present possessor had come quite unexpectedly into it.

"I must say," continued her ladyship, "that I have been a most indifferent member of society. No one has ever seemed to interest me; but I certainly did like Lord Severne. He is very handsome, but terribly melancholy.—He never smiles like any one else."

Finding that it pleased Lady Yorke to speak of her friends, I listened with interest. I banished the lilacs and Mark from my mind; they were of time past.

"We met the Severnes in Florence," Lady Yorke went on, "and both my husband and myself liked Lord Severne very much; but we were not so agreeably impressed with his wife. We were very intimate with them, and went out with them almost every day. Lady Severne is quite unlike her husband. He is earnest, grave, with a strange veil of melancholy always over him; she is the most animated, the gayest and most brilliant woman I have ever met. She tired me in an hour, and I am sure she tired her husband too. He liked to talk quietly with me. He is the only man," she continued, "who has ever vaguely roused my curiosity."

"Why?" I asked.

"Because he appears too good a man to have done any great wrong, and yet he looks like a man with some heavy burden on his mind. I am sure you will like him, Miss Chester, but I am not sure whether you will like his wife. She has such a strange name too."

"What is it?" I asked. I had never heard Lady Yorke say so much about any living creature.

"Laurine," she replied. "Now can you fancy any sensible woman with a name like that?"

"Her name is her misfortune, not her fault," I said. "I like it, Lady Yorke. It is fanciful and uncommon."

"It is like herself," declared her ladyship. "Well, Miss Chester, we must have a party to meet them. Lord Severne himself does not care about society, but Lady Severne lives for it only. We must have plenty of visitors, and plenty of gaiety to amuse her."

"She is a troublesome visitor," I said, with a laugh.

"Yes, but she is a power in herself. She is one of those women who sweep all before them. Lord Yorke could only compare her to a whirlwind. Yet I cannot imagine how she has persuaded her husband to return to England. They will be here next Tuesday, so we must hasten to send out the invitations."

And as I wrote them I wondered much what Lady Severne could be like. When we were in Florence, she said nothing would induce her to live in this climate. We will ask Lady Mary Avon and her brother Sir Charles to meet them. Lady Severne is more than a match in conversation for any six gentlemen at once."

"Is she a flirt?" I asked.

"To tell you the truth, Miss Chester, I could never make out exactly what she was. I only know that we liked her husband, and for his sake we endured her, as we shall endure her again."

Lady Yorke was silent and thoughtful during the rest of the day, but in the evening she relapsed into the old lackadaisical mood.

A few days afterwards I asked her if she would go to Woodheaton again, and, having no other engagement, she consented. Just what I longed for happened. When we reached the shop of the principal stationer, the wife of the Rector was there. She knew Lady Yorke in a distant fashion.

Mrs. Durrant was an active, energetic woman, whose life was filled with good deeds, the very reverse of beautiful, luxury-loving Lady Yorke. To my great delight, she began to talk to Lady Yorke about the badness of the times, the want of work, the poverty of the people. I shall never forget Mrs. Durrant's face when Lady Yorke languidly took out her well-filled purse.

"Would money be of any use?" she asked.

"Heaven bless me!" cried the Rector's wife, startled out of all propriety.—"Why, Lady Yorke, it is only money that we want. Money will purchase food, coal, clothes, fuel, and everything else."

I heard the rustle of bank notes, and Lady Yorke said gently:

"Will you distribute this amongst your poor?"

The eyes of the Rector's wife filled with tears. She saw in the gift relief for many from utter misery.

"If you would see poverty in all its desolation, Lady Yorke," she said, earnestly, "you should go to a place that is called Sandy Fields."

After the Rector's wife had departed, I turned to Lady Yorke.

"Will you go?" I asked her.

"I do not know, Miss Chester," she said, drawing her rich silks and laces tightly around her. "I have never seen anything of the kind."

"When you die," I remarked, "you will like to have some good deed to remember. You will like to think then that you have lessened the burden of one human heart."

"You frighten me," she said. "Yes, I will go."

Half an hour afterwards fashionable, self-indulgent Lady Yorke stood in the poorest cottage in Sandy Fields, looking round her in horror and dismay. Only a starving woman and a starving child were there; there was no fire, no food, no table, no chair, no bed. It was a most hopeless, helpless case.

"A contrast to Westwood," I whispered to her.

At first the woman was sullen and would not speak—her misery was too great. Then she cried out:

"No, you can do nothing for me. My husband died six weeks ago; and this is all I have in the world. Now she is dying. Heaven itself cannot help me." She looked at Lady Yorke. "You mean well," she said, "but the money that bought that silk gown would have kept my husband alive. He died hungry. Do you think I shall ever forget that? He moaned all night before he died from hunger—not pain, but hunger. I loved him with all my heart, and I had to sit and listen until I could have rushed out of the house to slay and rob the first person I met. He died hungry, while in your house good food is wasted. Ah, my lady, your dogs and horses are better off than we are!"

I saw Lady Yorke's face grow very pale, and her eyes sought mine with a frightened look.

"He moaned all night," continued the woman, "and I had nothing to give him but water. He was not one to complain, but, when death came on him in the morning, he said to me, 'Ah, lassie, the rich have it in this world; we shall have it in the next!' I went out and sold the last thing that belonged to me—my wedding-ring—that morning, and I bought tea and bread. 'I have gone past it,' he said. 'It is all over, lassie. It has come too late.' Seven years ago, when we were married, he was tall and straight and handsome. He took me to a pretty home, and he worked hard for me; but trouble came, and he died hungry. My poor lad! My poor lad!"

I knew that in her heart Lady Yorke was thinking of the dainties that, sent away in capricious discontent, would have saved this poor man's life.

"Annie is dying," the woman went on, in the same hopeless, helpless voice, with a wild gleam in her eyes. "A few weeks ago good food might have saved her; now it is too late. Last night I went everywhere to get one penny to buy her an orange with. She had been craving all day for an orange, and every time she fell asleep she dreamt that she held the orange in her hand, and that it fell to the ground. I would have done anything for one penny, but I could not get it."

"I am very sorry," said Lady Yorke. "If I had known——"

"No one knows!" cried the poor woman. "We work and toil, we suffer and die, and no one knows—only Heaven. Heaven counts our miseries and pains, and will change them into blessings. Annie will be in Heaven soon, and there will be no more hunger or cold for her."

For the first time I saw tears in Lady Yorke's eyes.

"Would you like very much to keep Annie with you?" she asked; and I hardly knew her voice. It had lost its langlor, and was clear and sweet.

"Would I? Ah, my lady, Annie is the very heart that beats in my breast!" she cried. "When she is gone, all is gone. I shall not try to live; I shall lie down by her side and die."

VARIETIES.

Italian music is fine because it is ground so much on the streets.

Down's Elixir will cure any cough or cold, no matter how long standing. 44-5t

"Save me from my friends!" is the plaintive cry of the oyster.

National Pills is the favorite purgative and anti-bilious medicine, they are mild and thorough. 44-5t.

Something of an anomaly—in order to burn a house down it must be burned up.

Worms often destroy children, but Freeman's Worm Powders destroy worms, and expel them from the system. 44-5t.

Many persons consider themselves friendly when they are only officious.

To remove dandruff, cleanse the scalp with Prof. Low's Magic Sulphur Soap. A delightful medicated soap for the toilet. 44-5t

It is the best proof of the virtues of a family circle to see a happy fireside.

A crying evil. Children are often fretful and ill when worms is the cause. Dr. Low's Worm Syrup safely expels all worms. 44-5t

Why is the letter R like the face of Hamlet's father? Because it's more in sorrow than in anger.

Do not suppose that because it is recommended for animals that Arnica & Oil Liniment is an offensive preparation. It will not stain clothing or the fairest skin. 44-5t

"Don't lie much on the left side," says the writer. No; if you must lie, do it on the winning side.

A single trial of Dr Henry Baxter's Mandrake Bitters will convince any one troubled with costiveness, torpid liver or any kindred diseases of their curative properties. They only cost 25 cents per bottle. 44-5t.

Callow youth (before looking-glass, stroking chin): "Sis, I think I must get me a razor." Sister: "Do, Bob; a beard-raiser."

☞ In the Diamond Dyes more coloring is given than in any known Dyes, and they give faster and more brilliant colors. 10c. at all druggists. Wells, Richardson & Co., Burlington, Vt. Sample Card, 32 colors, and book of directions for 2c. stamp.

What did the donkey do when he first heard of the doctrine of evolution? He brayed till he became a little ho(a)rse.

For Bronchial and Throat Affection's Allen's Lung Balsm is unequalled. See adv.

"Pa, I want to go whaling." "All right my son." and in a few minutes he was busy in the woodshed with lots of blubber.

As a purifier, Ayer's Sarsaparilla acts directly and promptly. A single bottle will prove its merits. Many thousands of people are yearly saved from dangerous fevers by the exercise of a little timely care in properly cleansing the system by the use of this remedy.

Work of hand or head is not an end in itself, but a means to the development, progress and happiness of man.

—The reason why "Nonsuch Washing Compound" should be used in preference to all other washing preparations. First: It is perfectly harmless. Second; It saves more than half the labour. Third: It is the cheapest in the market. Many more could be given but this should be sufficient. For sale by all grocers. 49-52t

He who is truly in peace never suspects others. But he who is ill all ease and discontent, is disturbed by various suspicions.

Awful!—A society journal informs us that "when a gentleman and lady are walking up the street, the lady should walk inside the gentleman.

A Wise Conclusion.

If you have vainly tried many remedies for rheumatism, it will be a wise conclusion to try Hagyard's Yellow Oil. It cures all painful diseases when other medicines fail. 46-2t

The British National Debt, funded and unfunded, amounted on March 31st, 1883, to £756,376,819.

A thing of beauty may be a joy forever. But no man thinks so when he sees his wife fish the photograph of a beautiful actress out of his inside pocket.

Sure to Conquer.

The most troublesome cough is sure to yield if timely treated with Hagyard's Pectoral Balsam. Pleasant to take and safe for young or old. 46-2t

Forty years ago there was not a daily newspaper in the English provinces, and now there are over one hundred.

Smart looking young man to millionaire: "Good-morning, sir; do you wish to hire a coachman?" Millionaire: "No, sir; my daughter is already engaged."

A Great Mistake.

It is a great mistake to suppose that dyspepsia can't be cured, but must be endured, and life made gloomy and miserable thereby. Alexander Burns, of Cobourg, was cured after suffering fifteen years. Burdock Blood Bitters cured him. 46-2t

The non-exemption agitation has struck St. Thomas. At a meeting of No 1 Committee last evening, the following resolution was carried: "That a by-law be prepared and submitted to the council at its next session, making all property now exempt liable for taxation as other property."

Seriously Ill.

A person suffering with pain and heat over the small of the back, with a weak, weary feeling and frequent headaches, is seriously ill and should look out for kidney disease. Burdock Blood Bitters regulate the kidneys, blood and liver, as well as the stomach and bowels. 46-2t

Resolve not to be poor. Whatever you have, spend less. Poverty is a great enemy to human happiness. It certainly destroys liberty, and it makes some virtues impracticable and others extremely difficult.

Wheeler's Tissue Phosphates.

For one victim of Zymotic disease a holocaust perish from failure of their digestive processes. For one infant or adult in the last sleep from the germs of fever poison a thousand have wasted away from improper food and imperfect digestion The central idea in devising Wheeler's Phosphates and Calimya was to secure digestion and assimilation by furnishing those elements of brain and nerve nutrition, without which nervous energy is impossible, in an easily assimilable form, when the digestive apparatus is too feeble to eliminate them from food.

The same corrupt dispositions which incline men to the sinful ways of getting, will incline them to like sinful ways of spending.

HOW HE ESCAPED.

First thief: "What's the lady say? Didn't she see you put no stuff for the jury to convict you?"

Second thief: "No."

"And yet there you stood before them with the stolen money in your pocket. It's lucky they didn't search you."

"They did."

"They did? Then they didn't find it?"

"No. I didn't have it."

"Why, what had you done with it?"

"Paid it to my lawyer."

An Enterprising, Reliable House.

Taylor & McDonald can always be relied upon, not only to carry in stock the best of everything, but to secure the agency for such articles as have well known merit, and are popular with the people, thereby sustaining the reputation of being always enterprising, and ever reliable. Having secured the agency for the celebrated Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, will sell it on a positive guarantee. It will surely cure any and every affection of Throat, Lungs, and Chest, and to show our confidence, we invite you to call and get a trial bottle free.

A CAPITAL SCHEME.

"What do you do when people come in and bore you?" a warm personal friend asked of a merchant.

"When they stay too long the office boy, who is very bright and knows just when to interfere, tells me that a gentleman is in the counting-room waiting to see me on important business."

"Ha! ha! That is a capital way to get rid of bores who don't know —"

Just then the boy opened the door and sang out.

An Answer Wanted.

Can any one bring us a case of Kidney or Liver Complaint that Electric Bitters will not speedily cure? We say they can not, as thousands of cases already permanently cured and who are daily recommending Electric Bitters, will prove. Bright's Disease, Diabetes, Weak Back, or any urinary complaint quickly cured. They purify the blood, regulate the bowels, and act directly on the diseased parts. Every bottle guaranteed. For sale at 50 cents a bottle by Taylor & McDonald.

WHAT TORY RULE HAS DONE.

Is it not a known fact, admitted by our adversaries themselves, that the various Conservative regimes since 1867, after having assumed the control of Quebec when it had not a cent of debt, but, on the contrary, a considerable amount to it credit, plunged it into debt for more than $20,000,000? Is it not a fact that the annual deficits are now of over $500,000, and that they are accumulating with disastrous persistency, forcing the people of the Province to look upon the hideous spectre of direct taxation?—L'Electeur.

What he thought About it.

I am a commission merchant doing business in the West Indies. "I used some of your Putnam's Painless Corn Extractor when in Canada, and think it is the best cure for corns I have ever seen. Please send me a few dozen for friends and customers in South America and the West Indies."

(Signed,) Wm. Gould, N. Y. City.

Thousands of testimonials in addition to the testimony of druggists have been received, and prove Putnam's Painless Corn Extractor to be sure, Pop and Painless corn cure. Sold by country dealers in medicine and druggists everywhere. N. C. Polson & Co., proprietors, Kingston.

UP THE NILE.

The Canadian voyageurs of the Nile expedition complain that the boats furnished them are flimsy affairs, and not at all adapted to the use for which they were constructed. They say it was a great mistake to build them with keels, this fault rendering them unmanageable when they should be under complete control. The troops are loud in their praise of the skill and bravery of the voyageurs, characterising their ascent of the Nile cataracts as mere boys' play. The English troops are advancing all along the Nile.

Do Not Forget It.

Polson's NERVILINE cannot be surpassed by any combination for the relief of pain. The reason is a good one. Nerviline contains the best, most powerful, and the latest discovered remedies. It is a magic pain cure. Rheumatism, stiff neck, cramps, neuralgia, colic, in fact all pain, internal, external, and local, are subdued in a few minutes. Go at once to any drug store and get a trial bottle. It will only cost you 10 cents, and you can at a small cost test the great pain cure, Polson's Nerviline. Large bottles only 25 cents.

A HEARTY FARMER.

A remarkable feat of physical strength was performed recently by Mr. John Blue, a pioneer farmer of Aldborough township. Mr. Blue is the oldest farmer in Elgin county, being in his 90th year. A short time ago he went into the field after 1 o'clock in the afternoon, and bound 64 sheaves of wheat in a short time. The work did not fatigue him to any extent. He enjoys the best of health and is in full possession of his faculties. He is the father of Mr. Archibald Blue, of the Bureau of Statistics Ontario.

Scott's Emulsion of Pure

COD LIVER OIL, WITH HYPOPHOSPHITES,

Is very Palatable and Agrees with the Stomach.

Dr. J. WOBRING, of Newark, Ohio, says: "I have used Scott's Emulsion in comparison with the plain oil and acid emulsions and find it to agree much better with the stomach, and give better results in the diseases in which Cod Liver Oil is useful."

BEARS IN THE DEAD-FALL.

The Durham Review says:—"Mr. Robert Cooper, who lives near Eugenia, set up a dead-fall early this fall, and since that time he has succeeded in capturing four black bears, which were foolish enough to investigate the mysteries of the rude but "sartin-death bar trap." Bears seem to be more numerous this season than for many years past.

Bucklen's Arnica Salve.

THE BEST salve in the world for Cuts, Bruises, Sores, Ulcers, Salt Rheum, Fever Sores, Tetter Chapped Hands Chilblains, Corns, and all skin Eruptions, and Positively cures Piles. It is guaranteed to give perfect satisfaction, or money refunded. Price 25 cents per box. For sale by Taylor & McDonald. 44 tf

SCHOONER SUNK.

During the storm last night the schooner A. M. Foster, of Brighton, sank beside the pier at Cobourg. The Government will require to spend another hundred or two hundred thousand dollars before that is made a harbor of refuge.

A Valuable Patent.

The most valuable discovery patented in modern times is that of the best blood purifier and liver and kidney regulator known. We refer to Burdock Blood Bitters, which is making so many wonderful cures and bringing the blessed boon of health to so many homes. 46-2t

NORTH-WEST COAL OIL.

The Calgary Herald says that Messrs. McVittie and Tueller have just returned from the vicinity of the Red Deer, bringing with them specimens of clay strongly impregnated with coal oil. They think they have struck the right thing this time.

The Weak and the Impure.

The merry little mountain brook, as it lightly dances over the rocks and sparkles in the sunshine on its way down to the river, is pure and clean. It is active; therefore, it is healthy. It is vigorous; therefore, it resists impurity.

But the sluggish pool, where the current is not strong enough to keep the water in motion, is stagnant and foul. Dirt and rubbish are thrown into it, and stay there. Impurities and vile odors make it a breeder of disease and an object to be avoided.

When the blood is strong and rich and red, and vigorously courses its accustomed rounds through arteries and veins, the system is hearty and healthy.

When the blood is thin and poor and weak, impurities and deficiencies creep into it, and it has no strength to cast them out. Then the system runs down.

Shaker Blood Syrup purifies and enriches the Blood; curing Scrofula, Cancer, Rheumatism, Catarrh, Ulcers and Skin and Blood diseases of every description.

St. Andrew's.

The ladies of St. Andrew's celebrated Thanksgiving night by holding a very successful one of the series of entertainments given under their auspices. There was a good attendance and a very pleasing programme, contributed by Miss Freen, Whitby, Misses Wells, Houston, Clarke and Logan, town, and Messrs. Gallelly, Clegg and Dr. Clarke. The presiding genius, to whom much of the success of the occasion is due, was Mr. J. D. Tully.

Stopped in Time.

On Monday morning a Peterborough hotel keeper received a telegram stating that the son of a Norwood gentleman had left, taking with him two spans of horses, and requesting that both be detained. The matter was given into the hands of the Chief of Police, who found the young man, whose mental condition is impaired, placing the horses on a car, to be shipped to Toronto, and he returned the unfortunate young man and the horses to the father and owner. The other team was taken in the direction of Cobourg by a person whose knowledge of the circumstances may make him pay dearly for his unwarrantable conduct.

St. Paul's Church Architecture.

A correspondent, who seems to be considerably puzzled respecting the style of the architecture of St. Paul's (Presbyterian) restored church, writes for information on the subject. For our correspondent's information it may be stated that the style of architecture of St. Paul's is a modified Early English, but, inasmuch as the old portion of the building was not very pure, and as the architects, it is presumed, thought best to conform general style of the addition to that of the existing structure, it cannot be claimed that the restored church is pure Early English. Circumstances involving financial considerations, evidently prevented the architects from carrying out in their entirety their ideas of architectural consistency in planning the additions.

New Quarters.

The Peterborough Y.M.C.A. has secured and now occupies its new quarters—the old Club rooms in the Postoffice Block. Mr. R. A Morrow, in fixing the conditions of the lease, made a substantial reduction in the rental. The new rooms are large with lofty ceilings, well lighted, and in locality and convenience, far superior to the old quarters. That they are better appreciated by the public is shown by the increased attendance at the meetings. The rooms consist of a large auditorium, an ample reading room, and a cosy apartment, with an outlook on two streets, for a parlour for members. Everybody -young men especially—is invited to visit and enjoy the privileges of the new premises. In leaving the old quarters the Association gratefully remembers the liberality of Mr. Geo. A. Cox, who has given the rooms three years rent free.

Cheap the Order of the Day.

Fair, Van Every, & Co. having stocked every department of their large premises to the ceiling, with choice, seasonable goods, so as every shelf contains a bargain, and we claim their all-wool Seamless Hosiery will eclipse any placarded at 25 cents.

Generous Gifts.

The managers of Hazel Brae Home are grateful for the gift of a cow by Dr. Kincaid, and donations of fruit by Mrs. Capt. Wallis, vegetables by Mrs. Payne, parcel of clothing by Mrs. Hamilton, parcel of clothing by Miss Gamble, and parcel of hats by Miss Semple.

Hazel Brae Home.

The treasury of the Hazel Brae branch of the Dr. Barnardo Homes, is richer by $26 as the result of the collection on the occasion of Rev. Mr. Tovell's address to the Orange Association on Sunday, Nov. 2nd.

Dufferin Literary Club.

The regular session of the Dufferin Literary Club was held on Friday evening. After hearing the arguments on the subject of a counsel being justified in defending a prisoner, whom he knows to be guilty of a crime, and deciding in the affirmative, the society resolved itself into a mock parliament. Mr. Horning was nominated prime minister, and Mr. Long, leader of the party sitting in the cold shades of opposition.

Drumming Up Trade.

On Saturday Messrs. H. Levi & Son, of the Red Store, literally illustrated the expression, "drumming up business." A van containing the Fire Brigade Band was placarded with the announcement of $20,000 worth of goods to be sacrificed rather than be removed. The band was driven through the principal streets playing the while their choicest airs. It was Levi the dry goods man, not Levy the cornetist that inspired the music.

New Votes.

His honour Judge Dennistoun held court for the revision of the voters' list on Saturday morning in the council Chamber. The following names were inserted:—First ward, Michael Calnan, Wm. Buller, James Coughlin and M. O'Donnell. Second ward, W. H. Dayman. Third ward, R. Easton, Henry Snider, A. D. Browne and J. H. Burnham. Fourth ward, W. H. Coulter—in all ten names. One appeal was dismissed, the party claiming insertion not having got possession before the time prescribed by law—June 30th—and one appeal dismissed, no person appearing. The time of the sitting of the court was very brief, no opposition in any case having been made.

Thanksgiving Day.

Thursday last, Thanksgiving Day, was duly and devoutly observed in Peterborough. Business was practically suspended, and there were special services in all the churches. Three services in St. John's were at 8 a.m., 11 a.m. (at which the Rector, Rev. J. W. B. Beck preached the sermon, from St. Luke xii., 15,) and at 7.30. At the Baptist Church the services were conducted by Rev. Messrs. Torrance and Munro, the latter preaching the sermon. In St. Andrew's Church Rev. Mr. Bell, pastor, conducted services at 3.30 p.m. In St. Peter's Cathedral there was mass at 6 a.m. and 8 a.m. In the Charlotte-street Methodist Church an union service was held in the morning, when Rev. Mr. Manning, pastor, preached the sermon, or rather address, on the "Commercial and Spiritual Advancement of Canada." At the service in St. Luke's, Ashburnham, Rev. Weston Jones, of Lindsay, conducted the services and preached the sermon.

The Late Mrs. Adam Gerrie.

The Guelph Mercury of Oct. 22nd, contains the following notice of Mrs. Adam Gerrie, well known in Peterborough, in past years. She was mother of Mrs, J. B. Fowler, of North Monaghan:—

Many old friends in Puslinch and Guelph will regret to learn of the death of Mrs. Adam Gerrie, sr., which took place in the township of Pilkington on Friday last. The deceased had for a long time been a great sufferer from dropsy. About six months ago while on a visit to the house of a friend, Mr. Campbell, near Elora, she was taken very ill and there she remained and died, having received every kindness at Mr. Campbell's house from him as well as from her relatives during her painful illness. She was born in Roxburghshire, Scotland, in 1818, and about fifteen years later emigrated to Canada. She resided for a number of years in the township of Woolwich in Waterloo, where nearly half a century ago she was married to Mr. Gerrie. The deceased was much respected for her kind and benevolent disposition and her many acts of charity. She was always ready to help a neighbor in difficulties or distress, and always willing to give food and shelter to the deserving stranger who came to her door. Of a lively disposition, and gifted with much conversational powers, she was a pleasant and entertaining companion. She leaves behind her a husband one son, Mr. Adam Gerrie, jr., and a daughter, Mrs. Fowler, of Peterboro', who with her deceased sister was well known in Guelph some years ago as accomplished vocalists) to mourn her loss. The funeral took place on Saturday, the remains being taked to Winterbourne cemetery, and was largely attended by old friends and acquaintances.

Dr. Kincaid's Stock Sale.

The fourth annual extensive sale of stock held by Dr. Kincaid, on his North Monaghan Stock Farm, took place on Monday, November 10th, and was in every way a gratifying success. Over one hundred and fifty head of horned stock and some seven or eight horses were disposed of at good figures, the total amount realized being about $5,000. As an evidence of the thrift of the farmers of this county and their keen appreciation of a liberal cash discount, it may be stated that the larger part of the above amount was paid in cash. The largest individual buyer was Mr. George Webber, of Peterborough, whose purchases amounted to $1,400. The attendance was large and representative of the best and most progressive farmers of the county. The bidding was spirited, the prices realized were good and the result of the sale is an ample reward to Dr. Kincaid, who in the midst of busy professional engagements finds time to devote attention to raising superior stock. He has hewn his fine stock farm out of the wilderness—so to speak—and his finding himself well repaid for his outlay is an encouragement to farmers to follow his example in the development of a large and flourishing stock-raising business. The sale was conducted by Mr. Charles Stapleton in a manner that gave the greatest satisfaction to all parties concerned.

Wanted.

Turkeys, Geese, Ducks and Chickens, nicely dressed. Also choice saddles of Venison, Partridges, Pigeons, Quail, Snipe, Plover, Woodcock, Wild Ducks, and fresh Bass. Will buy in small or large quntities for cash.
SMITH'S MARKET,
George Street, Peterborough.

BOYS' and Girls' Knitted Ribbed Hose, strong and good quality, all sizes. Also, a fine variety of Ladies' Black and Colored Cashmere Hose. J. ERSKINE.

English Uppers.

Another lot just received, manufactured by Messrs. Brown & Sons, London, England. For sale only at the wholesale and retail Boot and Shoe Store of R. Stenson & Son. 42-tf.

New Felt Hats.

I. Robinson & Co. are showing a lot of new Felt Hats—Soft and Stiff; 50c. to $1.00, worth $1.00 to $1.50. New and Stylish. Call and see them. 32

Overcoats and Fur Caps.

On the approach of winter, Fair, Van Every & Co., have received a large lot of superior over Coats and Fur Caps, exceedingly cheap. Don't fail to see them.

Wallace, of Lakefield, has just received a lot of very choice Astrachan and Bocharas fur jackets, beautifully shaped and well made. Also, ladies and gents' fur caps and muffs. Extra fine Japanese Robes, all to be sold at very close prices. 44-3t.

Thanks.

At a meeting of the Orange Association and True Blues, a cordial vote of thanks was passed to Rev. I. Tovell for his able address given the association in the George street church on Sunday, Nov. 2nd, and also to the choir for their services, and to the trustees of the church.

New Organ Ordered.

The contract has been entered into with Messrs. Warren Bros., Toronto, for the new organ for St. Paul's Presbyterian Church. The price is $3000. So active have the ladies of the aid society been in securing funds, that the amount necessary for the payment of the organ will be forthcoming by the date of its completion.

The Talmage Intellectual Treat.

"Big Blunders" will all make who fail to purchase a ticket for the lecture by Rev. T. DeWitt Talmage, to take place in the Opera House on Wednesday evening, November 19th, on the subject of "Big Blunders." Dont let the date escape you, nor the fact that you will get your seat reserved at Hartley's music store.

A Call Extended.

The Quarterly Official Board of the Charlotte Street Methodist Church, at a meeting held on Tuesday evening, the 11th inst., unanimously extended an invitation to the Rev. F. H. Wallace, of Cobourg, to the pastorate of the church, at the termination of Rev. Mr. Manning's term, June next, subject of course, to the approval of conference.

Educational Sermons.

On Sunday morning and evening, Rev. Dr. Burwash, Professor of Theology in Victoria College, preached in the Charlotte Street Methodist Church, the annual sermons in the interest of the educational funds of the Methodist Church. There were large congregations at both services, and the sermons preached by the reverend gentleman were powerful appeals to the exercise of christian liberality. The world was now intelligent far in advance of any former age, and the demand for highly educated christian ministers was one that the church could not ignore. The collections were liberal.

Ward Entertainment.

An excellent programme was presented at the Murray street Separate School buildings on Thursday. The entertainment was under the auspices of the ladies of No. 2 ward of the congregation of St. Peter's Cathedral. The ladies contributing to the musical enjoyment were Misses. Loch, Lemay, Lynch, McFadden, Dunn and Simons. Messrs. Frank Clarke and D. O'Donoghue also contributed to the musical programme, while Messrs. Simons and Wallbrook gave amusement with the excellently executed Lancashire clog. The programme was well received, and the audience was well pleased with the evening's entertainment.

Presbyterian Church.

Last Sunday morning Rev. J. Fraser Campbell, returned missionary in India, preached to St. Paul's Presbyterian Church congregation in the morning, and in St. Andrew's Church in the evening. Both discourses were full of interest and were highly appreciated by the large congregations that attentively listened to them. On Sunday afternoon Mrs. Campbell addressed the ladies of St. Paul's Woman's Foreign Board of Missions. Her subject was the mission work in the Zenanas of India, in which Mrs Campbell has for many years been heartily and successfully engaged. There was a good attendance and her remarks, descriptive of the condition of the native Indian women and of the work being carried on for their instruction and elevation, were most interesting.

Advertising Pays.

We were reminded by a recent incident that advertising—especially in the EXAMINER—pays. A Kingston reader of the EXAMINER, noticed therein the furniture advertisement of Mr. McFadden, and being in town on other business, called at Mr. McFadden's warerooms. Finding the furniture to correspond with the advertised statements, the result was that the gentleman from Kingston, purchased furniture to the value of $300. The same week on one day, Mr. McFadden had sold five parlor suits. The double lesson is, first advertise in THE EXAMINER, and then be sure your goods will stand the inspection the advertisement invites; then like Mr. McFadden, who attended to both these admonitions, you will make sales, the profit on which will return ten fold the cost of the advertisement.

Another Step Onward.

On Monday night the town of Peterboro' took another "excelsior" step, when the town council voted to light George street with the electric light. The Fire, Water and Gas committee were instructed to sign an agreement with the Electric Light Company, for seven lamps, to be placed on George street at the intersection of McDonnell, Murray, Brock, Hunter, Simcoe, Charlotte and King streets, and one at the corner of Charlotte and Aylmer streets. These lights are to burn till 12 o'clock, midnight, at 25 cents per light. Four on George street however, are to burn till day-light, at 25 cents each additional—to be paid for by local tax. It is uncertain whether the petition can secure sufficient signatures of freeholders on George street to warrant the legal levy of the local tax. The central station of the Electric Light Company has been reinforced with another dynamo machine, which brings up the capacity of the station to 100 lights. The new switch board alluded to in a recent issue of the EXAMINER, is placed in position and in use. With the new street lights, the company will have between sixty and seventy lights in operation. Peterborough is supplied with electric street lamps of 2,000 candle power, seven cents cheaper than the cheapest rate to any city in the world. Ottawa thinks that, with her lights at 32 cents each, even though she furnishes and keeps in order the motive power, she is exceptionally favored in point of price.

Dress and Mantle Making.

Notwithstanding the great and urgent demand for Dresses and Mantles at the "Golden Lion," Miss Johnson is most attentive and prompt in executing all orders most satisfactorily.

Ladies

if you want something new and stylish in dress goods, winceys, black or coloured velveteens, gloves, corsets, hosiery, under clothing or fancy goods, call on Wallace, of Lakefield. 44-3t.

LADIES' Kid Mits and Gloves, and Black and Colored Jersey Gloves. J. ERSKINE.

Burglar's Booty Recovered.

Two of the Thieves Captured.

About a week ago Chief Johnson received an anonymous letter, informing him that the goods stolen in recent burglaries were concealed in a barn belonging to Mr. Chamberlain in the west part of the town. Investigation showed the correctness of the information, and the Chief at once took measures to have an unremitting—night and day—watch kept of the premises, but no results in the way of detecting the guilty followed. The recovered plunder includes the bulk of the furs stolen from Joseph Mills' Fur store recently, comprising:—two pair beaver gauntlets, one beaver cap, one beaver and coney cap, six astrachan caps, two russian lamb caps, one persian lamb cap, five south sea seal caps, two french seal caps, one pair ladie's south sea seal gauntlets, one gent's beaver rolling collar, one gent's persian lamb rolling collar, one ladies' astracan mantle, one ladies' bokaran shoulder cape, twelve yards black hair trimming, three ladies' hair caps, one tweed hat, three pairs men's driving gauntlets, sixteen pairs of kid mitts, ten pairs of kid gloves, worth in all about $300. The furs were found in an old grain bag and a common patent leather valise. One or two persian lamb caps and a few pairs of gloves and mits are missing. Two revolvers, supposed to belong to Mr. McKee, were found sticking in a pair of mits. One chamber of one of the revolvers was loaded. The burglars were local reprobates, and it probable that being without outside confederates to help them in disposing of the stolen goods safely, one of the gang became frightened, and gave information to the police.

Two young men have been arrested in connection with the affair. Their names are John Ferguson and William Noble, young men of the town.

Turnbull calls special attention to his Gentleman and Ladies' Underclothing, just bought and to be sold at remarkably low prices.

The Intermediate State.

Rev. Alex. Bell, of St. Andrew's Presbyterian Church, will on Sunday evening next preach a sermon dealing with the above subject.

Hunter Street Bridge.

Mr. James McNamara, the contractor for the stone work of the new Hunter street bridge, has pushed operations so rapidly that the stone walls will probably be completed by Saturday night.

Mission Services.

The Rev. S. Weston Jones, Lindsay, provincial agent of the Upper Canada Bible Society, called upon us on Wednesday Mr. Jones is addressing meetings in this locality, and meetings are announced for Keene on Monday November 17th, and Omemee on the 19th instant.

The Midland Poultry Association.

The annual meeting of the Midland Poultry Association will be held this (Thursday) evening, in Mr. Cumming's office at 8 p m. A large representation of the membership is particularly requested. Election of officers and other important business in connection with the welfare of the society will be brought forward.

Culpable Carelessness.

The other night a lady fell into an unprotected sewer excavation on Simcoe street, and had to call for assistance before she could gain release. The authorities, in addition to the two suits for damages they have on their hands, arising from the unprotected condition of holes on Hunter street, will, unless they change their policy, have to contend with an epidemic of suits for damages. If they allow the streets to be deeply and dangerously trenched, they should see that they are properly guarded.

A Vast Improvement.

The completion of the work of repair and addition to Mr. James Stevenson's business block, corner of George and Hunter streets, shows how vast is the improvement that has been made. The new mansard roof with its fine covering of slate and its beautiful iron cresting, together with the ornate gilded finals to the apices of the window gables, and the whole, finished by the round tower with its richly wrought and gilt weather vane and finial, make a hundred per cent addition to the block in question, which is now one of the finest on George street.

New Norwood Drug Business.

We are pleased, while sorry to lose so highly respected a young citizen, to know that Mr. W. Rutherford, late head clerk in Messrs. Ormond & Walsh's drug store, has, in partnership with Dr. S. P. Ford, purchased the drug and stationery business of Mr. R. Stewart, Norwood. Mr. Rutherford has had half a dozen years' experience, is an honour graduate of the Ontario College of Pharmacy, besides having earned with his late employers a high name for carefulness and reliability. The business will go on under the name of W. Rutherford & Co., of the "Medical Hall," and will be managed by Mr. Rutherford. With the ability and business capacity that the members of the firm contribute, we have no doubt it will achieve the marked success we heartily wish it may do.

Consumption Cured.

An old physician, retired from practice, having had placed in his hands by an East India missionary the formula of a simple vegetable remedy for the speedy and permanent cure of Consumption, Bronchitis, Catarrh, Asthma, and all throat and Lung affections, also a positive and radical cure for Nervous debility and all Nervous Complaints, after having tested its wonderful curative powers in thousands of cases, has felt it his duty to make it known to his suffering fellows. Actuated by this motive and a desire to relieve human suffering, I will send free of charge, to all who desire it, this receipt, in German, French or English, with full directions for preparing and using. Sent by mail by addressing with stamp, naming this paper, W. A. Noyes, 149 Power's Block, Rochester, N. Y. 45-26-eow.

Otonabee Oddfellows' Concert.

The entertainment given under the auspices of Otonabee lodge on Wednesday evening of last week, was eminently successful. Of course Miss Jessie Couthoui, the versatile elocutionist, was the star of the evening. Her recitations, whether pathetic, comic or mimetic, were exquisitely rendered and greeted with warm applause. Her versatility and cleverness are such as to make her a host in herself. In the musical portion of the programme, Miss Clara Claxton did full justice to the high expectations her previous efforts have led the public to form. Her renditions of "The Bird that Came in Spring," and "I'd Rather not," were marked with characteristic sweetness and correctness, and well deserved the warm applause they received. Miss Brentnell also appeared to advantage in three numbers, and gave an earnest, of what she could do, if a severe cold, as on this occasion, had not impaired her vocal powers. Altogether the entertainment passed off with a success that reflects credit on the taste and management of its promoters.

Our New Watchmaker, Mr. Hughan, comes well recommended, and we are sure any work entrusted to him will be done in good style. Office lately occupied by Elias Burnham, Simcoe Steet. 18-tf

The "Examiner" Book-Bindery.

THE EXAMINER Book-bindery, which started abreast of the improvements in the art, "has kept pace" with them since. The principle on which our bindery is conducted is that there are three essential requisites—a thoroughly first-class, skilled and competent foreman; a bindery, equipped with the latest and best machinery and appliances, and the best stock of material. Both of the latter we have at large expense procured, and keep constantly on hand. The first requisite we have in the person of our foreman, whose thorough knowledge of the business, whose skill and carefulness, the best work turned out in Ontario outside the cities for the past twenty years, testify to. We consider his skill, experience and reliability worth the sum required to secure his invaluable services, far in advance of that paid to inferior men by slow-going establishments. So anxious are we to retain a first-class man, that we could not make the fatal mistake of replacing him by a subordinate working under him, and who could not be intrusted with first-class work. It will be to the advantage of our customers, and inspire greater confidence in the excellence of our work, to know that we do not place our bindery in charge of a man who, when he "gets stuck" on work, finds that he has to be sent abroad to learn his trade. Given a first-class man, provided with the latest improved machinery and appliances (not worn out, out-of-date machinery and antiquated tools) and the best stock the market can supply; superior work is sure to be done. To show that THE EXAMINER Bindery fills the bill, we hereby offer to bind a copy of any fine work, say "Picturesque Canada," in Morocco or half-Morocco, gilt edges, and place it in any bookstore in competition with a similar book similarly bound by any bindery out of Toronto, with full confidence in the result. The fact that the work of our binder has taken first prize at all Central Exhibitions, in competition with other binding, is a sufficient guarantee of the work we are turning out. Bring along your work to THE EXAMINER bindery, where you are sure to get good work, with no risk of loose binding, poor lettering or dim gilding. No charge will be made for any book bound in our establishment, not in every respect satisfactory. Our prices are as low as can be had anywhere. Our binding has given the public such perfect satisfaction that we do not need to offer chromos to secure work.

Insurance Business.

Attention is called to the advertisement of the insurance business of Mr. W. Hill. The public will bear in mind that the business he now controls, was formerly carried on by Mr. Robert Fairbairn, and more recently by Mr. J. B. McWilliams. Mr. Hill has had a large experience in the insurance business, and all who are fortunate enough to have business relations with him, will find him ready to do business on business principles, and in a square straight forward and satisfactory manner.

FINE FARM

FOR SALE.

That beautifully located Farm,

The West half of lot 36, in the 13th Concession of Otonabee.

Situated east of the old Cobourg Railway. The property comprises 88 acres more or less. The soil is excellent and well adapted to gardening purposes. Its situation is very desirable, it being only one mile from the market square, and commanding a fine view of the town of Peterborough. Since the property came into possession of its present proprietor, over $,000 has been spent on its improvement. It is one of the best watered farms in Ontario, being supplied by a never-failing spring well, so situated as to provide ten feet head. From this are laid nearly 700 feet of iron piping. At a distance of 240 feet from the spring this pipe leads to a watering trough in the barn. A continuation of the pipe carries the overflow from this, 440 feet further to another watering trough into another field. From the latter the overflow passes into a tile drain on the road side, and thence away. This pipe is provided with two taps, by which the water supply to the stock may be regulated. This water supply makes the farm eminently fitted for grazing purposes; stock can be supplied with continual access to an unlimited supply of pure living water. Or for market gardening the facilities for irrigation would admit of setting dry seasons at defiance, this together with the proximity to a first class market (only one mile) makes this farm unequalled for this purpose.

For either a gentleman of leisure who wishes to devote his retirement to agricultural pursuits or for a pushing man who desires to make money, this farm for fertility of soil, water supply, beauty of situation and convenience to town, can have no superior.

TERMS: One thousand dollars to be paid down when deeds are handed over, the balance may remain on the property at 6 per cent interest for any term agreed upon.

Jas. ALEXANDER

THE MIDDLE STATE.

Rev. Alex. Bell, of St. Andrew's Discourses on the Subject.

On Sunday evening last Rev. Alex. Bell, pastor of St. Andrew's, as announced, preached a sermon dealing with the doctrine of a purgatorial state, to a very large congregation. The text was from the Book of Job, chapter xiv., verse 12:—"So man lieth down and riseth not. Till the Heavens shall be no more they shall not awake or be raised out of their sleep." The import of these words was that when a man died his soul entered into a state that would remain unchanged till the resurrection. The Protestant belief was that those who died in sin went directly to their reward in hell, and those who died in Christ went to heaven. It was not a question for consideration whether after the judgment day the happiness of the righteous or the sufferings of the wicked would be increased. There were only two places for departed souls. The Roman Catholics held a different belief—that there were four places: the limbus infantum, or place of unbaptized children; hell, the abode of those who die in mortal sin; heaven, the immediate home of those dying in martyrdom, and for the rest, purgatory, where they must be purged from their faults. These had to remain here till they were purged of the sins that stained their souls on their departure from earth. Protestants believed that those who died in Christ went directly to Christ; the Roman Catholics believed that they went to purgatory. The former recognized only the word of God as their authority, which showed in St. Luke's Gospel that the beggar was taken to Abraham's bosom, and that he was not in a state of suffering but of comfort. The thief on the cross was assured—"To-day thou shalt be with me in paradise"—a term that to Jews meant the most exalted state of bliss. Several passages were quoted to confirm the statement that paradise and heaven—Christ's presence—were identical. A righteous man dying goes to his place in heaven, and remains there till the judgment, when he is rewarded according to the deeds done in the body. St. Paul believed that his state after death would be better than his earthly one. This was not a prison of torment, but heaven itself. Several Scriptural passages plainly pointed out that Christ was with God in heaven, and those who died in the Lord entered into heaven. The blood of Christ cleansed from all sin, and that blood once applied, the soul was safe. The preacher had, he thought, shown by Scripture that there was no third place. The creed of Pope Pius IV. was quoted to show that Roman Catholics were bound in their interpretation of the Scriptures by the directions of the Fathers, whose consent must be had to the acceptance of any teaching. To prove the existence of a third state they quoted the 43rd verse of the 12th chapter of Maccabees, a book which was not inspired, but had been written by a Jew under the influence of heathen philosophy. It was not accepted as canonical by the Jews or the early Christians, and it was not till the Council of Trent that it was made canonical. The dead for whom the sacrifices Maccabeus mentioned were guilty of idolatory—a mortal sin—which doomed the soul at once to hell. After alluding to different passages of Scripture quoted in support of purgatory, the preacher alluded to the passage in the first Epistle of Peter, referring to Christ preaching to the spirits in prison, which meant those who were disobedient in the time of Noah. As these had been guilty of mortal sin they could not be in purgatory, and the text did not apply. The belief in Purgatory had not been, as was urged, universal up to the 16th century. The Greek church, though in connection with the Roman church up to the eighth century, did not hold this belief. The church was corrupted by surrounding heathenism. The early Christians believed only in two places, but they fell into error, and this in the hands of Pope Gregory became a source of profit and power to the church. Nothing in the Scriptures, nor in the Fathers up to the fourth century, gave sanction to the belief in Purgatory.

Just now, the Millinery Trade is Booming at Turnbulls. Several new and scarce shapes by Express this week.

A GREAT CROP.

The November report of the Ontario Bureau of Industries contains facts and estimates leading up to the conclusion that the harvest of this year has turned out even better than was expected earlier in the season. The following table shows the aggregate and average yield for 1884 and 1883:

	Aggregate.		Average.
	1884.	1883.	1884.	1883
Potatoes, bush	27,548,261	16,409,732	163.8	98.0
Mangolds, bush	8,853,184	6,252,0 5	471.9	363.0
Carrots, bush	4,197,200	3,984,136	382.0	354 0

Rye, bush	1,646,359	2,012,240	15.9	16.0

Prices of many of the staple crops are low. Wheat and potatoes, in particular, are cheap, but the harvesting of so great a crop is a substantial addition to the wealth of the country. Legislation cannot, in a year like this, increase the price of any of these farm crops. Legislation should not increase the price of the commodities for which the farmers have to exchange the products of their labor. Were it not for the high tariff the farmers of Canada, with such a crop in store, would be abundantly prosperous in spite of the low prices, and other classes would share their prosperity.

The worst cases cured by Dr. Sage's Catarrh Remedy.

TEMPERANCE WORK.

To the Editor of THE EXAMINER:

SIR,—The temperance movement throughout Canada was never so strong as it is at the present moment. The excessive use of intoxicating drinks is being confined more and more to the more debased and less intelligent classes. The drunkard is looked upon either as one not worthy to be trusted or employed, or as an unfortunate being subject to a disease over which he has no power.

On the subject of temperance, at least, two distinct views are abroad. One class maintains the doctrine of total abstinence as the only cure for drunkenness, and the only feasible way to promote true temperance. Upon this basis nearly all temperance societies have been founded. At the present time their views are spreading with wondrous rapidity. Not so many counties in Ontario would have adopted the Scott Act, with such sweeping majorities, if this were not the case. It seems that public opinion is fast merging towards entire prohibition. Whether this will effect all that is expected remains to be seen. Many earnest and wise men counsel great care lest these enthusiastic advocates should, in their excessive zeal bring about a lamentable reaction. I know this is the great danger to be guarded against in such movements, and the warning of these counsellors should not go unheeded by Scott Act promoters et hoc genus omne. The strict enforcement of the law wherever it is adopted should be the main care of the temperance men. It will not do to put a pistol to a man's head and say, "Be a total abstainer." A wise toleration, a tender, sympathetic use of power, and the right employment of whatever agencies are within reach, these seem to call for more attention from our temperance philanthropists.

The other view of temperance is, I think, best shown by quoting the platform of the Church of England Temperance Society. The first principle of their constitution is, "Union and co-operation, on perfectly equal terms, between those who moderately use and those who totally abstain from alcholic drinks." Both sections of the Society are to respect the rights of each other, and members must not exalt the one section to the disparagement of the other. This plan has been found to work admirably both in England and Canada. Never has a society been more successful in promoting true temperance, and it is worthy of note that its progress is most noteworthy from the hour when it adopted this double basis. The Bible, it must be admitted, cannot be classed as an advocate of total abstinence upon any other ground than that of love for the brethren, and the fear of casting a stumbling block in another's way. There is the right use as well as the abuse of alcoholic stimulants, and all should endeavor to enlist all true-hearted men in the crusade against intemperance which is so productive of evil in every shape and form.

I rejoice to know that the C. E. T. S. in this Diocese has made such solid progress. At the annual meeting held last Thursday in Toronto, it was stated that during the past year nearly 10,000 persons had joined the Society. True, some of these were children, but here I apprehend is the best field for true temperance work. During the year a mass meeting was held under the auspices of the C.E.T.S., and this is recommended as a feature in future years. A vast quantity of temperance material had been circulated, and altogether the work accomplished was most satisfactory. Being deeply interested in this important movement, rightly directed, I cannot but rejoice that they have done so well.

Yours Truly,
ONE INTERESTED.

JOHN CAMPBELL, JR.'S, CHALLENGE.

To the Editor of THE EXAMINER:

DEAR SIR,—By THE EXAMINER of Nov. 6th, which you kindly forwarded, I see that "Hay Seed" has been trying to get out of the predicament, in which he has foolishly placed himself, as quietly as possible. He tries flattery and professes the greatest respect for me; but his malignity proves too strong, and he (as in his former letter) finishes by trying to create the impression that I had done something very wrong; yet he says it was a mistake, because, like all evil-doers, he is too great a coward to clothe his thoughts in that language which would freely and fully convey what he really means. May I always be saved from such friends as he, who seemingly a friend, is in reality a second Judas, whose aim apparently is to damage my reputation in order to gratify his venomous spite.

That my good name is dear to me surprises him (which reveals the fact that he considers his of little worth), but I assure you, Mr. Editor, that I hold it as my most valuable earthly possession, and that person who tries to rob me of it, by what I am fully prepared to prove are false statements, anonymously made like a theft in the dark, is among the most contemptible of beings. A house-breaker or a pickpocket is a gentleman in comparison.

Mr. Wallace's letter agrees perfectly with my former statement regarding McDuff, but at the same time strongly condemns "Hay Seed" when he arrogantly insinuates in his first letter that the directors of the Lindsay Central were lacking in duty by allowing "such mistakes," and which he spells "f-a-u-d-s," to happen; and, yet, Mr. Wallace says that the "directors ordered the animal thrown out." And who will say that they failed in duty except "Hay Seed?"

I wish to place before your readers the matter as it really is, without saying one thing and insinuating a great deal more. "Hay Seed" charged me with being "unable to give the simplest details respecting" my "stock" at the Lindsay Central, when the fact is that I was not present. Again charged me with exhibiting pure-bred Durhams as grades, which is pure fabrication, as my highest bred grade cow shown, is only three-fourths Durham, and the only grade shown being less is, of course, seven-eighths. Also charged me with entering yearlings in calves' class, while the fact simply is that my private stock register and certificates of registration show that my oldest calf was calved Nov. 1st, 1883. When he says that there was a MISTAKE in showing McDuff, I quite agree with him, but at the same time challenge him to bring forward the slightest proof that there was any fraud practised or intended by me, as he insinuates in both his letters, and I further challenge him to disprove either of the three above statements, which are direct contradictions of his charges. Henceforth I intend treating all anonymous personal attacks with that silence which means contempt, as no notice should be taken of such productions when the authors are ashamed or afraid to father them.

Yours truly,

The Agony Over At Last.

The completion of the canvass of New York city, shows the total vote in the States to be: Blaine, 561,283; Cleveland, 562,001; Butler, 16,945; St. John, 25,078.

The National and State headquarters of the Republican and Democratic committees were finally closed to-night. The Republicans concede Cleveland's election.

Blaine regards the official count in New York as practically settling the Presidential question. He will shortly resume work on the second volume of "Twenty Years in Congress."

REMOVAL.

Mr. Reycroft has removed his boot and shoe store to the premises lately occupied by Mr. Gilroy.

SALE OF PROPERTY.

Mr Charles Crawford has purchased the brick store in which he is carrying on business, from Mr. Geo. Shields, paying $1,300.

RUNNING AGAIN.

Mr. Hull's mill has again started, the water being let through that part of the new dam on Friday last.

DRAMATIC.

The comedy of "Caste," in three acts, was performed at P. C. A. Hall on Thursday evening, 13th inst, for the benefit of the Lakefield Cricket Club. There was not a very large audience, but as the play is to be repeated a week from next Friday, the 28th inst., a crowded house may be expected on the occasion. The acting excelled any we have seen before in Lakefield, the parts being well sustained throughout. Mrs. Wright, as Esther, and Mr. Collard as Hon. George D'Alroy, in one scene, drew tears from part of the audience, while Mrs. Capt. Fort, as the Marquise, was inimitable. Mr. H. Le Fevre, as Captain Hantiel, was perfectly at home, acting his part in a manner that would bear the criticism of a connoisseur. Mr. C. Collaud as a plumber and gas-fitter, was quite up to the mark, while Miss Fanny Strickland as Polley, was full of life, and evidently had prepared her part carefully. Mr. Wright, in the character of the drunken father, was as usual, brim-full of humor, and his acting most masterly. The Peterborough Orchestra Band enlivened the evening with some most excellent music.

SCHOOL BOARD.

A meeting of the L. P. S. Board took place on Tuesday evening the 11th inst. Present, Messrs. W. C. Sanders, chairman, Gordon, Casement, Caldwell, Armour. Minutes of last meeting and a previous one were read and confirmed. A resolution was passed re-engaging Mr. August, head master for the ensuing year. The public school report for October was received as follows:

The Saved Army.

General Lindsay of the Saved Army, was in town this week, and from him we learn that the rumors which have gained considerable publicity, to the effect the Saved Army had made overtures for amalgamation with the Salvation Army, are without the slightest basis of truth. The Saved Army, while fervently sympathizing with the objects of the Salvation Army, do not at all approve of many of its methods and doctrinal peculiarities. No idea was ever entertained of such amalgamation. Perhaps, however, the rumor arose from the fact that a fusion of the Saved Army and the Lord's Army, the latter operating in Western Ontario, had taken place. By this amalgamation the former Lord's Army, numbering about a dozen officers and a thousand soldiers, have been added to the Saved Army, and form the western part of the three divisions into which the district of the Army is divided. About a dozen officers from the central division have been sent to reinforce the new western division. The work will be more vigorously prosecuted than ever, and the motto of the Saved Army, that they will plant the banner of the cross in every place where they can win souls, will be carried out. The Army will still continue to work in harmony with the churches. The work is progressing encouragingly, and continous accessions from the ranks of Satan are being made to the Army muster roll. In Port Hope and Cobourg, especially, is the work advancing, the fear that the Salvation Army would clash with and divert attention from the work of the Saved Army, having proved to be entirely groundless. The Saved Army will make a decent on Kingston, on Saturday next. The heavy artillery of the Army will be turned on the ramparts of sin on Sunday.

Hymen's Fetters.

Last Saturday evening Mr. Charles A. Clementi, of the Post Office Department, Ottawa, was united in marriage to Miss Clara H., daughter of Mr. James Stevenson. Rev. J. W. H. Beck, rector of St. John's, performed the ceremony at the residence of the brides' father, Simcoe street. The bridesmaids were Miss Lillie Barlee and Miss Florence Stevenson, and the groom was supported by Mr. George Scott of Toronto. The popularity of the bride, and the esteem her many amiable qualities evoked, were shown by the numerous elegant presents contributed on the occasion. Our congratulations are heartily extended to the families of the happy pair, and to the latter especially, to whom we wish all the enjoyment which health, material prosperity and a happy home can bring.

WEDDINGS.

On Wednesday evening of last week there were two weddings in this locality. First one, Miss Douglass of Allandale and Mr. Anderson. The ceremony took place at the residence of the bride's father. The Lang boys were out in full force, and acted in an disorderly a manner as possible. It is time a stop was put to such doings.

The second one was Miss Kindred and Mr. Vyvyan, and also took place at her father's residence in Keene. The supper was partaken of in the Town Hall, and was enlivened by the Keene band, who were treated to a supper and their funds were also increased. We wish them all joy.

PERSONAL.

Dr. Miller, who has been here on a visit, has left again. Mr. M. Keenally is still improving. Dr. Harrison has been the means of having a new side walk put down in the village.

Dr. Shaw is doing well in his drug store, and his practice is also increasing. Mr. Young, who is at present in charge of Keene Mills, is making very fine flour, and every one is pleased with his obliging manners.

NEW HOUSES

are wanted here very badly, as Mr. K. Mark has not been able to procure one so far. A few houses would pay well in our growing village.

GRAIN MARKET.

Farmers are very much put out at the lowness of the price of wheat.

HE FAILED IN HIS NEW VENTURE.

When it unfortunately happens that too many professional gentlemen of the same feather, locate themselves in one particular place, it only remains that some of them, at least, will find a fair share of their time to attend to other than their professional duties. We surmise this must have been the case with one of our M. D's. here last week, when he on more than one occasion deviated from the line of his wonted calling, and bent his energies to the improvement of the morals of some of our citizens, seeming nowise loth, if stringent measures were required to accomplish the good work, to resort to the manly art of "slugging." However, if report be true, his last encounter, which to k place at a late hour last Saturday night, fully convinced our hero that neither practising fisticuffs nor standing on his head in the ditch was his forte, and in the future, we fancy the Doctor, in his spare moments, will strike out on no more new ventures, and never again threaten to punch the stuffing out of an older-bodied and more active man than himself. "We wonder if he will?"

THE C. P. R.

The total mileage of the Canada Pacific Railway is 2,895 miles, and is made up as follows:

	Miles.
1 Montreal to Callander	347
2 Callander to Port Arthur	427
3 Port Arthur to Red River	422
4 Red River to summit of Rockies	893
5 Summit of Rockies to West Crossing, Columbia River	189
6 West Crossing, Columbia River to Savona's Ferry	189
7 Savona's Ferry to Port Moody	328

Between Callander and Port Arthur it is said that there is about 100 miles of very heavy work, that will require no inconsiderable amount of rock excavation. In this section there are five tunnels. Another very costly section is the one between the summit of the Rocky Mountains and the crossing of the Columbia River, a distance of 125 miles. Thirty-six miles of this section has the track laid, and it is hoped that upwards of 70 miles will be laid before the season closes. The tunnel and rock cutting will be carried on during the winter season. About 4,000 men are now employed in this section, and the engineer expects that it will be completed by September, 1885. It remains to be seen what advantage either the country or the company will derive from, so expensive work in a wild and unpeopled country.

A Bug in His Ear.

The other night one of those snapper-bugs flew in at the open window and lit on the ear of a gentleman who was asleep. The bug entered the ear and commenced his snapping and tearing at the delicate lining of the ear with its claws. The snapping sounded like the beating of a thousand sledge-hammers, and the clawing caused almost insupportable pain. The bug was too far in to be pulled out by the fingers, and the gentleman arose and his wife tried in vain to get it out with a needle and a hairpin. At last he resolved to go to a doctor, and while dressing himself his wife happened to think of the attraction light had for bugs and moths. She placed the lamp near the ear, and in less than half a minute the bug crawled out backward with the blood oozing from the ear.—Mason (Ga.) Telegraph.

Tabernacle Sermons.

Discourse by Rev. T. DeWitt Talmage.

ON ILLEGAL INQUISITIVENESS.

A Noble Tribute to Women and a Dead Mother.

At the Brooklyn Tabernacle, on Sunday, November 9th, Dr. Talmage, after expounding appropriate passages of Scripture, gave out the hymn:

He leadeth me! Oh, blessed thought!
Oh, words with heavenly comfort fraught!
Whe'er I go, wher'er I be,
Still 'tis God's hand that leadeth me.

Dr. Talmage's text was taken from Genesis 3, 22: "Of the rib which the Lord God had taken from him made He a woman, and brought her unto the man."

It is the first Saturday afternoon of the world's existence, said Dr. Talmage. Adam has since sunrise been watching the pageantry of wings and scales, and while taking his first lessons in zoology and ornithology and ichthyology, he notices that the robins fly by twos and the fish swim by twos and the lions walk by twos, and in the warm redolence of that scene he falls off into slumber. As if by allegory, to impress all ages with the fact that sound and healthful sleep is the grandest of all earthly blessings, this Paradisiacal commotion ended in woman's arrival on the new planet.

Of the mother of all the living I to-day, discourse, Eve, the first, the fairest and the best. I make me a garden. Its paths I inlay with mountain moss and border it with shells from Java and pearls from Ceylon and diamonds from Golconda. Here and there are fountains that toss in the sunlight and ponds that glitter with golden scales and ripple under the paddling of swans. I plant me lilies from the Amazon and orange groves from the tropics and tamarinds from Goyaz. Woodbine and honeysuckle climb over the wall, and starred spaniels crawl upon the grass. Among the tree branches I call doves and larks and brown-threshers that stir the air with infinite chirp and carol. But this would be a desert full of howling and death compared with the bright residence of the woman who is the subject of my morning's story. Never since Eve such skies looked down through such leaves into such waters. Never since has river wave known such curve of sheen or bank as adorned Pison, Havilah, Gihon and Hiddekel, the very pebbles being bdellium and onyx stone. What fruits with no curculio to sting the rind! What flowers with no slug to gnaw the root! What atmosphere with neither chill blast to frost nor heat to consume! Sunlight on the waves, bright colors tangled in the grass, perfume in the air, music in the sky. Birds warble and trees hum and waters dash. It was all gladness and life and song.

Under these bowers of vine and leaf and shrub at an altar carpeted with flowers was the first marriage. Adam as he takes the hand of this immaculate daughter of God pronounces the ceremonial himself when he says, "Bone of my bone, flesh of my flesh." A forbidden tree stands in the garden. Eve strolling out alone one day comes under it. She says to herself:—"What beautiful fruit! I wonder how it tastes. Let me just put my hand upon it. Yes; ripe and beautiful! I will take it down, but not to eat. Suppose I just break the rich tinted rind; that can do no harm." After awhile she tasted. Calling to Adam he also came and tasted. Sin for the first time is inside the garden of the world. Let the heavens put on gloom and the winds sob on the bosom of the hills, and from the cavern and from the ocean depth and from deserts and from sky let there come one long, deep, hell-resounding howl, "The world is lost." Beasts before playful and harmless, growl upon each other and run out claw and tooth and tusk. Birds whet their beak for prey. Wrathful clouds troop in the sky. Sharp thorns shoot up through soft grass. Blasting is on the leaves. The rivers, riled and angry, rush between torn banks. The cords of that great harmony are snapped. Upon the brightest home earth ever saw our parents turned their back and led forth on a pilgrimage of sorrow the broken hearted myriads of a ruined race.

See first the danger of an illegal inquisitiveness. Healthful curiosity has done much for letters, art, science and religion. With the geologist it has gone down into the earth and read the first chapter of Genesis in the book of nature illustrated with engravings on the rock, and from its inspiration the antiquarian hath blown the trumpet of resurrection over buried Pompeii and Herculaneum until their sepulchres have open and shafts and towers and amphitheatres have arisen to the world's gaze. Curiosity have attracted the telescopic vision of the astronomer until distant worlds have come out of their hiding place in the furthereat heaven to choir the praises of God, while planet is weighed against planet and wildest meteors are lassoed of resplendant law. It hath found traces of the eternal God in the polypi in star-fishes in the sea, and the majesty of the great Jehovah encamped under the gorgeous curtains of the dahlia. It hath examined the spots on the sun and larvae hidden in a leaf, the light under the firefly's wing and the terrible glance of the condor pitching from Chimborazo, the myriads of animalculae that make the phosporescent blaze in a ship's wake and the mighty maze of suns and spheres and constellations and galopies that blaze in the march of God.

Curiosity has inspired the inventor with forces that for ages lay hidden have come to wheels and levers and shuttles and stretched cords of misery over the world, sticking them into dolorous woe, and hath sowed plagues in the air and shipwrecks on the tempest and hath fastened famine like a leech on the sick heart of the nations and made 10,000 battlefields groan with horror.

Oh, the deceitfulness of sin! The ground over which it leads you is hollow, the fruits it offers to your taste are poisoned, the promise it makes a lie. Over this ungodly bequest the hand of an offended justice of God's judgment is suspended. An unseen hand writing upon the wall. O thou misguided victim of pleasure, I sound the alarm; thy pleasure boat is far from shore. Thy summer day is closing roughly, for the winds and waves are loud-voiced and the over-covering clouds are all a-writhe and a-gleam with terror. Thicks are past the "narrows," almost outside the "Hook" and if the Atlantic take thee, frail mortal, thou shalt never get to shore again. Homeward! put back! How swiftly. Swifter, swifter! Jesus from the shore cometh a rope. Grasp it quickly! Now or never! Some of my hearers I fear have freighted all their hopes and loves and joys upon a vessel which shall never bring them to a port of safety. See, then nearest the breakers! One heave upon the rocks! Another plunge may crush thee beneath the shrivelled spars or grind thy bones to powder among the torn timbers! Overboard for thy life. Overboard! Trust not that loose plank nor tempt the shore, but quickly clasp the feet of Jesus walking upon the watery pavement, shouting till he hear thee, "Lord, save or I perish."

Again the biography of Eve teaches me what a shocking thing sin is when appended to great beauty and refinement. Never since Eve's death has the world seen such perfection of womanhood. Coming directly from the hand of God there was not another attraction you could have suggested for her person nor another refinement to her manners. No gracefulness could have been added to her gait, no sparkle to her eye, no color to her cheek, no sweetness to her voice to be the companion of a perfect man and the inhabitant of a perfect home. God had created her and all that beautiful nature vibrated in accord with the brightness of the scene of paradise. But she resisted God's authority and with the same hand with which she had plucked the fruit launched upon unborn generations the crime, and the wars, and the tombs, and the woes which have set the universe awailing. Terrible offset to all her attractiveness.

To find men and women naturally vulgar, given up to evil practices, does not startle us very much, for we expect those who live in the ditch to have the manners of the ditch. But when we find wickedness joined to acuteness of intellect and attractiveness of manner, we are startled. The accomplishments of Mary Queen of Scots make her patronage of Darnley, the profligate, the more astounding. The genius of Catherine II., Empress of Russia, only set off in more repelling light, her unappeasable ambition. The translations which Elizabeth made from the Latin and the Greek and her extraordinary qualifications for a queen only brought out into more vivid contempt, her capriciousness of affection and haughtiness of temper. Lord Byron's greatness makes the more shameful Lord Byron's sensuality. Let no one think that suavity of bearing or a high style of accomplishment can apologize for vanity or illtemper or unkindness. Disobedience to God or unrighteousness towards man will becload the most brilliant attainments. Though your accomplishments be heaven-high, they will not excuse for vice hell-deep.

Again, learn the real influence of women. In the power which Eve exercised over Adam and on the destiny of uncounted generations, I see a type of the power which her descendants should exercise. We have no sympathy with the flatteries that are showered upon her from the pulpit and the stage. The true nobility of woman consists in the power of a Christian influence. Eve's overthrow of Adam and the race was only an illustration of what power there is now in the frail arm of woman to strike out the echoring through eternity, down among the cavern or up among the thrones. This influence was not monopolized by such great representative women as Eve who ruined the race with one fruit plucking, nor of Jael who sent a spike through the head of Sisera, nor of Esther who overcame royalty, nor by Abigail who by her beautiful countenance arrested a hostile army, nor of Mary who nursed the world's Saviour, nor of the great dancer who carried about on a dish the gory head of John the Baptist, nor of Grandmother Lois who was immortalized in her grandson Timothy, nor of Charlotte Corday who with her dagger slew the assassin of her lover, nor of Marie Antoinette who could conquer a mob by one look from the balcony of her castle and whose scaffold was a throne of forgiveness and moral courage. I refer to the mothers, to the wives, to the daughters, to the sisters who, unambitious for political power and the scramble of the hustings, are performing the ten thousand sweet offices of home.

When I thus speak I find myself using as a model one whom 20 years ago we put away for the resurrection at about 80 years of age. Just before the day of their marriage my father and mother stood up in the old meeting house at Somerville to take the vows of a christian. Through a long life of vicissitudes she lived blamelessly and usefully, and came to her end in peace. No child of want ever came to her door and was turned away. No wings innumerable, swimming through the waters, cleaving through the mountain, soaring through the air, until the whole earth rattles and crashes and roars and rings with strange mechanisms and lightnings play kite with philosophers and ships with nostrils of hot steam and yokes of fire draw together the continents. We would not condemn the colors of human inquisitiveness but we hope that their Leyden jars and electric batteries and voltaic piles and magnifying glasses might charge upon the barred castles of the natural world until it should surrender the last secret, give it wider range and let new discovery come down from the air and leap up out of the waters and roar from the earth to crown human inquisitiveness. God be praised for the geological curiosity of Professor Hitchcock and the zoological curiosity of Agazzi, and the chemical curiosity of Liebig, and the architectural curiosity of Christopher Wren, and the inventive curiosity of Edison!

But the inquisitiveness of many have rushed them into predicament. Eve wanted to know how the fruit tasted and she found out but 6,000 years of wretchedness and woe have deplored her curiosity. Unlawful curiosity has sent the theologian mad into the forbidden systems of God and religion. He has sometimes wrenched his whole moral nature out of joint in trying to pluck fruit from branches beyond his reach or venturing too far on the limbs hath tumbled headlong without remedy. There are ten thousand trees from which we may eat and get only good but from the forces of mystery, Divine Election, Trinity, the Resurrection, how many have plucked their ruin! Thousands of men are not Christians because they do not know who Melchisedech was.

There are many forms of unhealthful inquisitiveness. Many sit from morning to night with the eye staring and mouth agape of curiosity. They are the first to know who told a lie and build it another story high and two wings to it. About other people's houses, about other people's food, about other people's apparel, about other people's financial condition they are over-anxious. No choice bit of gossip floating in community but stops at their door and they luxuriate and grow fat in the endless round of the great world of tittle-tattle. He invites and sumptuously entertains at his fireside Colonel Twaddle, Esquire. Chit-chat and Governor Small talk. Whosoever hath a slander, whosoever hath an inuendo, whosoever hath a valuable secret, let them come and offer it a sacrifice to this goddess of splutter. Multitudes of Adams and Eves spend their whole time in eating fruit that does not belong to them. Some who are proficient in thematicians have never learned this computation in moral Algebra:—

GOOD SENSE—GOOD BREEDING—CURIOSITY—MINDING YOUR OWN BUSINESS.

Young people urged on by their inquisitiveness have ransacked the whole field of French novels to find out whether they really are as bad as moralists have pronounced them. Just coming to look over the parapets they have lost their balance and down they went dashed into remediless destruction or perchance crawling up on the rocks shattered and bleeding and ghastly, gibbering with curses or groaning ineffectual prayers. Passion is a fiery courser and driven along dangerous places it may become unmanageable and at the sudden sound of mirth's trumpet lift and prick and it leaps like a bolt into the terrible abyss.

Again, learn from Eve's case that sometimes sins are pleasing in the outset afterward produce agony. The forbidden fruit was so pleasant to Eve's appetite she was not satisfied until her husband tasted it. But her banishment from Paradise and the sufferings of an entire race were the price paid for the luxury. Eve is not the only one who hath sold great happiness for temporary satisfactions. The cup of sin always sparkles at the top, but there is death at the bottom. Intoxication hath pleasant exhilarations, makes a man see five stars where others see one star, puts spring into the ground, flips the blood, makes the poor man feel rich and cheeks white as snow red as roses. But what about the dreams that come afterwards when they seem falling from great heights and in effort to save themselves meeting with other fancied disasters till the sweat stands on the brow like the night dews of eternal darkness, and they are ground under the hoof of horrid nightmares, shrieking out with lips that crackle with feverish torture. Look into that hall of revelry where ungodly mirth staggers and blasphemes. Listen to the senseless gabble and watch the going out of the last traces of manhood from men made in God's own image. "Ha, ha! This is joy for you," saith a royestering neighbor. "Fill your cups my boys! Here's to my wife's sorrows and my children's rags and my God's defiance." But he sees not that the fiend stirs the goblet in the hand and adders uncoil from the bottom and thrust upon their forked tongues, hissing in the froth on the brim. Perdition bought for a sixpence!

The fruit was pleasant to Eve, but that disobedience still smites the earth until it rebels like an ox under the butcher's sledge-on. Who could tell the consequence of that one sin unless all at once he could make the world throw open all its prison doors to expose the crimes and all its hospitals to show the disease and all the alms-houses to show the squalor and all the insane asylums to display the madness and all the sepulchres to show the dead and all the gates of the lost to show the damned. That one Edenic transgression has lighted up every ungodly passion and stricken soul ever appealed to her and was not comforted. No sinner ever asked her the way to be saved and was not pointed to Christ. When the Angel of Life came to a neighbor's dwelling she was there to rejoice at the incarnation; and when the Angel of Death came she was there to robe the departed one for burial. We have often heard her while kneeling among her children at family prayers, when the father was absent say: "I ask not for my children wealth or honor; but I do ask that they may all become the subjects of thy converting grace." She had seen all her eleven children gathered into the church, and she had but one more wish, and that was that she might again see her missionary son. And when the ship from China anchored in New York harbor, and the long absent one crossed the threshold of his paternal home, she said: "Now, Lord, lettest thou thy servant depart in peace, for mine eyes have seen thy salvation."

We were gathered from afar to see only the house from which the soul had fled forever. How calm she looked! Her folded hands appeared just as when they were employed in kindnesses for the children. And we could not help but say as we stood and looked at her: "Don't she look beautiful?" It was a cloudless day, when with heavy hearts we carried her out to the last resting-place. The withered leaves crumbled under wheel and hoof as we passed and the setting sun shone upon the river until it looked like fire. But more calm and bright was the setting sun of this aged pilgrim's life. No more toil. No more tears. No more sickness. No more death. Dear mother! Beautiful mother!

"Sweet is the slumber beneath the sod,
While the pure soul is resting with God."

Turnbull is now showing a choice range of Astrachan Mantles, made from the best of stock. Inspect before purchasing.

Loss and Gain.

CHAPTER I.

"I was taken sick a year ago
With bilious fever."

"My doctor pronounced me cured, but I got sick again, with terrible pains in my back and sides, and I got so bad I

Could not move!

I shrunk!

From 228 lbs. to 120! I had been doctoring for my liver, but it did me no good. I did not expect to live more than three months. I began to use Hop Bitters. Directly my appetite returned, my pains left me, my entire system seemed renewed as if by magic, and after using several bottles, I am not only as sound as a sovereign, but weigh more than I did before. To Hop Bitters I owe my life."

R. FITZPATRICK.

Dublin, June 6, '81.

CHAPTER II.

"Malden, Mass., Feb. 1, 1880. Gentlemen—I suffered with attacks of sick headache."

Neuralgia, female trouble, for years in the most terrible and excruciating manner.

No medicine or doctor could give me relief or cure, until I used Hop Bitters.

"The first bottle

Nearly cured me;"

The second made me as well and strong as when a child,

"And I have been so to this day."

My husband was an invalid for twenty years with a serious

"Kidney, liver and urinary complaint,

"Pronounced by Boston's best physicians—

"Incurable!"

Seven bottles of your Bitters cured him and I know of the "Lives of eight persons"

In my neighborhood that have been saved by your bitters,

And many more are using them with great benefit.

"They almost

Do miracles?" —Mrs. E. D. Slack.

HOW TO GET SICK.—Expose yourself day and night; eat too much without exercise; work too hard without rest; doctor all the time; take all the vile nostrums advertised, and then you will want to know how to get well, which is answered in three words—Take Hop Bitters!

☞Some genuine without a bunch of green Hops on the white label. Shun all the vile, poisonous stuff with "Hop" or "Hops" in their name. 46 4t

SOUTH DOURO.

PLENTIFOUS POTATOES.

Hearing and reading so much about large potatoes and also large yields, in our local papers this fall, with your permission, I will give you the product of a bushel and a half I purchased for seed last spring. I planted them on the 28th of May, drilled the land the same as for turnips, but some further apart, dropped the cuts in the furrows two in a place, two feet apart and covered lengthwise with harrow, and crossed them again with harrow when nicely over the ground, the remaining part of the drills preventing the harrow from interfering with the stalks. I then ploughed them at the proper time, followed up with the hoe. The result was three waggon loads of splendid large potatoes, or about seventy bushels, and for table use, or any other use they cannot be beaten. They far excelled any others I planted, and I had six different kinds. The name of the potatoes I have quite forgotten.

Consumption Cured.

An old physician, retired from practice, having had placed in his hands by an East India missionary the formula of a simple vegetable remedy for the speedy and permanent cure of Consumption, Bronchitis, Catarrh, Asthma, and all throat and Lung affections, also a positive and radical cure for Nervous debility and all Nervous Complaints, after having tested its wonderful curative powers in thousands of cases, has felt it his duty to make it known to his suffering fellows. Actuated by this motive and a desire to relieve human suffering, I will send free of charge, to all who desire it, this receipt, in German, French or English, with full directions for preparing and using. Sent by mail by addressing with stamp, naming this paper, W. A. Noyes, 149 Power's Block, Rochester, N. Y. 45-26-eow.

Rags and Greasy to the following

Lame Back and any kind of a Pain or Ache. "It will instantly quicken the Blood and Heal, as its healing power is wonderful." "Brown's [illegible] being universally acknowledged as the great Pain Reliever, and of double the strength of any other Pain or Liniment in the world, it will be in every family handy for use when wanted. A MARVELOUS STORY

TOLD IN TWO LETTERS.

FROM THE SON: "[illegible] St., Hoyt, Ont. [illegible]

"Gentlemen: My father resides at Glover, Vt. He has been a great sufferer from Scrofula, and the inclosed letter will tell you what a marvelous effect has had in his case. I think his friend must have exercised the honor for at least ten years; but it did not show, except in the form of a running sore on the point, until about five years ago. From a few spots which appeared at that time, it gradually spread over his entire body. I assure you he was terribly afflicted, and an object of pity, when he began using your medicine. Now, there are few men of his age who enjoy as good health as he has. I could easily name fifty persons who would testify to the facts in his case.

Yours truly, W. H. PHILLIPS."

FROM THE FATHER: "[illegible] and a day for me to state to you the benefit I have derived from the use of

Ayer's Sarsaparilla.

Six months ago I was completely covered with a terrible humor and scrofulous sores. The humor caused an insufferable and intolerable itching, and the skin cracked so as to cause the blood to flow. It was very painful whenever I moved. My clothing were rotten, and my life a burden. Fortunately, one of the SARSAPARILLA in April, 1883, and have used it regularly since that time. My condition began to improve at once. The sores have all healed, and I feel perfectly well in every respect, being now able to do a good day's work, although 73 years of age. Many inquire what has wrought such a cure in my case, and I tell them, as I have here tried to tell you.

AYER'S SARSAPARILLA. Glover, Vt., Oct. 21, 1883. Yours gratefully, HIRAM PHILLIPS."

AYER'S SARSAPARILLA cures Scrofula and all Scrofulous Complaints, Erysipelas, Eczema, Ringworm, Blotches, Sores, Boils, Tumors, and Eruptions of the Skin. It clears the blood of all impurities, aids digestion, stimulates the action of the bowels, and thus restores vitality and strengthens the whole system.

BOARD OF HEALTH.

Medical Health Officer's Exhaustive Report.

A meeting of the members of the Board of Health was held on Friday night. Present, Messrs. McNeil, chairman, Rutherford, Green, Stapleton and Dr. Clarke, Medical Health officer.

After routine

DRY EARTH CLOSETS

were considered, and the chairman called attention to the lack of enforcing the recent regulation of the Board in reference to the substitution of dry earth closets for vaults—it had been neglected, some parties having been repeatedly notified. It was agreed on motion that the Sanitary Inspectors enforce the health act, the business for which they were appointed, or, resign their positions.

MEDICAL HEALTH OFFICER'S REPORT.

Dr. Clarke, medical health officer, presented his annual report, a most able and exhaustive document, of which we regret we have not space for a full publication. We submitted a synopsis dealing with its most important points.

The report after giving an admirable general discussion of the importance and benefit of sanitary precautions, proceeded to deal with local matters.

It was stated that during the few months of its organization, the Board had done much good, but various causes had contributed to the prevention of doing as much good as was otherwise in the power and inclination of the board. The law has, on the whole, worked well, and there is a general feeling, that the least palatable regulations should be carried out.

SLAUGHTER HOUSES.

The report pointed out that from a sanitary point of view, when a town reaches the size and importance of Peterborough, slaughter houses should be removed outside its limits. Careful inspection had been made once or twice a week during the season, and the butchers acknowledged the benefit of stricter attention to cleanliness, and they have done their best to meet the views of the Board.

SEWERAGE.

The medical health officer had talked of the matter of sewerage with most of the medical men, who are unanimous in considering drainage one of the most pressing needs of the town. In default of sewers the resolutions of the board requiring dry earth closets to be put in in the central part of the town, is an important one, but few have heeded it. One thing that prevented the adoption was the lack of the best available apparatus. A Toronto company is making Heap's earth closet, largely used in England. Next season, the report states, the subject will be enforced upon the people's attention by the solicitations of sellers as well as the decrees of the Board. When the fact is considered that some 200 tons of excreta require disposal of in Peterborough each year, the importance of this subject cannot be ignored.

REMOVAL OF GARBAGE.

The question of the removal of garbage is another important matter. In consequence of pigs being prohibited, the lack of means for the removal of garbage and household refuse, is a constant source of complaint, and productive of the accumulation of offensive filth.

WELLS.

Since his last report the Medical Health Officer had analyzed the water of several wells and found considerable organic matter in most of them. The purity of water is not always proved by its good appearance. It may be bright, cool and sparkling and still be highly charged with decomposing organic matter and even specific germs of disease filtered from neighboring privy vaults—a fruitful source of disease. Considering the vast amount of excreta with which the earth is saturated, it is a wonder that disease from impure water is not more common. The risk still remains and will continue to do so, so long as well water is liable to contamination from privy vaults and slops thrown on and absorbed by the ground.

INFECTIOUS DISEASES.

It is a source of congratulation that no epidemic has visited the town the past year. There have been a number of cases of typhoid fever. (Mr. Allin, a member of the Board, was one of the victims to the disease). This disease appears always as an evidence of sanitary evils, and could by proper precautions be entirely prevented. There have been also a few cases of scarlet fever and diphtheria. When reported the premises have been placarded and isolated so as to secure seclusion of patients. Some medical men have not satisfactorily carried out the law as to reporting infectious diseases, but some have been very prompt in furnishing reports.

MISCELLANEOUS.

The report states that there is needed no medical expert to prove Spaulding's Bay a "nuisance of the first order," and the abolition of the nuisance is urgently called for.

The neglect to close or reconstruct the malodorous and noxious Hunter street drain, which "smells to Heaven as if a Presidential candidate were buried there," is strongly condemned.

Attention is called to the condition of the streets. They should be scraped often, and the removal of the mud, composed of shop sweepings, rotten fruit, manure and all kinds of offal, would prevent the dust, when the mud dries, being blown about and breathed by the public, thus giving rise to catarrh, diarrhœa, bronchitis, fevers, etc., etc.

The saw-dust nuisance, it was pointed out threatens to convert Little Lake, at no distant day, into a swamp, to which Spaulding's Bay "would seem as a rose-bed."

The Provincial Board of Health has been provided with weekly reports of disease.

The report states that scores of complaints of nuisances have been received anonymously, but the public are reminded that the carrying out of the Health Act is best promoted by open and undisguised complaint. The public require education on sanitary matters, and the report, while acknowledging the willing efforts of the public press in this direction, states that the Medical Health Officer, Dr. Clarke, proposes next spring and summer to write a series of letters on various sanitary subjects, giving practical hints as to those questions which lie nearest the public and concern every individual.

The report concludes as follows:

"It is my desire, and I am sure it is the desire of every member of this Board, that the town of Peterborough, so conspicuous among other towns by its beauty of situation, by the enterprise and prosperity of its citizens, may be noted still more for that perfection of sanitary arrangement, without which all natural gifts and all acquired advantages would be in vain.

Respectfully submitted,

J. CLARKE, M.D.,
Medical Health Officer.

By way of appendix to the report is this table of the sanitary work done in the town from June 1st to November 15th.

Number yards examined	450
" Water closets examined	397
" Yards found in good condition	95
" " cleaned	342
" Manure heaps, hog-pens, etc., removed	130

During the above period there were reported 8 cases of scarlet fever, 7 cases of diphtheria, 12 cases of typhoid fever, and 3 houses were placarded.

The report was received and adopted and a copy ordered to be sent to the Secretary of the Provincial Board of Health, and the Board adjourned.

A Wise Conclusion.

If you have vainly tried many remedies for rheumatism, it will be a wise conclusion to try Hagyard's Yellow Oil. It cures all painful diseases when other medicines fail. 46-2t

Do not suppose that because it is recommended for animals that Arnica & Oil Liniment is an offensive preparation. It will not stain clothing or the fairest skin. 44-5t

St. Andrew's Society Annual Meeting.

The annual meeting of St. Andrew's Society of Peterborough was held in the Council Chamber on Wednesday evening of last week. There were present about thirty sons of Scotland. The chair was taken by Mr. Duncan McLeod, President, who made a brief address. He regretted that there were so few Scotchmen present. Instead of thirty there should be at least one hundred at the annual meeting. The thin attendance savoured of discourtesy to the officers of the Society. They should have turned out in force to select proper committees to support the officers the coming year. The retiring officers took office last year when the membership of the society amounted to only about twenty-seven; but, Scotchman-like, they had energy and hopefulness of increasing the membership, and they had not been disappointed. At present the roll of membership contained 106 names of members, with five honorary members. St. Andrew's Society was a national organization and the funds of the society were exclusively devoted to charitable and benevolent objects. The suppers and picnics which took place under the auspices of the society were all provided for financially by the attendance, without touching a cent of the funds of the society. Every Scotchman should give at least 50 cents a year towards a fund devoted to the support and relief of his fellow-countrymen who might need assistance. He hoped that the selection of officers would result in a choice which would see that the objects of the society were faithfully carried out and give the St. Andrew's Society of Peterborough the position it should occupy.

The financial statement, presented by Mr. Charles Cameron, gave a very satisfactory financial exhibit. The fiscal year opened with a credit balance of $160.68; to this was to be added the fees from 106 members, $3.20 for interest, and $8, the proceeds of church collection, making the total receipts $172.90. All the disbursements were for charity, $57.13, leaving a balance on the year's transactions of $115.77, and a total balance of $182.65. The membership fee was last year reduced from $1.00 to 50 cents; and, bearing in mind this, and the fact that every worthy case of charity was attended to, the financial showing was a most satisfactory one.

THE ELECTION OF OFFICERS

for the ensuing year resulted as follows:

PRESIDENT—Duncan McLeod.
1ST VICE-PRESIDENT—John Erskine.
2ND VICE-PRESIDENT—Melville Millar.
3RD VICE-PRESIDENT—Alex. Stewart.
CHAPLAIN—Rev. E. F. Torrance.
TREASURER—Thomas Menzies
SECRETARY—William Camming.
BARD—William Telford.
PHYSICIANS—J. T. J. Halliday, Duncan Fraser and R. W. Bell.
PIPER—Donald McDonald.
EXECUTIVE COMMITTEE—Town of Peterborough—D. D. Galletly, Peter Connal, Stewart Masson, John Logan, jr., Richard Hall, W. W. Johnston, John Patterson, Andrew Hewie, D. Fraser, M.D., Walter Paterson, jr., Geo. Noble, Jas. M. Masson, Archie Moffat. County of Peterborough—W. S. Roxburg, Norwood; John Breckenridge, Westwood; Jos. Tully, North Monaghan; Wm. Rutherford, South Monaghan; Charles Davidson, Smith; John Millar, Otonabee; David Rose, Dummer; Donald McFarlane, Keene. Ex-Officio—President and officers and all ex-Presidents.

Messrs. Stewart Masson and Archie Moffat were appointed auditors, and during the evening audited the accounts, and, pronouncing them correct, their report was adopted.

On motion of Mr. Erskine, seconded by Mr. M. Millar, the annual and quarterly meetings of the society were fixed for Thursday instead of Wednesday evenings, as prayer meetings coming on Wednesday evenings interfered with the attendance.

On motion it was decided that, as St. Andrew's day comes this year on Sunday, the annual dinner be held on Monday evening following.

Sell and Pay Up.

The message we have to convey may be put in these words, "Sell and pay up." Don't sell if you do not require to, and if you do not want to; but pay up your accounts anyway, or rather your debts. This notion of leaving accounts unpaid is ridiculous and old-fashioned. It should be obsolete. Non-payment of these debt at the time when they ought to be paid, and at the time, too, when everybody expects them to be paid, has a depressing and deadening effect on general business, and increases considerably the costs and worries of trade. It is the bounden duty of every man who owes two dollars, or ten dollars, or one hundred dollars to the merchant to go and pay it now, and not put it off till winter or spring. Bills due the Harness-maker should be paid now; and this is to be taken as a general intimation or command to all concerned to govern themselves accordingly, and promptly pay up.

It devolves upon the farmers at this particular season to set the money ball rolling. They have their harvest to realize upon, and fortunately it is a large harvest. Prices for wheat are low, too low, but for other farm produce fair figures are ruling. Barley is not so bad, compared with former years, except those abnormally high; oats and peas are good; hay, pork, beef live stock, butter, eggs, and a good many other things command good prices, and on the whole the farmer has had a good year. Farmers, then, should realize upon their surplus and pay their debts now. Let every farmer interested act upon this and come and get their Robes, Horse Blankets and Harness, of which I have a large and well-assorted stock, which I am determined to sell on a small margin.

Shaker Blood Syrup

Is designed to meet the wants of a large portion of our people who are either too poor to employ a physician or are too far removed to easily call one, and a still larger class who are not sick enough to require medical advice, and yet are out of sorts and need a medicine to build them up, give them an appetite, purify their blood and oil up the machinery of their bodies so it will do its duty willingly. No other article takes hold of the system and hits exactly the spot like Shaker Blood Syrup. It works like magic, reaching every part of the human body through the blood, giving to all renewed life and energy.

My friend, you need not take our word. Ask your neighbor, who has just taken one bottle, he will tell you that "it is the best dollar I ever invested."

Shaker Syrup Company: Dear Sirs,—Although greatly prejudiced against patent medicines in general, I was induced, from the excellent reports I had heard of your Blood Syrup, to try a bottle, last December, for dyspepsia and general prostration, and I have received very gratifying results from its use. I am now using the second bottle, and consider it a very valuable remedy for indigestion and its attendant troubles.

Yours truly,
O. F. TWITCHELL,
Gorham, N.H.

A gentleman who has been suffering from the Debility and Languor peculiar to this season says: "Shaker Blood Syrup is putting new life right into me. I have gained ten pounds since I began to take it." Has taken two bottles.

Shaker Blood Syrup is sold by all Druggists. Price, $1.00 per bottle, or six for $5.

PRAIRIE FIRES.

Very extensive prairie fires, says the Calgary Herald, have been raging in the vicinity of the railway at several points between Calgary and Gleichen during the past week, and a great deal of damage has been done. In this western country, where thousands of cattle feed out all winter, the loss can hardly be estimated. On the Military Company's Colonization lease alone, at least 70,00 acres have been burned over, and the stock scattered in all directions. The ranche buildings had a very close call, but by figuring the fire hard they were saved. The Government should at once institute some more effective means to check this growing evil.

If a Few Grains of Common Sense could be infused into the thick noddles of those who perpetually and alternately irritate and weaken their stomachs and bowels with drastic purgatives, they would use the highly accredited and healthful laxative and tonic, Northrop & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery and Dyspeptic Cure, which causes "good digestion to wait on appetite, and health on both."

THE FALL IN THE PRICE OF WHEAT

NOWHERE, AS COMPARED WITH

—AT—

LeBRUN'S.

It will pay Farmers better to sell their wheat now at present prices, and buy their Winter's supply of Clothing at the City Clothing Store while you can buy so very cheap, rather than run the chance of waiting to get a few cents more for their wheat and pay 25 per cent higher for their Clothing later on. The Farmers and LeBRUN are in the same position—both have large stocks on hand, and nothing will be gained by holding on to them at present. Sell your wheat now and exchange it for cheap clothing at LeBrun's.

I am determined to offer the bulk of my present very large stock without reserve for the next three months. Remember the prices will be lower than ever offered in Peterborough before.

JUST LOOK AT A FEW OF THE QUOTATIONS:

OVERCOATS—$4.50, $5.00, $6.00, $7.00, $9.00.

TWEED SUITS for $6.50, $8.00, $9.00, $10.00. These prices are fully 28 per cent lower than the regular prices.

ORDERED CLOTHING made up at prices to correspond in cheapness with the above, as for example:

FINE SUITS to order for $14.00, $15.00, and $16.00. No better value ever offered for the money. Activity in every department.

BOYS' AND YOUTHS' CLOTHING.—It will pay you to see our large stock. It is suitable for all ages; made nobby and genteel.

TWEEDS & FULLCLOTHS for common wear at very low prices. Can be cut on the premises free of charge.

UNDERWEAR—I have the best assortment of sizes, largest stock and cheapest Fall and Winter Underwear in Peterborough.

GLOVES.—I have a large assortment in this line, as I make a specialty of Gloves, and sell for less than any house in the trade.

SHIRTS, COLLARS AND CUFFS.—As usual, selling lower than any other house.

TIES.—The run on our Ties this season is immense. Our 25 cent Ties are equal in quality to any 50 cent Tie in the town.

My great aim has always been to give superior goods at inferior prices. My increased business shows how well I have succeeded.

PETERBOROUGH, NOV. 20, 1884.

The Epidemic in Lennox.

The trial of the election petition against the return of the sitting member for the Commons, Mr. Allison, resulted in his being unseated for corrupt acts on the part of agents. Mr. Pruyn, the petitioner, claimed the seat, but he, too, fell a victim of the epidemic of bribery, which seems to have fastened itself upon Lennox; and there will have to be a new election to select a representative, if indeed, the riding is worthy of being represented at all. The existence of wide spread bribery is not to be ignored, and is beyond apology or extenuation. The responsibility of so odious a political condition, can, however, be traced to one man, especially, and that man is Sir John Macdonald. Throughout his whole career he has been buttressed by bribery in one form or other; and it is due chiefly to him that it has in Canada been reduced so much to a science, and it is to him that the honour belongs of having organized the first Bribery Brigade in the history of civilized politics. His example and practice have been the chief factors in debauching the political public of Canada. Lennox is preeminent for distinction in this line, on account of Sir John's more particular association with it. In the general election of 1882 Sir John was returned for this riding, but his seat being petitioned against, it was found that his henchmen had, in his interest, honey-combed the constituency with political corruption and bribery. His evil example is pleaded by the ill-judged and enthusiastic young men whose operations in the last election led to the unseating of Mr. Allison. Thinking that a candidate of Sir John's party would be likely to pursue the same tactics as the chieftain, these young men claimed that they aimed to "fight the devil with fire." That they were doing so is proven by the result; for Mr. Pruyn, by reason of bribery, is excluded from the seat from which he sought to eject his opponent. It is lamentable that such political obliquity can exist, but, at the same time, it is well to remember who is responsible for it, and that "who" is none other than the man who has done so vastly much to lower the tone of public morality, whose motto and practice have been the evil one that the end justifies the means. With the fountain-head of a party corrupt, the stream itself cannot be pure, and that stream, mingling with another, must tend to make that corrupt also.

A Certificate of Character.

The managers of the party whose duty is to boom the forthcoming demonstration in Sir John's honor, doubtless reasoned, that by sending him abroad for a short time, his return would wake an enthusiasm, of which it was vain to hope for a spontaneous exhibition. But it seems they were sadly out in their calculations. By his visit to the Old Country, Sir John has received a certificate of character—so to speak—which shows him that the memory of his past iniquities does not sleep.

It appears that Mr. J. G. Bourinot of Ottawa, has published in England a book on "Parliamentary Procedure and Practice" in Canada. In the course of a very favorable review, the London Times pays a compliment to the working of the Canadian political system, but remarks that an "excellent system is compatible with grave defects. The Pacific Scandal on the public life of Canada." Who made this "huge blot," but Sir John, the hero of the Pacific Scandal? Though a portion of the people, blinded by prejudice, false promises and a greed of gain, condoned this crime and restored the criminal to political privileges, yet memory of it will never die but live a "huge blot" on the page of Canadian history. In the impending glorification of the Chieftain the credit and glory of the Pacific Scandal should not be forgotten. Sir John is expected to return to Canada the first week in December, and the "grand demonstration" in honor of his fortieth year, will take place on Wednesday and Thursday, December 17th and 18th. In connection with this and the remarks of the London Times, mentioned above, it might stimulate the enthusiasm of some of Sir John's local admirers, to remind them that it was in Peterborough on a public platform that the chieftain, who is to be honored for his "scrupulous regard for his personal honor," strenuously denied his guilt in regard to the Pacific Scandal. It was here that he "got off" that dramatic scene in which, with his hands upraised to heaven he exclaimed, "These hands are clean!" while at the same time they were literally black with the stain of the "huge blot," as Sir John himself, admitted before the Royal commission, when he swallowed on oath his emphatic denial of guilt made in this town. When it is proposed to deal out fandation and glory to the immaculate Chieftain of forty years, it is only natural that the little exception above noted be addessed, to prove, as his admirers may say, the rule.

Turnbull calls special attention to his Gentlemen and Ladies' Underclothing, just bought and to be sold at remarkably low prices.

Agricultural Education.

We are pleased to notice that, under the management of Dr. Tassie, principal, the Peterborough Collegiate Institute, assumes a wider sphere of usefulness. Such schools usually pay particular attention to the range of studies designed to fit pupils for the so-called learned professions. This the Peterborough Institute still does; but, in addition there are taught commercial subjects, tending to fit young men for business careers, and this month there have been established classes in agricultural chemistry. This concession to the educational requirements of the farming community, is only in accord with the drift of public opinion and educational practice, which obtain more and more every day. There can be no question, though a "liberal education" is not to be despised, that, for farmers' sons, who intend to follow the paternal profession—and the greater number of them should do so—the study of agricultural chemistry will be far more beneficial than many of the subjects generally taught in high, or even public schools. If the demands of the farm require that the son leave school at an early age, it is obviously to the lad's advantage that the greater amount of his education should be of that character which will prove of most practical utility in his future calling. Necessarily, however, the information of this kind imparted, cannot be the fullest, but it can be made a beginning—it is a step in the right direction. It will be a nucleus around which in his leisure hours, a farmer's son will gather a liberal store of agricultural knowledge. The possession of it will create a thirst for more, and the young man's life will take therefrom a turn for investigation and self-instruction, that cannot but react powerfully on the practical pursuit of his calling. Another tendency will be to elevate the profession of farming, and make farmer's sons not only more content with, but even enthusiastic in their calling, and largely neutralize the mischievous mania that too largely prevails, for leaving the farm and seeking the crowded ranks of third-rate physicians, small-bore lawyers, agents, peddlars, etc, etc. In the winter season every farmer's son has some months of leisure, and he can spend that leisure to no better advantage, than by attending the agricultural classes in the Peterborough Collegiate Institute. This school is now provided with a first-class staff of teachers, and young men who do not desire or require a specific course of agricultural lessons, will find in the commercial and other departments, abundant advantages for profitably putting in a few months of study.

The Coming Cholera.

Without wishing to take alarmist views we may state that it is the opinion of medical experts that the dreadful scourge of the cholera will visit this continent next year. After decimating several cities of Europe the past summer, it has now gained a foothold in Paris, France, and is committing great ravages. From Paris to England is a short step, and from England to Canada, with the extensive frequency of commercial intercourse, the transition is easily forseen. In view of the almost certainty of its visit it is wise to take every practicable precaution for lessening the severity of its ravages. The experience of last year in Europe was that the cholera respect the richest harvests in the cities whose neglect of sanitary arrangements and whose public filthiness merely invited its attacks. In this connection the people of Peterborough should arouse themselves and second every attempt of the local Board of Health to put the town in the greatest possible state of cleanliness. The more closely we attend to sanitary matters the less will be the destruction of life from a visit of the cholera, if it should come. New York city is setting its house in sanitary order for the visit of the pestilence, and the necessity for Peterborough attending to the matter is great. We feel certain that the people will wisely decide to co-operate with the Board of Health and its officers in their attempts to make the sanitary condition of the town as perfect as it is possible to do. Then, if the cholera should come next year we will have done our best to reduce it ravages to a minium, and if it pass us by we shall be all the more free from danger of attack from other epidemics and general diseases. In neither event will the labour be lost.

Editorial Notes.

Her Majesty has been pleased to bestow upon Sir John Macdonald the Grand Cross of the Order of the Bath. This is very considerate of the Queen. No public man needs a "Bath" so much as the hero of those celebrated "clean hands."

The Philadelphia Times asserts that over 6,000 workmen are idle in that city. Yet Pennsylvania is one of the most intensely protective States of the American Union and gave Blaine, the protection candidate for the presidency, an immense majority. Making a country rich by high taxation is beautiful in theory, but it doesn't insure the poor man bread nor labour. It is a game from which politicians and monopolists reap all the advantage.

The Tory journals are assuming to laugh at the Reform journals which opposed the annexation of Jamaica, on the ground that the proposal to annex had not been formally made. Probably so, but the Reform journals recollect, as the country must do, that the Canada Pacific Railway bargain, a far more serious matter, was sprung upon Parliament without a moment's notice and pushed through by the help of a "brute" majority, without giving an opportunity of proper consideration and discussion. Therefore, it was well to be ware of the Jamaica juggle in time.

The Mail complains that the managers of the Canadian Pacific Railway, though backed in England by the personal influence of Sir John and Sir Tupper, have been unable to "raise money for branches" (in the North-West), and adds that the evil effect of "last year's agitation still lingers." This is practically pure bosh. If the Tory Government had not been so anxious to bind the North-West under the power of a huge monopoly, private enterprise would, long ago, have found funds and built all needed branch lines. The country would not be suffering as it is now for railway communication, and its settlement would not have been retarded. Muddle seems to mark all the doings of the Tory Government when it seeks to promote the interest of monopolies at the sacrifice of those of the people.

Peterborough Markets.

PETERBOROUGH, Nov. 19, 1884

Receipts of grain very moderate. About the only change is the decline in wheat, spring selling 68c. to 70c., with fall about the same; Arnecta wheat, very little offering and sells at 55c. to 57c. In barley not much doing, the prices obtained being from 50c. to 65c. as to colour. Rye sells at 50c. Peas, 55c. to 60c.; very little doing neither. Oats in fair demand at 32c. On the Market Saturday a good deal of stuff was offered. Keg butter is now selling from 16c. to 19c., a few extra kegs bringing 20c.; fresh rolls and prints, 20c. to 22c.; in crocks, 16c. to 18c. Eggs slow at 20c., selling in lots at 18c. to 19c.; not many offering. Poultry plentiful, but sells fairly well: chickens, 40c. to 50c.; geese, 40c. to 50c.; turkeys, 50c. to 80c. These are about the average prices obtained. Beef, by the quarter, $5.00 to $5.50 for fore, and $5.50 to $6.50 for hind quarters. Dressed hog, $5.50 to $5.75; offering more freely. Apples by the barrel, $2.00 to $2.50; in bags, 75c. to $1.00; fair demand. Potatoes alowish at 40c. per bag. Other commodities unchanged.

THE MIDDLE STATE.

To The Editor of THE EXAMINER.

No argument is required to demonstrate the fact that truth is ever old and ever new. It embodies, as it were, that intrinsic merit which the lapse of time serves only to render more beautiful, captivating and distinguished. In every age and clime the pursuit of so noble an enterprise has justly engaged the best intellectual talent which the human race affords. So true is this observation indeed, that, barring the domain of mechanical invention and discovery, it has now become a somewhat difficult task to discourse upon topics of special interest to people in general, that have not been oft and better handled in bygone centuries. Yea, by the master minds of our contemporaries even, the very subjects which one is wont to discuss, have been analyzed, criticised, embellished to that degree, until there remains only for mediocrity the sorry toil of compiling borrowed material, and thereafter clothing it in a style of language corresponding with limited experience and capacity.

Having for its object the re-affirmation, the re-exposition of the

nothing more than above suggested will be essayed in the present article. Any attempt at originality in this line would properly be termed, on the part of the writer, a cool exhibit of folly and presumption. But inasmuch as the subject in hand pertains to the welfare of the immortal soul, its utility and importance cannot truthfully be gainsaid or overestimated. Hence the advisability, the necessity of an earnest and prospective view in this regard, (of seizing time by the forelock) is abundantly manifest to the rational mind.

Created for a purpose—that we may know, love and serve our Maker in this life, and thereby enjoy Him forever in the world to come—by a God of infinite goodness and wisdom, we abide here for a brief period in the role of pilgrims, and our speedy exit is certain and irrevocable. "Whither am I going?" is a query of momentous import to every child of Adam. That the good will be rewarded with eternal happiness has too much quality of the axiom to need proof or assertion. That the bad merit and will receive for their portion an eternal hell, is generally conceded by the great body entitled Christians. But that the neither very good nor very bad pass not, in the first instance, either to hell or heaven, but to

is a doctrine more peculiar to the Catholic church, among the diverse religious denominations laying claim to Christianity.

Eve, with a parity and an intelligence beyond our comprehension, was persuaded by Satan that the consumption of the forbidden fruit, on her part, so far from being injurious, would prove to her a source of incalculable benefit. The dire and immutable enemy of God, of human kind, of happiness of what description soever, the crafty old adversary pictured by St. Peter as going about like a roaring lion, seeking whom he may entice and devour, was deeply interested in encompassing her destruction. And, were it not that the Son of God subsequently became incarnate, and from the height of Calvary at the same time, redeemed his fallen brethren, and overwhelmed the Satanic hosts, the Prince of Demons would have effectually accomplished her ruin, and, in consequence, that also of her unfortunate offspring. Has then this antithesis of all that is useful, noble and desirable changed his vicious nature, his malign propensities, meanwhile, that his wiles and subtle machinations, his are less to be dreaded now than at any preceding period of our history? Obviously not. He is one and the self-same, a thief, a fraud, a liar, a fiend, a—in fine—everything that is odious and detestable beyond comparison or conception, and this alike to-day, to-morrow and forever. Unquestionably for his interest it is that hell should be regarded as a bugbear, that purgatory should be considered as the issue of ignorance and superstition. Since by such cruel deception he may lull his dupes and victims into a state of fancied security, whilst with fiendish joy he prepares to reap the fruit of what he has sown—to witness the punishment in a middle state of one class whom, to his lasting grief, he could not utterly corrupt, and to take unto his own, unto eternal torments, a second class voluntarily electing, in this life, to entertain and execute his impious suggestions in contempt of the known will and commands of Almighty God.

Clearly and convincingly the existence of a middle state is evidenced by Scripture, by the fathers, by reason and common sense. And first by Scripture. In the twelth chapter of second Machabees, 43 to 46 inclusive, it is related that money was forwarded to Jerusalem in order that sacrifice might be offered for the sins of the dead. "For if he" (Judas) the zealous high-priest and commander of the Jews, "had not hoped that they that were slain should rise again, it would have seemed to pray for the dead." "It is, therefore a holy and wholesome thought to pray for the dead that they may be loosed from their sins. Presumably those idolatrous souls for whom sacrifice was offered up, had incurred the guilt of mortal sin. Yet were they brethren of Judas; and this magnanimous man—obviously on the hypothesis of repentance before death—sought, in accordance with his noble nature, to alleviate the anguish of such as might have been consigned to an intermediate state, since a presupposal of their condemnation would render the oblation an idle farce and a solemn mockery. Sense should be predicated of the act and not nonsense. But the authority is rated apocryphal. Otherwise, says the Apostolical canons, Tertullian, St. Cyprian, St. Hilary, St. Ambrose, St. Augustine, the third council of Carthage, the Council of Trent. And if Origen and St. Jerome termed these books apocryphal in the sense that they were not in the Hebrew canon compiled by Esdras, being written after that time; yet they sometimes quoted them as of divine authority, which is striking evidence of the weight and credibility which they attached to them. But suppose the question of the inspiration of these books was mooted by some of the ancients; several parts of the New Testament, which are admitted by Protestants, have no less been called in question. Luther characterized the Catholic epistle of St. James, for instance,

AN EPISTLE OF STRAW.

Now, however it is regarded as sufficiently inspired. Moreover, long anterior to the so-called Reformation, when, confessedly, the church of Christ was readily distinguishable, that church (third council of Carthage) to whom the definition and propagation of faith and morals was entrusted, and whom not to hear was to become like unto the heathen and the publican; that church pronounced the books of Machabees inspired and of equal authority with other portions of Scripture. At all events, Protestants allow these books historical credit as exemplifying the belief and practices of the Jews. And nowhere do we find our Redeemer reprehending their belief in the doctrine of a middle state. On this head a Protestant no less candid and conspicuous than the learned Dr. Jeremy Taylor thus pertinently expresses himself: "We find by the history of the Machabees, that the Jews did pray and make offerings for the dead, which appears by other testimonials, and by their form of prayer still extant, which they used in the captivity. Now, it is very considerable, that since our Savior did reprove all the evil doctrines and traditions of the Scribes and Pharisees, and did argue concerning the dead and the resurrection, yet He spoke no word against this public practice, but which he who came to declare to us the will of His Father, would not have done, if it had not been innocent, pious and full of charity. The practice of it was first, and was universal, it being plain in Tertullian, S. Cyprian, etc." At that time the Jews were the special objects of their Creator's care and affection, occupying a relative position akin to that now held by Christians. Wherefore we cannot doubt that in so essential a doctrine Almighty God would not perpetually lead them into error. But when, or in what manner, or by whom has purgatory been abolished, that the bare recital of its existence often calls forth ridicule and vituperation from the imprudent subjects of a quasi involuntary hallucination: To continue. There occurs in these words: "He (Christ) descended into hell." Not to that abode, it is obvious, out of which there is no redemption, but to Limbo, the middle state or purgatory of the Jews, where the souls of the faithful dying before the crucifixion of their Lord were awaiting redemption. St. Peter expresses himself to the same effect when he says that Christ coming "preached to those spirits that were in prison." In like manner did Christ have this prison of purgation and reconciliation in mind when he declared that blasphemy against the Holy Ghost shall not be forgiven either in this world or in the world to come. Why this emphatic affirmation that blasphemy against the Holy Ghost shall not be forgiven in the world to come? Christ addressed these words to the Jews, who believed that some sins would be forgiven in the world to come—purgatory—after suitable probation. He was not accustomed to utter words without sense or signification, and took into consideration the beliefs and practices obtaining among the Jews when He sought to give them instruction. Again—in Matt. v., 25, 26—Christ speaks of this prison in a future life whence no man may escape until to the last farthing. "Fire," says St. Paul, "shall try every man's work, etc.; if the work burn, he shall suffer loss, yet shall he be saved so as by fire." Herein punishment by fire or an equivalent chastisement in a middle state is plainly indicated. The demands of justice being fully satisfied, the transgressor is saved and enters into glory. True it is that as the tree falls so shall it always lie. At his decease the doom of every man is unalterably fixed for eternal life or death, which does not exclude temporary purification before final judgment, seeing that purgatory, albeit a painful resort, is yet a secure pathway to the realms of endless bliss. As the tree falls to the north or south, to the east or west, so far hell or heaven is the soul destined at the particular judgment. And if not for heaven forthwith, yet shortly and beyond possibility of doubt. Further, we are reminded that men must render an account for every idle word they speak. Surely, for a few idle words that, at death, have not been sincerely repented or wholly atoned for, a hell of eternal torments is too unjust and absurd to be entertained seriously for a moment. Nor yet, as St. John assures us, can anything defiled enter heaven. Hence, it appears that, to the class indicated, a middle state is the only alternative.

THE APOSTLE'S CREED

Second, the doctrine is proved by reference to the fathers and doctors of the early church. These holy and learned men, in point of time, being nearer Christ, the source of divine authority, in all probability had, at least, conceptions of Christian doctrine as solid and accurate as any that we may possess. Let us attend to them earnestly, and with motive and desire single for the truth as it is manifested by them. Earliest among Latin Christian writers we find that Tertullian, mentioning certain says, "we make yearly offerings for the dead;" and states, moreover, that if a widow does not pray for the soul of her deceased husband she has, as much as lies in her, divorced him—that is to say, has neglected her bounden duty. St. Cyril, of Jerusalem, says, we mention the faithful departed to pray for them. In the Apostolical constitutions, which the Protestant Whiston would rank as canonical, occurs this passage: "Let us pray for those who are departed in peace." Among Oriental Christians, some of whom have been separated from the mother church since the fifth or sixth century, it is significant that there is no liturgy used by them in which prayer for the dead does not occur. And here it is not inappropriate to inquire if these Eastern Christians are not as likely to understand as correctly the customs current among the earlier Christians, and to comprehend the sense of Holy writ as accurately as do the opponents of a middle state. Again, St. Cyprian speaks of one's being cast into prison until the last farthing is paid, of sins being cleansed a long time by fire and purged away by suffering. A priest, says St. Chrysostom, is the intercessor to God for the sins both of the living and of the dead, and adds that the practice of praying for the dead was decreed by the Apostles. By punishment after death, remarks St. Clement, of Alexandria, men must expiate every the least sin ere they can enter heaven. Origen and Lactantius teach at large that all souls are purged by

THE PUNISHMENT OF FIRE

before entering into bliss, unless they are so pure as not to stand in need of it. The great St. Augustine teaches that prayer, sacrifice and alms relieve the faithful departed, who are detained in purgatory. Monica, his mother, begged him to pray for her after death, which he punctually performed, and likewise recommended the souls of his parents to the prayers of others. St. Ephrem entreated his friends to pray for him after his decease. St. Athanasius, author of the well-known creed bearing his name, prayed earnestly for the soul of Constans, the brother of the Emperor Constantine. "Bury me," said Constantine the Great, "in the porch of the church of the apostles, that I may enjoy the communication of holy prayers, the mystical sacrifice and the divine ceremonies. In his funeral oration on the Emperor Theodosius, "Neither will I," said St. Ambrose, "forsake him, till by tears and prayers I shall bring the man whither his merits call him, unto the holy mountain of the Lord." St. Bernard observes that souls delivered and brought to glory by our endeavors will

AMPLY REPAY OUR KINDNESS.

To the same effect testifies the Ven. Bede, the Provincial Council (816) held in presence of Kenulf, King of Mercia, the Council of Oxford, held in the year 1222, and the Council of Florence (1439), at which the Greeks and Latins were reunited—the latter council expressly affirming purification after death by the pains of purgatory. Dr. Johnson, the intellectual giant, prayed for the soul of his deceased wife. And among pagans conspicuous for intelligence and morality there are not wanting those who professed their belief in the existence of a middle state in the world to come.

Third, the question at issue is

From the testimony of St. John we have seen, what our good sense readily and naturally suggests, that not the slightest impurity may be introduced into heaven. However, we are made aware that a soul, giving way to the gratification of every criminal passion in this life, merits that eternal punishment which it is so sure to receive. But where one dies neither at mortal enemity with God, nor yet so pure that some slight stain rests not on the soul, or some trifling debt for a minor offense remains uncancelled, an eternity of hell for such a person would outrage every perception of justice, whilst the introduction of anything defiled into the immediate presence of God is manifestly impossible. There remains, therefore,

THE ONLY ALTERNATIVE

for the venial sinner, a temporary purgation in some state which is neither hell nor heaven, and which, for convenience, is usually denominated purgatory or the middle state. As regards correction founded upon motives of love, our Heavenly Father deals with us on the same principle that an earthly parent treats his erring child. The offence not being so great that the parent is prepared to cast out the child forever, the penitent is forgiven, but chastised, in order to correct his evil tendencies, to make him sensible of his ingratitude and to ensure future obedience and filial conduct. As the fear of God is the beginning of wisdom, so the fear which is impressed upon the self-willed child leads it up by degrees to the love and reverence of its parent. That such correction is necessary and beneficent one cannot doubt, when one reflects that man is prone to evil from his youth. To illustrate further from the

"NO-HELL STANDPOINT."

A man has a mortal hatred of his neighbor. He resolves upon his death, and, meeting him unaware and unarmed in a lonely locality, he sets upon and slays him. But meanwhile he is not unobserved. A friend of his victim, witnessing the deed, sends, without further delay, a bullet crashing through his brains. Instantly his soul takes its flight—but where? To hell, one would ejaculate at the first impulse. But hell has been mentally eliminated. To heaven, then, direct? O, what blind audacity! Where, then, but to the middle state of the Jews, of the Oriental Christians, of the Fathers of the Church, of Holy Writ itself, of reason and common sense. Witness, moreover, the manner in which the state disposes of its criminals. Offences of the first grade merit life-imprisonment or the gallows. The culprit is forever cut off from human society, exactly akin—in proportioned ratio of value which the body bears to the soul—to the awful punishment of hell. But, for a briefer period of confinement at hard labor suffices. On the completion of the allotted time and service, the wrong-doer is restored to his former privileges. Likewise, on a higher scale, is correction meted out to the citizens of purgatory, and with equal justice, save with this difference that, being freed at length from suffering, they enjoy thenceforth such delights and advantages as they had never anticipated. Indeed, there is now a tendency among anti-hell advocates to admit the reason and necessity of a middle state. In the recent past a Universalist minister of more than local repute, and known to the writer, resented from the pulpit, and with much warmth and indignation, the allegation that it is a tenet of Universalism that every soul, without distinction, passes immediately from the couch of death to the infinite enjoyments of heaven. The panacea was, of course, the antique purgatory metamorphosed, for the sake of euphony, into the middle state. Henry Ward Beecher also, to the best of our recollection, similarly expresses himself. So far so good. And, later on, the omniscient hell-hater may, perhaps, concede a veritable reality to the infidel's Nemesis, or dire retributive forces personified by his Hadean majesty.

An additional word in conclusion concerning the nature of purgatorial punishment. That an intermediate state of a punitive character obtains, is all that is pronounced upon positively. Whether it be that the soul is tormented by material or immaterial fire, or whether it be the deprivation for a time of the presence of God and the happiness of Heaven, or whether it be enhanced consciousness of the enormity of sin, be it any or all of the factors assigned, it matters not so that is present and actual. Within the scope of this relation one is free to opine ad libitum. Opinions on this head are many and various, being yet in harmony with the rule above expressed. Several learned fathers, however, and among others the renowned St. Augustine, are of the opinion that fire serves the requisite purpose. Says the latter, commenting on the words of St. Paul: "It is said, he will be saved, as it were, by fire. Because it is said, he will be saved, that fire is contemned. Yet it will be more grievous than whatever a man can suffer in this life. You know how much wicked men have suffered here, and can suffer. Good men may undergo as much; and what did any malefactor ever endure which martyrs have not suffered for Christ? All these torments are much more tolerable. Yet see how men do all things rather than suffer them. How much more reason have they to do what God commands them, that they may escape his torment? Thus much as a sample from the fourth century.

In more modern times a well known Englishman—Ven. Bede—eminent both for piety and learning, testifies: "Purgatory fire will be more intolerable than all the torments that can be felt or conceived in this life." Severe as the pains of purgatory may be, the fact of their temporary nature renders them infinitely preferable to the lot of the condemned, inasmuch as the souls in purgatory have a certainty of eventually acquiring a paradise of divine pleasantness for all eternity. Rest assured that purgatory is no do-nothing, suffer-nothing, go-as-you-please, passively idiotic abode brought into being simply as a time-killer. On the contrary, it serves a very necessary and useful purpose; and the effort made to lop off the idea of purgative intent, goes to establish more emphatically the fact of previous firm-grounded belief in its existence. It has been seen how earnestly the learned doctors and fathers of the early church insisted upon the necessity of aiding the citizens of purgatory—an earnestness and a necessity arising, most assuredly, from the belief that these unhappy prisoners were in extreme need of our prayer and intercession, by reason of the severity of their condition and their total inability to contribute, in any degree, to their own relief. Through the most charitable and praiseworthy motives, therefore, is the sacrifice of the altar being continually offered up for them throughout the Catholic world—and anything to the contrary notwithstanding. Cardinal Newman, in passing, as he did, slowly and deliberately from the church of England to the church of Rome, with all its attendant "horrors," and train of terrific sequences, received (and now accepts) unqualifiedly, the essential tenet that some souls suffer for a time in an intermediate ere they enter Heaven. Applying his powerful and conscientious mind to this ancient conviction, he saw naught in it to militate against justice and right reason. And the like may be affirmed of other notable and comparatively recent accessions to the "honey-combed Roman Communions," among whom suffice it to instance, Cardinal Howard, Monsignor Capel, Brownson, the peerless American essayist and reviewer, Dr. Stone, ex-president of an American college, and so forth. Strange it is that Catholic doctrine is so little understood, so much distorted among Protestants, since upon every imaginable topic affecting Catholicity a host of masterly treatises are to be had for a moderate consideration. But in non-Catholic book stores these treatises are almost invariably and rigorously excluded. Every Catholic heart would rejoice to see their holy religion apprehended as it is, and not as it is misrepresented. And surely it were no harm to examine both sides of a contention thoroughly and dispassionately before jumping at conclusions, for passion and prejudice, acting upon misconception of facts, must necessarily play havoc with judgment and reason.

PAY OR NO PAY,

It was an aphorism of Frederick the Great's that "facts are divine things." An undisputed fact is that Dr. Pierce's "Golden Medical Discovery" is the most powerful liver vitaliser extant, and by its characteristic and searching action will cure dyspepsia, constipation, dropsy, kidney disease, sick-headache, and other maladies which, popular opinion to the contrary notwithstanding, are directly traceable to a diseased condition of the liver, by which its work as purifier of the blood is made incomplete. LOVE FOR A DAY!

"How long is it since you have tasted food?" I asked her.

"Two whole days," she replied.

Her white quivering hands and trembling hands bore testimony to the truth of her words. Lady Yorke looked at me.

"We must help them," she said; and, as she uttered the words, it seemed to me that a new soul shone in her eyes.

We left the house and went to the nearest shops.

"Tell me what to buy, Miss Chester," she said; and a basket of food, including some fine ripe oranges, was ordered to be taken to the woman's house.

The poor creature never thought of herself. I shall never forget the cry with which she seized an orange and gave it to the child. It was one of delirious delight.

"I shall do all I can for you," said Lady Yorke, as she came away. "If we can save little Annie, she shall be saved."

And again I saw tears in the blue eyes which until now had never looked out on other's woes.

CHAPTER VII.

The next morning Lady Yorke was down-stairs, alert and energetic, before nine. Her husband looked up in surprise as he entered the breakfast-room. This happened to be one of the rare days when we were alone.

"A revolution!" he cried. "The most luxurious woman in England down at the early hour of nine. I cannot understand it."

"Do not laugh at me, Stanley," she said. "I am very much in earnest this morning. I want to talk to you."

When she had sought him before it had generally been to ask either for new jewels, or a cheque for some heavy bill — always something for herself, never anything for any one else; and I am sure that he expected the same thing now.

"I want to talk to you, Stanley," she continued. "Do you know what the world is like outside our park gates? Here we have safety and shelter, warmth and luxury—the roses of life without the thorns. Do you know what it is outside?"

"I know something of it," he replied, half sadly.

"Ah, such a world, Stanley," she said. "There is sickness, sorrow, poverty, hunger. Hunger seems the hardest to bear," she continued, thinking no doubt of those tragical words, 'He died hungry;' "and I have heard such words, but I never knew what they meant. I knew only the sound, not the sense, until yesterday." Here she paused.

"And then?" said Lord Yorke, "What happened then?"

She told him all that had occurred. Just for one half moment I was uncertain as to whether he would be quite pleased or not. Had I been mistaken in thinking that he was sometimes distressed at her supreme indifference to all things except herself? My doubts were soon cleared. He looked at her with the most loving smile I had ever seen on his face.

"I am glad, Louise," he said. "I have always thought that, if you understood more of what was going on in the world around you, you would try to help others. And now about this poor woman—Mrs. Clinton, did you say? What do you want to do for her?"

"Everything," was the comprehensive reply. "She must have a nice clean cottage in the fresh air, plenty of food and clothes—all that is wanted to make her daughter well."

"She shall have it," Lord Yorke said, smiling. "You could not employ your time or your money better than in relieving the poor. But all charity must be governed by discretion. While the woman and child are ill, keep them; but afterwards, although you can go on helping her, let her work for herself. It will be greater charity to place the means of gaining her livelihood in her hands than to give her money enough to live upon."

"I see that," she replied gravely. "Oh, Stanley, if I had only thought before now, how many people I might have saved. It must be a terrible thing to die of hunger."

He laid his hand lightly on her beautiful head.

"It is never too late to mend," he said. "I have often wished that you could give a little of your time and attention to charity."

"Why did you not tell me so?" she asked, eagerly.

"My dear Louise," there comes a time when every one wakes to the realities of life. Your time had not come."

"I shall never be so careless again. I feel as though through all these years I had truly been asleep," said Lady Yorke.

Then they discussed what was best to be done. Lord Yorke suggested that one of the pretty cottages built on modern principles which stood just outside Woodheaton, should be given to the poor woman rent-free until she was better. Lady Yorke was to allow her so much each week until she could earn money herself.

"You must remember one thing, Louise," said his lordship, "that you will meet with many cases quite as pitiful as this, and that it will not do to give all to one."

The next time he met me he took my hand and held it for a moment in his. He looked at my black dress.

"From your own sorrows," he said, "you have learned to feel for others. Heaven bless you!"

Then I knew that he was well pleased that I had tried to draw his beautiful young wife from her self-worship and interest her in others.

The next evening, at dessert, she looked critically at some fine grapes that were on her plate. Two days earlier she would have sent them away; now her eyes sought mine, and I knew she was thinking, "What would little sick Annie give for them?"

It was a small beginning, but it would lead to greater things. Gradually Lady Yorke woke from her long lethargy. She began to interest herself in her own servants, to understand that each one had a mission to perform on the earth, and she resolved from that, day forth to find what her's was, and do her duty towards carrying it out.

CHAPTER VIII.

I had found so little to interest me in the generality of guests at Westwood, that I thought very little of the coming visitors. It was evident that Lady Yorke was deeply interested in them. But then she had said candidly that it was Lord Severne rather than his wife who had pleased her. We had many discussions about them, and it seemed to me that Lady Severne did not stand very high in the estimation either of husband or wife. Lord Yorke, who was kindness and charity itself, mentioned her always in a tone of toleration, yet at the same time leaving an impression that she was what Lady Yorke called a "power."

"Is Lady Severne very beautiful?" I asked Lady Yorke on the morning when her guests were expected to arrive.

"Very; she has one of those faces with a constant bloom, and her complexion is simply incomparable. But, beautiful as she is, I do not like her. You are a good judge of character; you will be able to judge for yourself when they come."

Lord and Lady Severne were to reach Westwood on Tuesday, the twentieth of May. Lady Yorke had ordered a lavish supply of magnificent flowers to be placed in Lady Severne's room.

"That is one point in her character which I like," said Lady Yorke; "she is very fond of flowers. It pleases me always to see a woman fond of flowers." Then she continued, with something of a conscious blush on her face, "Miss Chester, I know I shall be very much engaged while the Severnes are here, but I must not neglect my poor. I hope I shall never fall again into that terrible, apathetic way of thinking of no one but myself. If it be really impossible for me to leave home, you will undertake any little commission for me, will you not?"

I would have gone anywhere for her. I was so rejoiced to see the earnest, kindly expression on the face that had once revealed nothing but self-love and discontent.

Every preparation had been made for our visitors. Lady Mary Avon and her brother Sir Charles were two handsome, fashionable persons, rich and popular. Lady Mary had many admirers, but could not tolerate the word "marriage;" Sir Charles was looking out for a wife. Captain Forrester was heir-presumptive to an earldom, and was consequently much sought after. Sir Harry de Burgh was a young Irish Baronet, one of the most popular men in England, and Lady Grey was a young widow with a large fortune.

"A well-assorted party of guests," said Lady Yorke complacently;" and the great beauty of the arrangement is that they will amuse each other. Lord Severne will generally fall to my lot, if the same thing happens here that took place invariably in Italy. He liked to saunter by my side in his grave, melancholy fashion, while Lady Severne generally attracted all the men to herself. She will do the same here. I am so glad," continued Lady Yorke, "that you sing so beautifully, Miss Chester. Lord Severne likes music. His wife sings, but he does not care for her style, and always discourages her."

Tuesday came, a bright morning, but with the warning of a coming rain-storm on its face. There was a low wail in the wind, a darkening at times of the sky, a strange stillness in the air such as always precedes a storm.

It was mid-day when a message came from Woodheaton, asking help for a poor family, one of whom—the father—was dangerously ill, the wife had met with a severe accident, and the children were destitute. The poor were beginning to know to whom they should send; they were beginning to love Lady Yorke, for they knew that no one ever asked her help in vain. She came to me and asked me to act for her.

"I must be here to receive our visitors," she said. "I give you carte blanche, Miss Chester."

So it was as Lady Yorke's almoner that I went out on that day. Lord Yorke bade me beware of the threatening storm, but I told him that I did not think it would break until the morrow. But, when I was on the point of returning from Woodheaton, the rain descended in torrents. For an ordinary shower I should not have cared in the least, but this storm was terrible. It seemed as though the heavens were opened, such a tempest raged on that fair, tranquil country-side. The sky was like lead, the wind blew fiercely; and then lightning flashed and the thunder came. The storm lasted some hours; and when the sky cleared and the rain ceased it was night. Lady Yorke, who was always kind and thoughtful, sent a closed carriage after me.

As we drove up the avenue, the carriage stopped suddenly, and the coachman sprang down from the box and came to me.

"Do you see what has happened, Miss Chester?" he asked.

Looking out, I saw by the pale, watery gleam of the moon that a great beech-tree, said to be the largest and finest of its kind in England, and called "The Pride of Westwood," had been blown down.

"Why, his lordship will be more grieved over this tree than if half the house had been blown down," said the coachman, in a grave voice. "I am very sorry, miss, but, you see, the branches reach all across the drive. I cannot take the carriage any farther; I must go back to the court-yard."

I saw that the honest, simple man, a faithful retainer of the House of Yorke, was deeply distressed. He shook his head as he led the frightened horse away.

"I never like such great trees to fall, Miss Chester," he said. "They are the glory of a house. I always think bad luck follows."

I cannot tell why, but, as I went to my room, a sense of oppression and coming sorrow seized me. I could not believe in the superstition that the falling of a great tree must mean evil. That was nonsense. But my heart was heavy, my brain oppressed.

Fortunately for me, I was a great favorite with Mrs. Masham, the housekeeper, and, when she heard that I had returned, she hastened to my room. Any idea I might have had of going to the drawing-room was speedily abandoned. She stood before me, stern as a judge.

"You look ill, Miss Chester. You have taken cold. You must go to bed, and I will send you something warm to drink."

I murmured a few words about the visitors and music, but she was peremptory.

"No, miss, not to-night. You must take care of yourself; you have been out in the wet all day amongst those poor people I know what it is; you must rest now. Her ladyship would desire it, I am sure."

There was nothing for it but to obey. Yet I could not sleep. The wind murmured sullenly through the wood, and the great branches rustled. My thoughts were full of the misery I had witnessed that day, of the terrible storm, of the fallen tree, and of the guests now under the same roof. Whenever the door opened, I could hear music and laughter. The house seemed all brilliancy and merriment. Mrs. Masham told me that the visitors had come. All words had failed her in trying to describe Lady Severne; she raised in speechless wonder her hands and eyes.

"Beauty does not come near it, Miss Chester," she said, after a time. "Our Lady Yorke is a beautiful woman, but Lady Severne's face dazzles one. The husband, Lord Severne, seems quiet: he is a handsome man, but very melancholy."

She contrived to give a fair description of all our visitors, and very much to my surprise, finished by saying:

"Ah, Miss Chester, you would be queen of them all if you did not look so sad and would not always wear [illegible] ing."

That night terrible dreams came to me of Mark. Mark was out in the storm, and I could not find him. Mark was struck by lightning, and lay before me, dead. Mark was under the fallen tree, mangled and crushed. My dreams were always of Mark in peril, in danger, and dead.

CHAPTER IX.

Wednesday morning—a day never to be forgotten; the twenty-first of May—a date ever to be remembered! I rose with the sun. The morning was so beautiful that one could hardly believe in the clouds and the storm of the day before. The air was sweet and fresh after the rain; the grass was of a brighter green, the leaves had a deeper hue, and the flowers held up their heads with renewed life.

When I opened my window, the odor of the lilacs came to me. I could see far away the golden gleam of the laburnum and the tall chestnut trees. The fragrance from the lilacs sent my mind and heart back to Mark. I remembered how he had always loved the early morning, the fresh, sweet air, the glint of the sun on the leaves. But he trod no more the green fields and woodland ways that he had loved so well; the music of wind and leaf reached him no longer. A longing impatience seized me for the time when I, in Heaven's mercy, should stand by his side again.

I forgot the terrors of the previous day; I forgot all about the visitors in the house. My heart was on fire with the anguish of my bitter desolation. Never since Mark had left me on that bright July morning had I longed so eagerly for his presence. I went out, for the house seemed all too small to hold me and my great sorrow—out where I could see the blue heavens. Ah me, how fair was the morning, and how sweet were the lilacs! It could not hurt me to dream for a few minutes, to loosen the bands that sorrow had bound round me, to weep as I had wept when Mark went from me.

I went to the lilac trees, fresher and sweeter than ever since the rain, and sat down. The warm May sunshine fell around me, the birds were calling to each other, the dew lay upon the grass. I tried to forget the present, and live for a short time in the past. I pictured the May morning at Gracedieu, on my seventeenth birthday, the pretty old home buried in the trees, the distant gleam of the river, the shade of the deep green woods, and the lovely group of lilac-trees, the topmost bough of which I could not reach. I saw the dark, handsome face of my lover, so frank, so brave, so true; his dark eyes smiled into mine; his voice, than which to me earth had held no sweeter music, was in my ears.

"Oh, Mark," I cried aloud, "why could I not have died with you?"

Merciful Heaven, what was that? I rose to my feet with a cry. What was it? A figure coming slowly toward me, tall and stately, but with a drooping head, walking with slow, uncertain step. Oh, Heaven, who was it—what was it? I stood paralyzed. My heart beat so violently that I could almost hear it; my hands shook; all the warmth and color left my face. White, breathless, trembling at the same moment with terror and joy, bewildered and amazed, I stood as though my feet were rooted to the ground. What was it?

Coming slowly towards me, yet not seeing me, buried in thought, the sunshine falling on his bowed head, was Mark. Surely, if Mark had ever lived, this was he? If the sun shone in heaven, if I was sane, that was Mark—Mark, or whom I had wept as dead—my handsome, true, dear lover, come back to me! I tried to utter his name, but the sound died on my lips. I tried to move towards him, I could not stir. He was coming nearer. Ah, yes, it was Mark! Oh, my heart! I could have cried out in gratitude to Heaven, and have died. I saw the strong dear hands that had held my own; I saw the dark face, older and sadder than when we parted; I saw the loving eyes, full now of wistful sadness.

He was not dead then, but living and well! He had doubtless been to Gracedieu in search of me, and the Rector, with whom I had left my address, had sent him hither. He had been to the house to ask for me, and the servants had told him I was out in the park. He would explain his long, cruel absence. He had come back to me; he was true and loyal; he had come to make me his wife; and I—oh, Heaven, I should be happy at last.

He was nearer to me now. I grasped the low branch of a tree to keep me from falling. I called to Heaven to give me strength. My heart beat madly, my brain burned, my senses seemed almost to have left me. I saw only him, and as he came to the trees where I was standing I cried:

"Mark! Mark!"

I was mad—Heaven forgive me—quite mad. My mother had warned me not to make an idol of any creature; and here I was on my knees before this idol that I had made for myself. I kissed his hands, sobbing the while as though my heart would break, tears raining from my eyes. I could only cry:

"Mark, Heaven has sent you back to me. Oh, my love, how I love you!"

He raised me in his arms. Once again the strong clasp held me; once again the arms of my true love were around me. Would to Heaven the angel of death had smitten me as I lay there!

I heard him cry, "Nellie! Is it you, Nellie?" and the sound of the dearly-loved voice drove me mad again. I clung to him and kissed him with an anguish of passion known only to those who love as I loved.

"You have come back to me from the dead," I cried. "Oh, my love, welcome! I have never doubted you, Mark, all through the weeks and months and years. I have loved you just the same. I said always that if you were living you would come; if dead, I would take my love and faith untarnished to you. Speak to me, Mark. I have hungered for the sound of your voice and for the sight of your face. Speak to me."

I heard him whisper words that seemed to me like a prayer.

"My true, loyal Nellie!" he said.

"I knew you would come to me if living, Mark. Of late, as you did not come, I felt sure that you were dead. I have never doubted you for one moment, Mark."

HON. MR. MACKENZIE'S HEALTH.

Hon Alex. Mackenzie has returned from New York after having consulted a noted physician there. It is to be regretted that the reports are far from favorable. His complaint is said to be what is commonly known as progressive or creeping paralysis.

The Boundary Line

Between comfort and discomfort is often very slight. Have you rheumatism or neuralgia? or are you a sufferer from obscure nervous pains? Why suffer longer? You can purchase for 10 cents a bottle of that king of pain—Polson's NERVILINE, or you can get a large bottle for 25 cents. It cures promptly. It is sure, pleasant to take, and never fails to cure all kinds of pain. Don't wait an hour, but send to any drug store and get a trial bottle. Nerviline, the sure pain cure.

WORTHY OF IMITATION.

The French Senate has abolished the system of life senatorships. Wonder what could be done to induce our Canadian Senators to follow this noble example? We fear the Canadian House of Refuge for incapables cannot be inspired in the direction indicated. It is an expensive and thoroughly useless luxury.

Wheeler's Tissue Phosphates.

For one victim of zymotic disease a holocaust perish from failure of their digestive processes. For one infant or adult in the last sleep from the germs of fever poison a thousand have wasted away from improper food and imperfect digestion. The system bliss in devising Wheeler's Phosphates and Calisaya which to secure digestion and assimilation by furnishing those elements of brain and nerve nutrition, without which nervous energy is impossible, in an easily assimilable form, when the digestive apparatus is too feeble to eliminate them from food.

PLAYING ON THE RUINS.

"These firemen must be a frivolous set," said Mrs. Spillkins, who was reading a paper.

"Why so?"

"I read in the paper that after the fire was under control, the firemen played all night on the ruins. Why didn't they go home and go to bed like sensible men, instead of romping about like children?"

How Would It Do?

This bad weather requires a remedy. It seems as if the whole responsibility should rest on Vennor or Wiggins, for we had some kind of weather before they appeared upon the scene. How would it do to string them up? Would it make things better? Another list of impromptus don't hang on to your corns as weather indicators. Better string them out root and branch. Putnam's Painless Corn Extractor will do it quickly, painlessly, and with certainty. Don't buy dangerous [illegible] substitutes. Get Putnam's, and no other.

NEWBOLD'S BIGAMY.

A despatch from Detroit on the 13th says:—"George Newbold, alias Clarence Nevellie, is on the court calendar at Toledo for Friday. O. J. Whitney, of Detroit, and Attorney Moore were yesterday in consultation with the prosecuting attorney. It was decided to call the case on the 26th. A number of witnesses will be summoned from Toronto, Newark, N.J., and Detroit.

It is no Wonder that so many people sink into untimely graves when we consider how they neglect their health. They have a disordered Liver, deranged Bowels, Constipation, Piles or diseased Kidneys, but they let it go on, think they "will get over it." If blows worse, Bitter and more complications follow and soon it is too late to save them. If such people would take Kidney-Wort it would preserve their lives. It acts upon the most important organs purifying the blood and cleansing the system, removes and prevents those disorders and promotes health.

HOW THE CANUCKS COLLAR THE CATARACTS.

While a boat manned by Canadians was ascending one of the Nile rapids on Friday a hawser broke, allowing it to be swept down the dangerous current. By remarkably skilful steering and swimmanship the boat was brought safely through. The feat is regarded with general admiration by the officers in command of the expedition.

ROUGH PLAY AT SCHOOL.

Two weeks ago a lad named Christopher West, aged ten years, had his arm pulled out of joint by a companion in rough play at one of the city schools. Nothing was thought of the matter at the time, but last Friday the youth complained of his arm being sore and endured great agony till yesterday, when death put an end to his sufferings. The boy who was the cause of the injury cannot be identified, but an inquest will be held.

A Perfect Beauty.

Perfect beauty is only attained by pure blood and good health. These acquirements give the possessor a pleasant expression, a fair clear skin and the rosy bloom of health. Burdock Blood Bitters purify the blood and tone the entire system to a healthy action.

SIR RICHARD CARTWRIGHT.

Sir Richard Cartwright has accepted an invitation from the Young Men's Reform club, of Montreal, to deliver an address there on the 25th inst, on the public questions of the day. Hon. W. Laurier will accompany Sir Richard. The Free Trade Club will tender the latter a banquet. Preparations are now foot in the commercial metropolis to give the ex-Finance Minister a brilliant reception.

Sure to Conquer.

The most troublesome cough is sure to yield if timely treated with Hagyard's Pectoral Balsam. Pleasant to take and safe for young or old. 46-2t

FIRE DRILL IN SCHOOLS.

There was a fire in a school at Lynn, Mass., the other day and seven hundred children narrowly escaped death. Fire-drill is a very important part of school training, but it does not always have the desired effect even where it is taught, as is evidenced by a panic in a Toronto school recently.

A single trial of Dr Henry Baxter's Mandrake Bitters will convince any one troubled with costiveness, torpid liver or any kindred diseases of their curative properties. They only cost 25 cents per bottle. 44-5t.

Ladies! 25 cts. will buy you a pair of good, Seamless Hosiery at Turnbull's.

Itching Piles—Symptoms and Cure.

The symptoms are moisture, like perspiration, intense itching, increased by scratching very distressing, particularly at night, seems as if pin worms were crawling in and about the rectum; the private parts are sometimes affected. If allowed to continue very serious results may follow. "SWAYNE'S OINTMENT" is a pleasant, sure cure. Also for Tetter, Itch, Salt rheum, Scald Head, Erysipelas, Barbers' Itch, Blotches, all scaly, crusty Skin Diseases. Box by mail 50 cents; three for 1.25. Address, DR. SWAYNE & SON, Phila., Pa. Sold by Druggists. 7-52t

Advice to Mothers.

Are you disturbed at night and broken of your rest by a sick child suffering and crying with pain of cutting teeth? If so, send at once and get a bottle of MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP FOR CHILDREN TEETHING. Its value is incalculable. It will relieve the poor little sufferer immediately. Depend upon it, mothers, there is no mistake about it. It cures dysentry and diarrhœa, regulates the stomach and bowels, cures wind colic, softens the gums, reduces inflammation, and gives tone and energy to the whole system. MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP FOR CHILDREN TEETHING is pleasant to the taste, and is the prescription of one of the oldest and best female nurses and physicians in the United States, and is for sale by all druggists throughout the world. Price 25 cents a bottle.

N.H. DOWNS' ELIXIR — WILL CURE COUGHS AND COLDS

The great superiority of DOWNS' ELIXIR over all other cough remedies is attested by the immense popular demand for that old established remedy for the cure of Coughs, Hoarseness, Croup, Asthma, Bronchitis, Whooping Cough, and all Colds at the Chest, Throat and Lungs.

SOLD BY ALL DRUGGISTS.

AYER'S Hair Vigor

restores, with the gloss and freshness of youth, faded or gray hair to a natural, rich brown color, or deep black, as may be desired. By its use light or red hair may be darkened, thin hair thickened, and baldness often, though not always, cured.

It checks falling of the hair, and stimulates a weak and sickly growth to vigor. It prevents and cures nearly all scalp diseases, and heals nearly every disease peculiar to the scalp. As a Ladies' Hair Dressing, the Vigor is unequalled; it contains neither oil nor dye, renders the hair soft, glossy, and silken in appearance, and imparts a delicate, agreeable, and lasting perfume.

MR. C. F. BOUCHER writes from Kirby, Q., July 3, 1882: "Last fall my hair commenced falling out, and in a short time I became nearly bald. I used part of a bottle of AYER'S HAIR VIGOR, which stopped the falling of the hair, and started a new growth. I have now a full head of hair growing vigorously, and am convinced that but for the use of your preparation I should have been entirely bald."

J. W. BOWEN, proprietor of the Mechanic (Ohio) Enquirer, says: "AYER'S HAIR VIGOR is a most excellent preparation for the hair. I speak of it from my own experience. It has promoted the growth of new hair, and makes it glossy and soft. The Vigor is also a sure cure for dandruff. Not within my knowledge has the preparation ever failed to give entire satisfaction."

MR. ANGUS FAIRBAIRN, leader of the celebrated "Fairbairn Family" of Scottish Vocalists, writes from Boston, Mass., Feb. 8, 1880: "How shall we say hair begins to give utterance of the change which lasting time promoteth, I have used AYER'S HAIR VIGOR, and so have been able to maintain an appearance of youthfulness—a matter of considerable consequence to ministers, orators, actors, and in fact every one who lives in the eyes of the public."

MRS. O. A. PRESCOTT, writing from 12 Elm St., Charlestown, Mass., April 14, 1882, says: "Two years ago about two-thirds of my hair came out. It thinned very rapidly, and I was fast growing bald. On using AYER'S HAIR VIGOR the falling stopped and a new growth commenced, and in about a month my head was completely covered with short hair. It has continued to grow, and is now as good as before it fell. I regularly used but one bottle of the VIGOR, but now use it occasionally as a dressing."

We have hundreds of similar testimonials to the efficacy of AYER'S HAIR VIGOR. It needs but a trial to convince the most skeptical of its value.

New Goods.

Having supplied myself with New Goods in place of those destroyed by the fire, I am now prepared to serve my customers and the public as before. My place of business is one door east of Hall Innes & Co, Simcoe Street. R. KINGAN, Hardware. 44-6t

Money.

Mr. John A Bennett, of Otonabee, is prepared to make loans on real estate and to purchase mortgages. Loans will be made at the lowest rates of interest, payable when the borrower deems the most convenient time, the principal, being payable at such times as may be agreed upon. Expenses are very light. 12-tf

Decidedly Dangerous.

On Saturday evening an old gentleman, passing along Charlotte street, when he came to the crossing—no, the place for a crossing—opposite the entrance to Stevenson's grain warehouse, tripped and fell, sustaining painful injuries. If he had broken his limbs, he would have had cause for an action for damages. Will the town fathers look to this matter before the elections? This question implies the most powerful form of appeal that can be made.

Important.

When you visit or leave New York city save Baggage Expressage and Carriage Hire and stop at the Grand Union Hotel, opposite the Grand Central Depot

Elegant rooms fitted up at a cost of one million dollars, reduced to $1.00 and upwards per day. European plan. Elevator. Restaurant supplied with the best. Horse cars, stages and elevated railroad to all depots. Families can live better for less money at the Grand Union Hotel than at any other first-class hotel in the city. 43-1y

To Correspondents

We would like a word or two with our correspondents. The subject of the "Middle State," is, pro and con, likely to lead to a good deal of newspaper writing. We are naturally anxious to give both sides a hearing—audiire alteram partem—and we must therefore request correspondents to confine themselves to a more limited space. We cannot, in justice to other subjects, devote our space almost exclusively to any one subject. While we ourselves may be willing to give unlimited space to correspondents, the public demand a diversity of subjects, and, as the servants of the public, we must conform ourselves to their wishes.

Fire.

On Sunday morning about one o'clock the cooper shop of Mr. John Britton, Harvey street, was discovered in flames, and before any assistance could be given it was in ruins together with its contents, about six hundred barrels ready for delivery. By the exertions of the neighbors the machine shop, a few feet distant, was saved, before the arrival of the fire brigade. The latter, however, did good work in saving, in a somewhat damaged condition, the stables adjacent on the rear of Mr. E. B. Edwards' premises. Mr. Britton's loss will be about $400, with an insurance of only $100 on the building. The fire was without doubt the work of an incendiary, for there had been no fire in the building for a fortnight, work being suspended, and in the machine shop where there were 500 finished barrels, the head had been knocked out of a barrel and the latter filled with shavings in readiness for the match of the miscreant.

The Cathedral Building Fund.

On Thursday evening last a very successful entertainment was held in the Town Hall, Ashburnham, under the auspices of the village ladies of St. Peter's congregation. A concert and entertainment, to which Messrs. Simons, Wallbrook, Neil, Clarke and O'Donoghue contributed, was followed by an oyster supper. There was a good attendance and the financial outcome was good.

Died in Jail.

Owen Dowling, an aged and persistent pensioner on the county bounty, died in the jail on Wednesday of last week. He has been committed as a vagrant repeatedly, and on the last two or three occasions, being too weak to leave the jail premises a magistrate has obligingly held court inside the jail and committed the deceased for fresh terms. Death signed his release on Wednesday morning, and in the afternoon the usual formal inquest was held.

The Mills Burglary

On Thursday Duncan and Noble, two young men of the town were arraigned before the Police Magistrate, charged with the robbery of Mr. Joseph Mills' fur store. A plea of not guilty was entered. Mr. Weller, on behalf of the Crown, asked an adjournment of one week, which was granted. Mr. E. R. Wood appeared for Noble, and Mr. C. W. Sawers for Duncan. Bail was not allowed and prisoners were remanded.

Electric Light.

In pursuance of the action of the Town Council the Electric Light Company have begun the fulfilment of their contract and have in operation the first light—on the corner of Brock and George streets. The lamp is suspended on an arm extending twelve feet from an octagonal pole, 35 feet in height. To the pole at its base is also affixed an apparatus for lowering the light for replacing the carbons, etc. Though the poles are pronounced superior to those in use in Toronto for a similar purpose, the public seem to prefer a lamp suspended on a wire cable stretching from corner to corner, like that for some time in use corner of Hunter and George streets. The lamp at the corner of Murray and George is also in use.

Midland Poultry Association.

The annual meeting of the Midland Poultry Association was held in the Town Collector's office on Thursday night last. There was a fair attendance of fowl fanciers. The secretary-treasurer's report was submitted, and showed that the finances were in a good condition, there being a comfortable surplus on hand. The election of officers resulted as follows:—President, John McClelland; vice-president, T. E. Bell, Smith; Sec'y.-treasurer, Jos. McClelland; Directors, J. R. Cobb, D. Mason, N. Lush, R. Meade, I. Dormer, M. O'Brien, H. J. Daubus and W. Logan. The meeting discussed the coming exhibition, but without any definite decision, and the consideration of the matter was deferred to a meeting to be held to-night (Thursday).

Our Legal Limbs.

At the annual meeting of the Peterborough Law Association the following officers were elected :—

PRESIDENT—C. A. Weller.
VICE-PRESIDENT—D. W. Dumble.
SECRETARY-TREASURER—E. B. Edwards.
TRUSTEES—A. P. Poussette and W. H. Moore.

A very satisfactory annual report was presented and matters pertinent to the interest of the profession discussed. The first annual dinner of the Association was held at Chamberlain's restaurant on Thursday night. The chairs were occupied by the President and Vice-President thereof, respectively, to wit, that is to say, namely: Messrs. C. A. Weller and D. W. Dumble. The viands provided were of so satisfactory a nature that the thought of a nolle prosequi was not entertained.

The "Examiner" Book-Bindery.

The attention of the public is directed to the fact that the book-bindery in connection with the Peterborough EXAMINER, is one of the most thoroughly equipped in the Province. The machinery and appliances are all new, and of the most modern and improved character. The bindery is in charge of the most competent hands to be had, whose work for years past has distanced all others when placed on competitive exhibition—always securing first prizes. THE EXAMINER bindery is now prepared to fill all orders for binding, ruling or blank books, in the highest style of the art and at reasonable figures. Every sort of book bound in any desired style, in a manner guaranteed to be in every case satisfactory. We have arranged special facilities for the binding of "Picturesque Canada," in styles corresponding to the beauty of the work—in full or half morocco, full or half calf, half roan, gilt or marbled edges, etc. The copies already bound are pronounced superb, and a fitting setting for this fine work. Having unusual facilities for doing the binding of "Picturesque Canada," we can afford and hereby offer to pay the express charges on the numbers forwarded to our bindery, and on the bound volumes when returned. All work of this kind, such as parts of Shakspere, handsome magazines, art journals, etc., receives special attention; strong flexible binding and artistic finish of the first order, will mark our execution of this class of work. The manufacture of blank books, ledgers, journals, invoices, etc., etc., is another department in which THE EXAMINER bindery excels. Our stock, paper, etc., is purchased at most favorable rates, and considering its excellence, and the thoroughness of the binding, our prices are extremely moderate.

We urge the public of Peterborough and Central Ontario, to give THE EXAMINER Book-bindery, Peterborough, a trial, well convinced that satisfaction will be the result. No pay will be exacted of any patron who is honestly dissatisfied with the work turned out. Correspondence and patronage solicited.

Piano Tuning.

Mr. Geo. J. Gumpricht, piano tuner for Messrs. Mason & Risch, Toronto, is in town. Orders left at Mr. T. Menzies' bookstore or Messrs. Taylor & Macdonald's drug store will be promptly attended to.

Dress and Mantle Making.

Notwithstanding the great and urgent demand for Dresses and Mantles at the "Golden Lion," Miss Johnson is most attentive and prompt in executing all orders most satisfactorily.

Another Culprit.

In addition to the arrests in connection with the Mills robbery, mentioned in last issue, on Thursday morning Constable Pidgeon arrested one Robert Duncan on suspicion of being concerned, as our Roman friends would say, as a fur in the robbery of Mills' fur store.

Newspaper Change.

The Ontario Observer is now the sole property of Mr. James Baird, Mr. Henry Parsons retiring from the firm which formerly published the paper—Baird & Parsons. The Observer is a staunch Reform journal, and we hope that under the new management it will go on with increasing prosperity.

Hydrodynamic Organ Breath.

Last week there was put in the basement underneath the organ of St. John's Church, a Teurk motor, its dynamic supply, furnished by "city" water. The motor is one and a half horse power, and is as readily under control of the organist as any of the stops. It was intended to have it at work last Sunday, but owing to the too great elasticity of the rubber belt, used on the connecting apparatus, the latter supplied by Mr. Peter Hamilton, the motor could not be used, but a new and proper belt has been substituted and next Sunday the breath to the organ will be furnished by hydraulic power.

Robbing the Mails.

At the instance of Deputy Postoffice Inspector Jones, of Kingston, W. B. Abercrombie, mail clerk on the Grand Junction Division of the Grand Trunk between Peterborough and Belleville, has been arrested, charged with stealing four registered letters from the mail bags on the train. He is in confinement in Belleville and feels keenly the position in which he finds himself. The Deputy Inspector states that some eighteen or twenty letters have been missing during the past few months, and that the evidence against the accused mail clerk is very pointed.

Ashburnham School Board.

At a meeting of the Ashburnham school Board on Monday night, Rev. Mr. Bradshaw chairman, and all the members were present. The resignation of Mr. A. T. Emerson, as head master, was received and accepted, and the application of Mr. J. J. Rooney for the vacancy was entertained. Mr. Rooney holds a first-class C. certificate, and is at present taking the professional course at the Normal School, Toronto, and will enter upon his duties January 5th, 1885. He comes with excellent recommendations, and will no doubt make a good head master. The Misses Jennie and Annie Smith were re-appointed assistant teachers.

Another Improvement.

The public interested are informed that, as excellent as have been Mr. D. Belleghem's undertaking appliances, he is still making additions tending to make all arrangements of the completest character. In pursuance of this object he has added to his undertaking apparatus one of Shaw's Embalming and Cooling Boards. From the nature of the circumstances a detailed description is not admissible, but it is sufficient to say that the new convenience greatly facilitates the decent, orderly and seemly arrangements for funerals. Mr. Belleghem has the only one of these boards in town, only one being sold in any one town.

The Telephone Case.

That portion of the public concerned in the workings of Canadian Patent Laws and the alleged defects of the Patent Act of 1872 will be interested in the case brought up last Monday in Toronto, which took the novel shape of an application to the Court for a prohibition restraining the Hon. John Henry Pope, Minister of Agriculture, from hearing an application by the Toronto Telephone Manufacturing Company to cancel a patent owned by the Bell Telephone Company of Canada. The grounds on which the Bell Company apply for this prohibition are various, and the matter was argued at great length by a formidable array of Q. Cs. It is understood that the reason for the Bell Company desiring to have all these questions settled by the Courts instead of by the Minister of Agriculture is principally because the Minister has no power to take proper evidence on such matters, and because a decision by the Courts, if in favor of the Bell Company, would be final and prevent further trouble to it on the ground that its patents were invalid. It is asserted, and would seem to be the case, that the Patent Act is very defective in some points. 47-1t

Obituary.

We regret to have to record the death of Richard Chowen, Sr., one of the oldest and most respected residents of Smith, which event took place on Sunday last. He had been in good health till December last, when a severe attack of inflammatory rheumatism planted the seeds of death. He rallied from this attack somewhat, in the spring, but again declined till his death occurred. Deceased was a native of Devonshire, England, from which he removed to Canada about 32 years ago, first settling in Reach township, Ontario county, whence, after five years residence, he removed to lot 20 in the 6th concession of Smith, where he afterwards lived. The late Mr. Chowen was well known throughout the county, as a local preacher. He preached at irregular intervals for forty years—while in England as a Methodist—and in Canada in connection with the Bible Christian Church. He aimed to spend his life doing good. He was exceedingly charitable, and no case of distress or want came to his notice, without his best efforts being put forth for its alleviation. The deceased leaves a wife and eight children to deplore his death, the eldest of whom is Mr. Richard Chowen, Jr., of this town. The body was laid at rest in the Little Lake Cemetery on Tuesday.

St. Paul's Restored Church.

It is expected the school room portion of St. Paul's Church will be ready for occupancy on Sunday, 30th of November. On Wednesday evening, Dec. 3rd, the Ladies' Aid society will, we understand, give a social in the new school room, and there will also be a sale of useful articles during the afternoon and evening.

New Confectionery Business.

The public are informed by the advertisement published in these columns, that Messrs. Baptie Bros. have opened out a new baker's and confectioner's shop on Charlotte street, in the Thompson Block, next east of the skating rink. Everything is new, neat and clean, and the public can rely on being promptly and satisfactorly served in the above lines. See advertisement.

Apsley.

We have received a correspondence from Apsley, which refers to an important matter, but as the name of the writer did not accompany the correspondence, we must adhere to the wholesome rule to publish nothing without the name of the writer, which must be furnished, not necessarily for publication, but as a guarantee of good faith. Without the writer's name we do not know but the letter alluded to above is a hoax.

C.E.T.S. Entertainments.

The promoters of the C.E.T.S. entertainments in connection with St. Luke's Church, Ashburnham, are to be congratulated on the success of their popular concerts. The programmes are first-class in every way and are well worthy of a much larger admission fee. The next concert takes place in the school room, Ashburnham, on Monday evening (first), the 24th of November, at 8 o'clock. Admission only ten cents. Some new features will be presented this occasion.

Personal.

The Pembina (Dakota) Pioneer Express contains the following creditable paragraph respecting Mr. A J. Delaney, a former resident of Peterborough:—"The Pioneer Express congratulates Mr. A. J. Delaney of this town, on having passed a successful examination for admission to the bar of this county. Mr. Delaney gave a banquet at the Geroux House on Thursday evening, to the judge the officers of the court and the legal fraternity, in honor of the occasion. We heartily wish Mr. Delaney success in the sphere he has newly entered upon. We learn that his examination was highly creditable to his attainments."

Grand Concert.

On Monday evening, November 24th, a grand concert will be held in Bradburn's Opera House, in aid of the building funds of St. Peter's Cathedral. That the programme will be a most enjoyable one may be seen from the following array of talent, to take part in the concert:—Mr. Charles Kelly, Collingwood; Mrs. J. O'Hara, Toronto; Miss Tina Menzies, Prof. Doucet, Miss A. Delaney, Mrs. J. E. McIntyre and Mr. M. Dunn, town; Mr. G. R. Joseph, Montreal. Tickets, 25 and 50 cents. Seats reserved at Smart's music store.

Rushing Business.

The City Clothing Store, Mr. Harry LeBrun, proprietor, must be doing a rushing business, work being carried on day and night. On Tuesday night persons abroad at late hours noticed the work rooms lighted, and in the stillness of the night heard the voices of the operatives while at work. But the truth must be told. Work goes on every night till ten o'clock, but on Tuesday night the clerk in charge forgot to open the doors and the hands were imprisoned all night. They worked till one o'clock, and after that spent the hours by reposing on the downy side of the floor.

The Cathedral Bazaar.

The public are specially requested to note the fact that the long contemplated bazaar in aid of the building fund of St. Peter's Cathedral will be held in Bradburn's Opera House the second week in December. The bazaar will open on Monday, the 8th December, and continue till the following Saturday, December 13th. The most elaborate preparations have been made and an endless variety of useful and fancy articles will be exposed for sale. This will be an opportunity for the public to purchase from a most recherche array of beautiful articles of every kind. Refreshments of the best will be served in the hall. Make a note of the opening day of the bazaar—Monday, December 8th.

The Late Rev. Mr. Butcher.

On Monday last Rev. J. W. Butcher, a well-known and widely-respected resident of the town, was summoned to his reward by death. His disease was typhoid fever. The deceased gentleman was a native of Suffolk, England, whence he went to Prince Edward Island at an early age. Forty-three years ago he entered the ministry of the Bible Christian Church, and came from Prince Edward Island to Peterborough sixteen years ago. He remained in Peterborough four years, and for twelve years more labored on other circuits. Two years since he was superannuated and took up his residence in this town. He was in his sixty-third year, and though on the retired list was still active in Christian work. By his removal the community loses the example of a consistent Christian walk and the help of an exertion and influence always exercised in the direction of doing good.

"Oh! But I Salivated Him!"

was the actual exclamation of an honest physician, spoken of one of his patients to whom he had given calomel for the cure of biliousness and a diseased liver. And he had Salivated him for certain, from which he never recovered. All these distressing consequences are avoided by the use of Dr. Pierce's "Pleasant Purgative Pellets," a purely vegetable remedy that will not salivate, but produces the most pleasing effect, invigorate the liver, cure headache, dyspepsia, biliousness, constipation and piles. By druggists.

National Pills is the favorite purgative and anti-bilious medicine, they are mild and thorough. 44-5t.

THE REASON WHY!

OUR

Shoe Store is Always Crowded

With Customers is very apparent to those that have visited it and seen our Immense Stock and compared our prices with those asked elsewhere for the same goods. Never have we had such Bargains in Boots and Shoes as now. Never have we sold as many goods as now, and the more goods we sell the

GREATER BARGAINS

we have, as we are able to buy in larger quantities and at corresponding low prices. We retail as many Boots and Shoes as most jobbers sell at wholesale, consequently manufacturers make no difference in price to us than the wholesale trade, while smaller dealers are obliged to pay which is about the same as our regular retail price for the same quality of goods. It must be very evident then to any thinking person that there must be a good reason for our immense Shoe Business, and that our low prices, complete stock, and attention shown to our customers can be the only attraction powerful enough to draw such crowds to our store, and place us, with but two years' growth, as one of the largest retail Shoe Houses in Eastern Ontario.

JOBBERS' PRICES,

REMEMBER OUR SYSTEM OF BUSINESS IS SQUARE WITH ALL

Goods marked in Plain Figures and No Second or Third Prices Made.

The "Golden North-West."

THE C. P. R. EXHIBITION CAR.

Its Stay in Peterborough—Hundreds Visit It and Admire the Splendid Exhibition of North-West Products—Description of its Contents.

On Monday last the splendidly-fitted exhibition car of the C.P.R., containing specimens of the agricultural and natural products of the C.P.R. experimental farms and of the North-West generally, lay at the O. & Q. station. The car was in charge of Mr. A. S. Manhard, travelling passenger agent, and the honors were done with unfailing patience and courtesy by Messrs W. D. Scott and W. A. Ducker. The exhibit consisted of two sections. In one were shown the products of the ten experimental farms established on the line of the C.P.R., the primary object being to demonstrate that the rumors that the soil and other conditions in what has been hitherto called the arid and alkali belt were suited for farming purposes. The farms are ten in number, and are stretched over a distance of about 350 miles. The results, as shown by the products of the farms the first season after "breaking up," are highly satisfactory and demonstrate that the fertility of this alleged arid belt is beyond doubt and that it presents excellent chances to the intending settler—a fertile farm and, in a brief course of time, a comfortable competence. The exhibit contained specimens of agricultural products of every description, nothing being lacking that can be grown in Ontario. The specimens of wheat were excellent. The yield was 21½ bushels per acre, and of an average weight per bushel of a little over sixty pounds. The barley was a beautifully bright and heavy sample, while the oats was excellent. Peas was the only grain that did not come up to the Ontario standard. The specimens of other grains and of roots and vegetables were very fine, and bore ample testimony to the fertility of the soil, especially when it is borne in mind that the test is a severe one, the crop being the first after breaking the tough, pachydermatous prairie sod. The other department is devoted to a display of the products of Manitoba and the North-West generally. These included, of course, all kinds of grain, the wheat being particularly fine and reaching in weight the standard of 60 lbs. Its flour-producing qualities are great, the yield of flour being as high as 45 lbs. to the bushel. The other grains are well represented and have as high a comparative standard. The grain is shown both in the straw and the threshed state. The straw is of exceedingly strong growth. The specimens of native grasses is very complete and large, there being no fewer than forty-three different varieties of prairie grass shown, besides specimens of naturalized clover and timothy. The roots and vegetables, including potatoes, mangolds, carrots, turnips, beets (field and table), squashes, pumpkins, citrons, cabbage, etc., etc., were particularly fine. In potatoes there were monster specimens, many 2½ lbs. in weight, and all are large. In one place there were shown 21 varieties, raised on the farm of Mr. S. J. Jackson, M.P.P., Stonewell. Turnips were to be seen weighing from 15 to 18 lbs., and one grand head of red cabbage was as hard to the touch as a turnip and weighed 15 lbs. In connection with the roots, it must be borne in mind that they were taken from the ground ten weeks ago, thus missing the best part of the growing season for roots.

MISCELLENEOUS PRODUCTS.

As settling the fuel question, the exhibit of coal is an important one. Fine anthracite coal taken from immense deposits on Devil's Head Creek, near the Rockies, was shown, as well as bituminous coal from the Galt mine, Belley River. Specimens of Calgarry bricks were to be seen, and samples of ores, silver and galena, silver and copper, etc. A fine sample of freestone taken from a quarry with 120 feet face was also to be seen. Specimens of indigenous woods consisting of rim ash, thorn, poplar, black ash, spruce, cherry, basswood, etc. and specimens of oil cake and linseed oil were also shown. In fine, the exhibit throughout is a magnificent exposition of the capabilities of a magnificent country which is yet to be the home of teeming millions. Hundreds of farmers visited the exhibition car, as well as the leading men of the town, capitalists, merchants, bankers, lawyers, newspaper men, etc. Specimens of wheat in small paper bags were distributed to all, as well as literature descriptive of the North-West. The exhibition car of the C. P. R. is not only a credit to the enterprise of the company, but also to the incomparable agricultural capabilities of our "Golden North-West." The car left in the evening for Norwood and returned on Wednesday to town, when hundreds of visitors availed themselves of the privilege of visiting it. Altogether, during the two days the car stayed in Peterborough, it is estimated that between 1,500 and 2,000 persons paid it a visit of inspection, all invariably speaking in high terms of the excellence of the exhibit.

The great results which have attended the regular use of Quinine Wine, by people of delicate constitution and those affected with a general prostration of the system, speak more than all the words that we can say in its behalf. This article is a true medicine and a life-giving principle a perfect renovator of the whole system—invigorating at the same time both body and mind. Its medical properties are a febrifuge tonic and anti-periodic. Small doses, frequently repeated, strengthen the pulse, create an appetite, enable you to obtain refreshing sleep, and to feel and know that every fibre and tissue of your system is being braced and renovated. In the fine Quinine Wine prepared by Northrop & Lyman, Toronto, we have the exact tonic required; and to persons of weak and nervous constitutions we would say, never be without a bottle in the house. It is sold by all druggists.

The Cathedral Concert

In all Respects a Great Success.

The concert given in Bradburn's Opera House on Monday evening, fully justified the title under which it was announced—"Grand Concert." There was a good house and a good programme excellently carried out. The first number on the programme was the sparkling Gipsy chorus from the "Bohemian Girl," with a tableau. The chorus was most effectively rendered, and the solos were well taken. Miss Lynch, who very felicitiously represented the "Gypsy Queen," Miss Annie Dunn, Mrs. J. E. McIntyre, the "Bohemian Girl," and Mr. M. Dunn. The tableau in grouping, pose, and costume was exceedingly creditable. Mr. Chas. Kelly of Collingwood made his first appearance in "The Gay Hussar," and being loudly recalled, responded with "Kathleen." This gentleman has a powerful basso voice, excellently cultivated, under perfect control, and these with distinct enunciation and a modest bearing, make listening to his singing a delight. Unmistakable was the genuineness of the applause which greeted his subsequent appearances, which were in the solo in the chorus "Sailing," the rendition of which was exceedingly creditable, not only to the soloist, but to the chorus. His guitar solo was received with great applause, and was a fine performance. He also obligingly took the number of Mr. G. R. Joseph, of Montreal, who was prevented by sudden illness from being present. He was invariably encored when he appeared. The exquisite delicacy and sweetness of the voice of Mrs. O'Hara of Toronto, was shown to great advantage in "When 'Tis Starlight." She responded to a warm recall with "Kathleen." In the duet from Norma, to which Miss Alice Delaney contributed a very pleasing contralto, she also acquitted herself in excellent style. Miss Annie Delaney's superior abilities as a finished pianist, were demonstrated by her splendid rendering of "Glimpses of the War," of which she herself is the composer. She replied to a very warm encore with a selection. It is difficult to say whether she excels more in the role of performer or composer, judging from "Glimpses of the War." In the second part she and Miss Tina Menzies gave great delight in the rendition of the fine duet, "The Concert Galop." Mr. M. Dunn sang "Good-By Mavourneen," with such fine effect that he was enthusiastically recalled. Prof. Doucet was very successful in his violin solo from "Il Trovatore," and answered a cordial call back with an equally well performed selection. Mrs. J. E. McIntyre seemed to be in her very best form, and her singing in most graceful and pleasing style of "Pretty Pond Lilies," gave great delight, and called for a deafening encore, to which she replied. In the second part her "Marguerite" was equally well done, and no rest was allowed her till she responded to a recall. The ballad given by Miss Annie Dunn was a most creditable performance. This young lady has a very fine voice, and gives promise of becoming a distinguished vocalist. Taking it all in all the programme and the manner of its representation, gave unlimited satisfaction, and the promoters of the concert are to be congratulated on their unqualified success in presenting a first-class musical entertainment. Mr. Freeman's Orchestra was present, and contributed greatly to the evening's entertainment.

For Handsome Sealettes at right prices, you need not pass Turnbull's.

The "Examiner" Book-Bindery.

The attention of the public is directed to the fact that the book-bindery in connection with the Peterborough EXAMINER, is one of the most thoroughly equipped in the Province. The machinery and appliances are all new, and of the most modern and improved character. The bindery is in charge of the most competent hands to be had, whose work for years past has distanced all others when placed on competitive exhibition—always securing first prizes. THE EXAMINER bindery is now prepared to fill all orders for binding, ruling or blank books, in the highest style of the art and at reasonable figures. Every sort of book bound in any desired style, in a manner guaranteed to be in every case satisfactory. We have arranged special facilities for the binding of "Picturesque Canada," in styles corresponding to the beauty of the work—in full or half morocco, full or half calf, half roan, gilt or marbled edges, etc. The copies already bound are pronounced superb, and a fitting setting for this fine work. Having unusual facilities for doing the binding of "Picturesque Canada," we can afford and hereby offer to pay the express charges on the numbers forwarded to our bindery, and on the bound volumes when returned. All work of this kind, such as parts of Shakspere, handsome magazines, art journals, etc., receives special attention; strong flexible binding and artistic finish of the first order, will mark our execution of this class of work. The manufacture of blank books, ledgers, journals, invoices, etc., etc., is another department in which THE EXAMINER bindery excels. Our stock, paper, etc., is purchased at most favorable rates, and considering its excellence, and the thoroughness of the binding, our prices are extremely moderate.

We urge the public of Peterborough and Central Ontario, to give THE EXAMINER book-bindery, Peterborough, a trial, well convinced that satisfaction will be the result. No pay will be exacted of any patron who is honestly dissatisfied with the work turned out. Correspondence and patronage solicited.

Catarrh A New Treatment.

Perhaps the most extraordinary success that has been achieved in modern medicine has been attained by the Dixon treatment for Catarrh. Out of 2,000 patients treated during the past six months, fully ninety per cent. have been cured of this stubborn malady. This is none the less startling when it is remembered that not five per cent. of patients presenting themselves to the regular practitioner are benefitted, while the patent medicines and other advertised cures never record a cure at all. Starting with the claim now generally believed by the most scientific men that the disease is due to the presence of living parasites in the tissue, Mr. Dixon at once adapted his cure to their extermination—this accomplished, he claims the Catarrh is practically cured, and the permanency is unquestioned, as cures effected by him four years ago are cures still. No one else has ever attempted to cure Catarrh in this manner, and no other treatment has ever cured Catarrh. The application of the remedy is simple, and can be done at home, and the present season of the year is the most favourable for a speedy and permanent cure, the majority of cases being cured at one treatment. Sufferers should correspond with Messrs. A. H. DIXON & SON, 305 King street west, Toronto, Canada, and enclose stamp for their treatise on Catarrh.—Montreal Star, Nov. 17, 1882. 48-52t

THE "MIDDLE STATE."

An Answer to "Laicus."

To the Editor of THE EXAMINER:

SIR,—The letter of "Laicus" on "The Middle State," in your paper of Thursday last, is in one respect, at least, a remarkable one—it is long enough. Believing in some of the things written by "Laicus," but not being clear as to the soundness of his conclusions, with your permission, Mr. Editor, I shall state my difficulty and ask for information. And that I may make myself understood, show exactly where my difficulty lies, and prejudice nothing: I here taken from what I find emphatically laid down in the authorized teaching and creed of the Roman Catholic Church, and by which every good Roman Catholic is bound to regulate his belief in the matter named therein, and,

PREMISE THREE THINGS

1st. In regard to the distinction made between venial and mortal sin—"Those dying in venial sin go to purgatory, those dying in mortal sin go directly to hell.

2nd. In regard to the interpretation of Scripture—"That no interpretation is to be received unless it has got the unanimous consent of the fathers."

3rd. In regard to the deliverances of councils—"That what has been defined and declared by a general council only is to be received—all else is to be condemned rejected and anathematised."

With these three tests at hand, one and all of them of good, sound R. C. manufacture, let us now approach the teaching of "Laicus."

HIS FIRST PROOF

in support of purgatory is 2 Machabees, 12, 43-46, where it is stated that a certain quantity of silver had been collected and sent to Jerusalem for sacrifice to be offered for the sins of the dead, etc., etc.,

From this it is assumed that there must be a purgatory, and the dead here named must have been in it, when prayers and offerings were to be made for them—where else could they be? The logic here is charming, but let it go. And now for our first test. Did those men die in venial or in mortal sin? Looking back three verses in the narrative it is plainly stated that they were slain because of their idolatry. Now idolatry is a mortal sin, and according to R. C. faith, the souls of those men dying in mortal sin must have been in hell, and not in purgatory at all, when prayers and sacrifices were made for them.

Taking the passage then on its merits, and as it is presented to us, it and no amount of twisting or evasive explanation can make it speak of purgatory, or of anything else than "sacrifice and prayers to be offered for the sins of those who died in mortal sin, and whose souls must have gone directly to hell." Can Rome not take the hint and again surprise the world by introducing something new. Thus test one shows that there is no purgatory here for "Laicus."

Now for the second. Is the proof cited canonical? "Laicus" tells us it is—but has it got the "unanimous consent of the fathers?" Without this it cannot be received. Can "Laicus" satisfy the necessary condition here and give proof of the required unanimity? No doubt he expects us to be satisfied when he informs us that Tertullian, St. Cyprian, St. Hilary, St. Ambrose and St. Augustine all say that the proof in question is canonical. But are these all the fathers? Bellarmine tells us that Cyril, Jerome, Hilary, Ruffinus and Gregory, are all as staunchly opposed to the canonicity of the proof. This

DOES NOT LOOK LIKE UNANIMITY.

One batch of the fathers directly withstanding another batch, contradicting and opposing one another.

Can "Laicus" satisfy us that these fathers, and all the others which might be named, ever came to be of one opinion in the matter? Till he does so there is no use in him attempting further to practise on our credulity. His creed demands that the unanimity of the fathers should be got, and if he cannot find it, he ought either to keep his groundless nonsense to himself, or, as an honest man, confess the deception, give up the superstition of the thing and cease to be a Roman Catholic. Again it is a failure for "Laicus."

THE THIRD TEST

is now in place and we proceed to apply it. Has the book of "Machabees" been received and declared by any General Council of the church to be canonical? Without the sanction of a General Council it can be of no more authority to a R. C. in a matter of doctrine than a passage from Plato or Virgil. "Laicus" tells us that both the third Council of Carthage and the Council of Trent received and declared the book to be canonical. But the Council of Laodicea decreed in direct opposition to both Carthage and Trent, so that there is no agreement here, no unanimity, and consequently no authority.

But more to the point. The Council of Carthage was not a general one, and it has never been claimed as such. Trent, we know, is claimed by Rome as a general one, and we admit that it was Romish enough for anything, but we deny that it was ecumenical and we ask for proof.

Thus tried by three good, sound R. C. tests the proof of "Laicus" for his favourite "middle state"

HAS ENTIRELY DISAPPEARED.

The first test showed that there is no purgatory in the proof advanced, for the men spoken of all died in mortal sin; the second brought out the fact that the necessary "unanimous consent of the Fathers" is wanting, and the third, that there is no voice from an acknowledged General Council to support it. On R. C. principles, therefore, "Laicus" is bound to throw the thing overboard, and consign it to the place of things "condemned," "rejected," and "anathematized"—Pope Pius' Creed, arts. II. and XI. Can he convince us that in holding to such shadows and in refusing to regulate his faith by the principles of his own creed, that he is not himself the victim of some such thing as a "quasi involuntary hallucination," whatever that may mean.

We might now pass to another part of the subject and at once meet "Laicus" on other ground, but as he seems to think that he has got a strong position in the action of the Council of Carthage, we wait to have another look. Besides, it may be interesting to your readers to learn the nature of his confidence by glancing at the material he is fishing up from the

to support his Romish dogmas.

The fathers of this council do not seem to have had any very great confidence in the correctness of their own action in the premises. They were exceedingly cautious in this procedure, and it would be well for those who claim their friendship to take a lesson from their prudence. Dupire informs us that appended to the canon of this council is a very remarkable "postil," it is this, "Let the church beyond sea be consulted before this canon be confirmed."

Thus it appears that the very canon which it is alleged "declared the books of Machabees to be inspired and of equal authority with other portions of Scripture,"

WAS NOT CONFIRMED,

and could not be, and was therefore of no authority, till "the church beyond sea" was consulted and gave her consent. I wonder did that consultation ever take place? Was the consent of that "church beyond sea" ever obtained? Was that canon ever confirmed and accepted as authority even by those who framed it? The whole subsequent history of the subject, the very name by which the apocryphal books were distinguished—"doutro canonical,"—the free discussion of their merits, and the doctors that were ranged against one another in the discussion up to the Council of Trent, all with one voice say "No!" Yet "Laicus" is confident and handles that unconfirmed canon as if it was the best authority in the world. But, what do the people know about it? and he takes the risk. But did this Council declare the books of the Machabees to be inspired? We have just seen

HOW DOUBTFUL IT IS.

But let us to some better authority—and hear Jerome and Ruffinus, both of whom lived at the time, and for anything we know were both present at the Council. They tell us that some of the apocyphal writings were, by the wish of the fathers, read in the church, but "only for the edification of the people and not to establish the authority of ecclesiastical doctrines."

If the Council had received the apocryphal books as equal to the Scriptures could these fathers have written as they did in explanation of the position? The presumption is, that they did not declare the books canonical, but approved of some of them so far as to consent to them being read for edification; no more.

Now it was this very doubtful proceeding on the part of the Carthage fathers, and concerning which, as we have already seen, they were very doubtful themselves—that has been put into regulation dress, pressed into Roman service and made to do skirmishing duty no less than eleven hundred years in advance of the great army of Trent. It is this doubtful and unconfirmed proceeding at Carthage that is

and full canonical authority for writings with which the Jews would have nothing to do; and our Lord and His apostles never recognised; and the early Christians would not receive; and the Eastern Church, which was the earliest, all along rejected, and rejects still; but which Rome, for the sake of the support which they give to her unscriptural dogmas,

RAISED TO THE STATUS OF SCRIPTURE

at the Council of Trent where it is said five cardinals, eight archbishops and forty bishops, nearly all Italians—fifty-three individuals all told—in solemn council resolved and declared for all Christendom, that the apocrypha should henceforth be received as inspired, and of equal authority with the word of God—yea, and has pronounced an anathema on all, far and near and everywhere, who do not receive and honor those books, as the Romish Church receives and honors them. Verily! "The spirit is willing but the flesh is weak."

Mr. Editor, I know that your space is valuable, and being unwilling either to trespass on your kindness or to weary your readers, I close this letter, but will, with your permission, return to the subject and have another word with "Laicus."

"Big Blunders."

Financially, and as far as attendance of the public was concerned, the Oddfellows of Otonabee lodge made a big hit by bringing the celebrated Brooklyn preacher and lecturer, Dr. Dewitt Talmage, to town. On Wednesday evening the Opera House was crowded in every part to listen to Dr. Talmage's lecture on "Big Blunders." James Stevenson, Esq., N. G. of Otonabee Lodge, occupied the chair, and introduced the lecturer, who divided his subject into six heads, prefacing his lecture with the remark that the man was not a man that had made no blunders in life. The first blunder dealt with was a multiplicity of occupations, and the importance of doing one thing well was emphasized. The second blunder was indulgence in bad temper. The third was discouragement under bad treatment and bad luck. The fourth was excessive amusement and its evil consequences. The fifth was the formation of wrong and unconguenial domestic relations, and the sixth was the want of enthusiasm in the various avocations of life. The lecturer elaborated each of these departments of his subject in his peculiar manner. His humorous descriptions and peculiar phraseology created great laughter. There were occasional bursts of eloquence and fine word painting. The speaker tells a story well, accompanying the relation with a great deal of mimetic action; an old story under his telling is well worth hearing again. An excellent moral and religious tone pervaded the lecturer. While some were somewhat disappointed in the realization of their expectations, the majority of those present were more than pleased with the lecturer. At the conclusion of the address, Mr. Geo. A. Cox moved, seconded by Mr. Wm. Clinton, a vote of thanks to Dr. Talmage, which was enthusiastically adopted.

The Burglar Boys.

On Thursday last John Ferguson, was charged by Chief of Police Johnston with having in company with Robert Duncan, Jr., and Wm. Noble, stolen a quantity of furs from Mr. Jos. Mills' fur store. The prisoner pleaded not guilty, and elected to be tried by a jury. Ferguson being required as a witness, the information against the trio was amended by stricking out his name, Chief Johnston, testified to finding the furs stolen (part of which were produced in court) in Chamberlain's barn, and Mr. Joseph Mills identified the goods produced as his. John Ferguson was also examined, but apart from unimportant evidence, declined to answer on the ground that the evidence might be used against himself on another charge. The magistrate sustained the objection. Mr. C. A. Weller, who appeared for the Crown, asked for an adjournment of the case, which was accordingly adjourned till Wednesday, when the hearing was resumed, with the result that failing evidence enough to convict, Duncan and Noble were discharged.

Destruction by Fire.

On Thursday morning early—about one o'clock—the alarm rang for a fire that had broken out in the bake shop of Mr. John Craig, George street. The flames, however, had made such rapid progress before the alarm was rung, that, though the brigade, as is their custom, were promptly on hand, the building, a frame one, was destroyed together with its contents. The firemen's efforts were, however, turned to account in saving the Carew grocery building and adjacent structures. The grocery stock in the former building, owned by Mr. John Cameron, was damaged considerably by smoke, etc. Mr. Craig's loss, besides the interruption of his business, amounts to about $400, protected by an insurance of $200 in the Citizen's Insurance Company.

A Bad Fall.

On Thursday afternoon, John Beech, a young man in the employ of Mr. H. W. Watson, painter, was working at painting the mansard roof of the rear wing of the new Cox Terrace, Rubidge street. By some mishap he fell headlong a distance of about fifteen feet, striking on his head, on which was made a large and deep scalp wound. The left wrist was badly sprained, and also the right knee, but no bones were broken. He was carried to Dr. King's surgery, where his wounds were dressed. He will be all right in a few days.

Tabernacle Sermons.

Discourse by Rev. T. DeWitt Talmage.

A POWERFUL AND BRILLIANT DISCOURSE.

When the six thousand people in the Brooklyn Tabernacle rise to begin the service, by singing first the Gloria in Excelsis, and afterwards, the tune being changed by a few notes of the organ, singing the long-meter doxology to the tune of "Old Hundred," the scene is one never to be forgotten. After the invocation to-night, Dr. Talmage gave out the hymn, "O thou great Jehovah." The subject of the evening sermon was, "The Influence of Cities." The text was from Genesis, iv., 17: "And he builded a city and called the name of the city after the name of his son Enoch."

So, you see, said Dr. Talmage, Cain was the founder of the first city, and, I suppose, it took after him in morals. It takes a city a long while to escape from the character of a founder. Where the founders of a city are criminal exiles, the filth, the vice, the prisons, are the shadows of those founders. It will take centures for New York to get over the good influence of the pious founders of that city—the founders whose prayers went up in the streets where now banks discount and brokers shave, and companies declare dividends and smugglers swear Custom House lies, and above the roar of the wheels and the crack of the auctioneer's mallet ascription: "We worship thee, O thou almighty dollar!" The old church that used to stand on Wall street is to this day throwing its blessing on the scene of traffic and on all the ships folding their white wings in the harbor. In other days people gathered in the cities for defence. None but the poor who had nothing to be stolen lived in the country. But in these times, when, through civilization and Christianity, it is safe to live anywhere, people gather in the cities for purpose of rapid gain.

The city is no worse than the country. The vices of the metropolis are more evident than the vices of the rural districts because there are more people to be bad if they wish to be. The merchant is as good as the farmer. There is no more cheating in town than out of town—no worse cheating; it is only on a larger scale. The countryman sometimes prevaricates about the age of the horse that he sells, about the size of the bushel with which he measures the grain, about the peaches at the bottom of the basket as being as large at those at the top, about the quarter of beef as being tender when it is tough, and to as bad an extent as the citizen, the merchant ever prevaricates about calicoes or silks or hardware, and as to villages I think that in some respects they are worse than the cities because they copy the vices of the cities in the meanest shape; and as to gossip, its heaven is a country village! Everybody knows everybody's business better than he knows it himself. The grocery store or the blacksmith shop by day and night is the grand depot for masculine tittle tattle; and there are always in the village a half dozen women who have their sun bonnets hanging near so that at the first item of news derogatory they can fly out and cackle it all over the town. Countrymen must not be to hard in their criticisms of the citizen, nor must the plough turn too sharpely against the yardstick.

Cities are not evil necessarily, as some have argued. They have been the birthplace of civilization. In them popular liberty has lifted its voice. Witness Genoa and Piza and Venice. After the death of Alexander the Great among his papers were found extensive plans of cities, some to be built in Europe, some to be built in Asia. The cities in Europe were to be occupied by Asiatics; the cities in Asia were to be occupied according to his plans by Europeans, and so there should be a commingling and a fraternity and a kindness and a good will between the continents and between the cities. So there always ought to be; the strangest thing in my comprehension is that there should be bickerings and rivalries among our American cities. New York must stop caricaturing Philadelphia and Philadelphia must stop picking at New York, and certainly the continent is large enough for St. Louis and Chicago. What is good for one city is good for all the cities. Here is the great highway of our natural prosperity. On that highway of natural prosperity walk the cities. A city with large forehead and great brain, that is Boston. A city with delibrate step and calm manner, that is Philadelphia. A city with its pocket full of change, that is New York. Two cities going with a rush that astounds the continent, they are St. Louis and Chicago. A city that takes its wife and children along with it, that is Brooklyn. Cincinnati, Louiseville, Atlanta, Pittsburgh, all the cities of the North and all the cities of the South, some distinuished for one thing, some for another, one for professional ability, another for affluence, another for fashion, but not one to be spared. What advantages one, advantages all. What damages Boston Common damages Washington Square, Laurel Hill, Mount Auburn, Greenwood weep over the same grief. New York helping to pay the obsequies of plague-stricken New England. The fires of Chicago and Boston a sore burn on the whole land. The statute of Benjamin Franklin in New York greeting the bronze statue of Edward Everett in Boston. All the cities a confraternity.

I cannot understand how there should go on bickerings and rivalries. I plead for a higher style of brotherhood or sisterhood among the cities of this country. But while there are great differences in some respects I have to tell you that all these cities impress upon me, and ought to impress upon you three or four very important lessons, all of them agreeing in the same thing. It does not make any diffence in what part of the country we walk the streets of a great city, there is one lesson, I think, which ought to strike every intelligent Christian man, and that is that the world is a scene of toil and struggle. Here and there you find a man in the street who has his arms folded and who seems to have no particular errand. But if you will stand at the corner of the street and watch the countenance of those who go by you will see in most instances there is an intimation that they are on an errand which must be executed at the earlist moment possible. So you are jostled hither and thither by business men. Up this ladder with a hod of bricks, out of this bank with a roll of bills, digging a cellar, shingling a roof, binding a book, mending a watch. Work with its thousand eyes, and thousand feet, and thousand arms goes on singing its song! "Work! work! work!" while the drums of the mill beat it and the steam whistles fife it. In the carpeted aisles of the forest, in the woods from which the eternal shadow is never lifted, on the shore of the sea on whose iron coast tosses the tangled foam, sprinkling the cracked cliffs with a baptism of whirlwind and tempest, is the best place to study God; but in the rushing, swarming, raving street is the best place to study man.

Going down to your place of business and coming home again I charge you look about. See these signs of poverty, of wretchedness, of hunger, of sin, of bereavement; and as yet go through the streets and come back through the streets gather up in the arms of your prayer all the sorrow, all the losses, all the sufferings, all the bereavement of those whom you pass, and present them in prayer before an all-sympathetic God. In the great day of eternity there will be thousands of persons with whom you in this world never exchanged one word, who will rise up and call you blessed; and there will be a thousand fingers pointed at you in Heaven, saying, "That is the man, that is the woman." And the blessing will come down upon you as Christ shall say: "I was hungry and ye fed Me, I was naked and ye clothed me, I was sick and in prison and ye visited me; inasmuch as ye did it to these poor waifs of the streets ye did it to me."

Again, in all these cities, I am impressed with the fact that all classes and conditions of society must commingle. We sometimes culture a wicked exclusiveness. Intellect despises ignorance; refinement will have nothing to do with boorishness. Gloves hate the sunburned hand; and the high forehead despises the flat head; and the trim hedgerow will have nothing to do with the wild copsewood; and Athens hates Nazareth. This ought not to be. I like this democratic principle of the Gospel of Jesus Christ which recognized the fact that we stand before God on one and the same platform. Do not take on any airs. Whatever position you have gained in society you are nothing but a man, born of the same parent, regenerated by the same spirit, cleansed in the same blood, to lie down in the same dust, to get up in the same resurrection. It is high time that we all acknowledged not only the Fatherhood of God, but the brotherhood of man.

Again, in all these cities, I am impressed with the fact that it is a very hard thing for a man to keep his heart right and to get to Heaven. Infinite temptations spring upon us from places of public concourse. Amid so much affluence how much temptation to covetousness and to be discontented with our humble lot! Amid so many opportunities for over reaching what temptation to extortion! Amid so much display, what temptation to vanity; amid so many saloons of strong drink, what allurement to dissipation. In the maelstroms and hell-gates of the street how many ma e quick and eternal shipwreck! If a man-of-war comes back from a battle, and is towed into the navy yard, we go down to look at the splintered spars, and count the bullet holes, and look with patriotic admiration on the flag that floated in victory from the masthead. But that man is more of a curiosity who has gone through thirty years of the sharp-shooting of business life and yet sails on victor over the temptations of the street. Oh, how many have gone down under the pressure, leaving not as much as the patch of canvas to tell where they perished. They never had any peace. Their dishonesties kept tolling in their ears.

If I had an axe and could split open the beams of that fine house, perhaps I would find in the very heart of it a skeleton. In his best wine there is a smack of poor man's sweat. Oh, is it strange that when a man has devoured widows' houses he is disturbed with indigestion? All the forces of nature are against him. The floods are ready to drown him and the earthquake to swallow him, and the fires to consume him, and the lightning to smite him. Aye, all the armies of God are on the street, and in the days when crowns of heaven are distributed some of the brightest of them will be given to those men who were faithful to God and faithful to the souls of others amid the marts of business, proving themselves the heroes of the street. Mighty were their temptations, mighty was their deliverance, and mighty shall be their triumph.

Again, in all these cities I am impressed with the fact that life is full of pretension and sham. What subterfuge! What double dealing! What two-facedness! Do all people who wish you good morning really hope for you a happy day? Do all the people who shake hands love each other? Are all those anxious about your health who enquire concerning it? Do all want to see you who ask you to call? Does all the world know half as much as it pretends to know? Is there not many a wretched stock of goods with a brilliant store window? Passing up and down these streets to your business and your work, are you not impressed with the fact that society is hollow, and that there are subterfuges and pretensions? Oh, how many there are who swagger and strut, and how few people are natural and walk! While fops simper and fools chuckle and simpletons giggle, how few people are natural and laugh; the courtesan and the libertine go down the street in beautiful apparel, while within the heart there are volcanoes of passion consuming their life away. I say these things not to create in you incredulity or misanthropy, nor do I forget there are thousands of people a great deal better than they seem; but, I do not think any man so prepared for the conflict of this life until he knows this particular peril. Enoch comes pretending to pay his tax to King Eglon, and while he stands in front of the king, stabs him through with a dagger until the haft went in after the blade. Judas Iscariot kissed Christ.

Again, in all these cities I am impressed with the fact that there is a great field for Christian charity. There are hunger and sufferings, want and wretchedness in the country; but these evils chiefly congregate in our great cities. On every street crime prowls and drunkenness staggers, and shame winks, and pauperism thrusts out its hands asking for alms. Here want is most squalid and hunger is most lean. A Christian man going along a street in New York saw a poor lad and he stopped and said: "My boy, do you know how to read and write?" The boy made no answer. He then asked the question twice and thrice: "Can you read and write?" And then the boy answered with a tear flashing on the back of his hand. He said in defence: No sir, I don't read, nor write either. God, sir, don't want me to read and write. Didn't he take away my father so long ago I never remember to have seen him? And haven't I had to go along the streets to get something to fetch home to eat for the folks? And didn't I, as soon as I could carry a basket, have to go out and pick up cinders and never have no schooling, sir? God don't want me to read sir. I can't read nor write neither."

Oh, these poor wanderers! They have no chance. Born in degradation, as they get up from their hands and knees to walk they take their first on the road to despair. Let us go forth in the name of the Lord Jesus Christ to rescue them. Let us ministers not be afraid of soiling our black clothes while we go down on that mission. While we are tying an elaborate knot in our cravat or while we are in the study rounding off some period rhetorically we might be saving a soul from death and hiding a multitude of sins. Oh Christian laymen, go out on this work. If you are not willing to go forth yourself, then give of your means, and if you are afraid to go and if you are too stingy to help, then get out of the way and hide yourself in the dens and caves of the earth.

In all the cities, east, west, north and south, I notice great temptations to commercial fraud. Here is a man who starts in business. He says: "I'm going to be honest." But on the same street, on the same block, in the same business are Shylocks. These men, to get the patronage of anyone, will break all understanding with other merchants, and will sell at ruinous cost, putting their neighbors at great disadvantage, expecting to make up the deficit in something else. If an honest principle could creep into that man's soul it would die of sheer loneliness! The man twists about trying to escape the penalty of the law and despises God, while he is just a little anxious about the sheriff. The honest man looks about him and says: "Well, this rivalry is awful. Perhaps I am more scrupulous than I need be. This little bargain I am about to enter is a little doubtful; but then I shall only do as the rest." And so I had a friend who started in commercial life, and as a book merchant, with a high resolve. He said: "In my store there shall be no books that I would not have my family read." Time passed on, and one day I went into his store and found some iniquitous books on the shelf and I said to him, "How is it possible that you can consent to sell such books as these?" "Oh," he replied, "I have got over those puritanical notions. A man cannot do business in this day unless he does it in the way other people do it."

One of the mightiest temptations in commercial life in all our cities to-day is the fact that many professed Christian men are not square in their bargains. Such men are in Baptist and Methodist and Congregational churches, and our own denomination is as largely represented as any of them. Our good merchants are foremost in christian enterprises; they are patronizers of art, philanthropic and patriotic. God will attend to them in the day of His coronation. I am not speaking of them but of those in commercial life who are setting a ruinous example to our young merchants. Go through all the stores and offices in our cities and tell me in how many of those stores and offices are the principles of Christ's religion dominant. In three-fourths of them? No. In half of them? No. In one-tenth of them? Decide for yourself. The impression is abroad somehow that charity can consecrate iniquitous gains, and that if a man give to God a portion of an unrighteous bargain then the Lord will forgive him the rest. The secretary of a benevolent society came to me and said, "Mr. so and so has given a large amount of money to the missionary cause," mentioning the sum. I said, "I can't believe it." He said, "It is so." Well, I went home, staggered and confounded. I never knew the man to give anything. But after a while I found out that he had been engaged in the most infamous kind of a swindle, and then he promised to compromise the matter with the Lord, saying, "Now, here is so much for the Lord! Please to let me off!"

I want to tell you that the Church of God is not a shop for receiving stolen goods, and that if you have taken anything from your fellows you had better return it to the man to whom it belongs. In a drug store in Philadelphia a young man was told that he must sell blacking on the Lord's Day. He said to the head man of the firm, "I can't possibly do that. I am willing to sell medicines on the Lord's Day, for I think that is right and necessary, but I can't sell this patent blacking." He was discharged from the place. A Christian man hearing of it took him into his employ, and he went on from one success to another until he was known all over the land for his faith in God and his good works as for his worldly success. When a man has sacrificed any temporal, financial good, for the sake of his spiritual interests, the Lord is on his side, and one with God is a majority.

But if you have been much among the cities you have also noticed that they are full of temptations of a political character. It is not so more in one city than in all the cities. Hundreds of men going down in our cities every year through the presence of politics. Once in a while a man will come out in a sort of missionary spirit and say:—"I am going into politics now to reform them, and I am going to reform the ballot box, and I am going to reform all the people I come in contact with." That man, in the fear and love of God, goes into politics with that idea and with a resolution that he will come out uncontaminated and as good as when he went in. But generally the case is, when a man steps into politics many of the newspapers try to blacken his character and to distort all his past history, and, after a little while has gone by, instead of considering himself an honorable citizen, he is lost in contemplation and admiration of the fact that he has so long been kept out of gaol!

Then look around and see the allurements to dissipated life. Bad books, unknown to father and mother, creeping into some of the best families in the community; and boys read them while the teacher is looking the other way, or at recess or on the corner of the street when the groups are gathered. These books are read late at night. Satan finds them a smooth plank on which he can slide down into perdition some of your sons and daughters. Reading bad books, one never gets over it. The books may be burned, but there is not enough power in all the apothecary's preparations to wash out the stain from the soul. Father's hands, mother's hands, sister's hands, will not wash it out; none but the hand of the Lord can wash it out. Ah the most dreadful part of the whole thing is that there are persons abroad whose whole business it is to despoil the young.

Ah, what an eternity such a man will have! As the door opens to receive him thousands of voice will cry out: "See here is what you have done;" and the wretch will wrap himself with fiercer flame and lead into deeper darkness and the multitude he has destroyed, will persue him and hurl at him the long, bitter, relentless, everlasting curse of their own anguish. If there be one cup of eternal darkness more bitter than another they will have to drink it to the dregs. If in all the ocean of the lost world that comes billowing up there be one wave more fierce than another, it will dash over them.

I stood one day at Niagara Falls and saw what you might have seen there—six rainbows bending over that tremendous plunge. I never saw anything like it before or since. Six beautiful rainbows arching that great cataract! And so, over the rapids and angry precipices of sin where so many have been dashed down, God's beautiful admonitions hover, a warning arching each peril—six of them, fifty of them, a thousand of them, Beware! Beware! Beware!

Young men after you go home, while you have time to reflect upon these things and before the duties of the office and the store and the shop come upon you again, look over this whole subject and after day has passed and you hear in the night the voices and footsteps of the city dying from your ear and it gets so silent that you can hear distinctly your watch under your pillow going "tick, tick," then open your eyes and look out upon the darkness and see two pillars of light, one horizontal, the other perpendicular, but changing their direction until they come together and your enraptured vision beholds it—the Cross.

THE REASON WHY!

OUR

Shoe Store is Always Crowded

With Customers is very apparent to those that have visited it and seen our Immense Stock and compared our prices with those asked elsewhere for the same goods. Never have we had such Bargains in Boots and Shoes as now. Never have we sold as many goods as now, and the more goods we sell the

GREATER BARGAINS

we have, as we are able to buy in larger quantities and at corresponding low prices. We retail as many Boots and Shoes as most jobbers sell at wholesale, consequently manufacturers make no difference in price to us than the wholesale trade, while smaller dealers are obliged to pay which is about the same as our regular retail price for the same quality of goods. It must be very evident then to any thinking person that there must be a good reason for our immense Shoe Business, and that our low prices, complete stock, and attention shown to our customers can be the only attraction powerful enough to draw such crowds to our store, and place us, with but two years' growth, as one of the largest retail Shoe Houses in Eastern Ontario.

JOBBERS' PRICES,

WARREN LELAND, whom everybody knows as the successful manager of the Largest Hotel Enterprises

of America, says that while a passenger from New York on board a ship going around Cape Horn, in the early days of emigration to California, he learned that one of the officers of the vessel had cured himself, during the voyage, of an obstinate disease by the use of

Ayer's Sarsaparilla.

Since then Mr. LELAND has recommended AYER'S SARSAPARILLA in many similar cases, and he has never yet heard of its failure to effect a radical cure.

Some years ago one of Mr. LELAND'S farm laborers bruised his leg. Owing to the bad state of his blood, an ugly scrofulous swelling or lump appeared on the injured limb. Horrible itching of the skin, with burning and darting pains through the lump, made life almost intolerable. The leg became enormously enlarged, and running ulcers formed, discharging great quantities of extremely offensive matter. No treatment was of any avail until the man, by Mr. LELAND'S direction, was supplied with AYER'S SARSAPARILLA, which allayed the pain and irritation, healed the sores, removed the swelling, and completely restored the limb to use.

Mr. LELAND has personally used for Rheumatism, with entire success; and, after careful observation, declares that, in his belief, there is no medicine in the world equal to it for the cure of Liver Disorders, Gout, the effects of high living, Salt Rheum, Sores, Eruptions, and all the various forms of blood diseases.

We have Mr. LELAND'S permission to invite all who may desire further evidence in regard to the extraordinary curative powers of AYER'S SARSAPARILLA to see him personally either at his mammoth Ocean Hotel, Long Branch, or at the popular Leland Hotel, Broadway, 27th and 28th Streets, New York.

Mr. LELAND'S extensive knowledge of the good done by this unequalled eradicator of blood poisons enables him to give inquirers much valuable information.

DUMMER.

GOVERNMENT GRANT ON THE NINTH LINE.

On Wednesday of last week, Mr. J. B. McWilliams, Crown Timber Agent, inspected the work done on the 9th line of Dummer, for which the Government last season appropriated $500, and municipality of Dummer, $200. Mr. J. Robb was appointed to expend the $200 grant, and Mr. A. R. Kidd the $500 grant. Mr. McWilliams is well pleased with the work done by both of these gentlemen, and says there is a good road from Lot 20 north, to Mr. Robb's, a distance of between four and five miles. This will leave the money subscribed by the people of this village to repair the road south from lot 20. If this money is as well expended as the Government and Dummer grants, the residents of North Dummer will have an excellent road to this village, and the business men here will secure the trade of a section of country heretofore closed to them. Mr. T. Blezard, our popular M. P. P., showed the interest he takes in his constituents, by accompanying Mr. McWilliams when making his inspection. It would be better if all members of Parliament would follow Mr. B's. example, for we understand he visits all new municipalities every year, to ascertain what is necessary to be done to assist them in making and repairing roads. Mr. McWilliams also gives all the assistance in his power in obtaining these grants. As it is now rather late in the season, the Norwood grant will not, probably, be expended until the spring.—Register.

Would You believe It?

Nature's great remedy, Kidney-Wort, has cured many obstinate cases of piles. This most distressing malady generally arises from constipation and a bad condition of the bowels. Kidney-Wort acts at the same time as a cathartic and a healing tonic, removes the cause, cures the disease and promotes a healthy state of the affected organs. James F. Morse, carriage Man'fr., of Myerstown, Pa., testifies to the great healing powers of Kidney-Wort, having been cured by it of a very bad case of piles which for years had refused to yield to any other remedy.

Sell and Pay Up.

The message we have to convey may be put in these words, "Sell and pay up." Don't sell if you do not require to, and if you do not want to; but pay up your accounts anyway, or rather your debts. This notion of leaving accounts unpaid is ridiculous and old-fashioned. It should be obsolete. Non-payment of these debt at the time when they ought to be paid, and at the time, too, when everybody expects them to be paid, has a depressing and deadening effect on general business, and increases considerably the costs and worries of trade. It is the bounden duty of every man who owes two dollars, or ten dollars, or one hundred dollars to the merchant to go and pay it now, and not put it off till winter or spring. Bills due the Harnessmaker should be paid now; and this is to be taken as a general intimation or command to all concerned to govern themselves accordingly, and promptly pay up.

It devolves upon the farmers at this particular season to set the money ball rolling. They have their harvest to realise upon, and fortunately it is a large harvest. Prices for wheat are low, too low, but for other farm produce fair figures are ruling. Barley is not so bad, compared with former years, except those abnormally high; oats and peas are good; hay, pork, beef live stock, butter, eggs, and a good many other things command good prices, and on the whole the farmer has had a good year. Farmers, then, should realize upon their surplus and pay their debts now. Let every farmer interested act upon this and come and get their Robes, Horse Blankets and Harness, of which I have a large and well-assorted stock, which I am determined to sell on a small margin.

B. SHORTLY,
45-tf George Street, Peterborough.

LINDSAY.

Mr. J. C. Grace, son of Mr. Wm. Grace, of this town, passed his final examination as a barrister at Osgoode Hall last week.

Messrs. Walters & McNeely, contractors for the new English church, have a large force of men at work getting stone out at the quarry at Bobcaygeon for the foundation of the church. Had the contract been let a few weeks earlier the stone could have been delivered at Lindsay this fall.

A new feature has been introduced into the Salvation Army. Last evening when the army appeared on parade the banner or tri-color was carried by two bouncing female members of the army. The idea was a good one and proved very attractive.

On Thursday of this week Mr. D. J. McIntyre and Dr. Burrows went to Toronto as a deputation from the Lindsay Mechanics' Institute to interview the Minister of Education relative to the payment of the Government grant to the local Institute.

Consumption Cured.

An old physician, retired from practice, having had placed in his hands by an East India missionary the formula of a simple vegetable remedy for the speedy and permanent cure of Consumption, Bronchitis, Catarrh, Asthma, and all throat and Lung affections, also a positive and radical cure for Nervous debility and all Nervous Complaints, after having tested its wonderful curative powers in thousands of cases, has felt it his duty to make it known to his suffering fellows. Actuated by this motive and a desire to relieve human suffering, I will send free of charge, to all who desire it, this receipt, in German, French or English, with full directions for preparing and using. Sent by mail by addressing with stamp, naming this paper, W. A. Noyes, 149 Power's Block, Rochester, N. Y. 45-26-eow.

CAMPBELLFORD.

The old Bible Christian Church, on Rear street, has been offered to the promoters of the Mechanics' Institute for a reading room.

The Grand Junction Railway bridge spanning the Trent River here will be removed and an iron bridge built instead.

Rice Lake was frozen over on the 9th instant—the earliest for many years.

There is not a large list of new buildings to be put down to the credit of Campbellford this year. Building operations have been somewhat stunted, and the same may be said of last year.

A Note of Warning to Suffering Humanity.

We feel that we would be wanting in the duty we owe to humanity if we did not sound a note of warning in regard to the use of Mercury and other poisonous minerals in the treatment of blood and skin diseases. If the reader could see the horrible suffering, the awful wrecks of human health and happiness, shown by our correspondence with those who have been dosed with these mineral poisons, he would shudder with horror. Arsenic, Mercury, Antimony, and Iodide of Potassium, are some of the remedies most ordinarily used for these diseases, and they are all POISON. Do not take these poisons. They might dry up your disease for a few days, but they will surely return, and with it you will have Mercurial Rheumatism, which may bring you years of torture. Shaker Blood Syrup will invigorate you and build you up, and force all the poison out through the pores of your skin, and cure you sound and well.

SHAKER BLOOD SYRUP

cures completely Scrofula, Syphilis, Rheumatism, Cancer, Catarrh, and Skin and Blood diseases of every description. Sold everywhere, $1.00 a bottle, or six for $5.00.

Consumptives should try Allen's Lung Balsam; it can be had of any druggist. See adv.

NORWOOD.

The Church of England manse is approaching completion.

Mr. Hugh Spence has sold his valuable farm to Mr. W. H. Hutchinson of this village, receiving therefore over $60 an acre. Mr. S. purchased the latter gentleman's house and lot on Spring street.

Miss Errett, of Peterborough, has taken over Mr. Heathfield's class and will visit this village every Wednesday. Miss Errett is a musician of rare talent, and we would earnestly recommend her to those requiring the services of a first-class teacher.

Carrying War

Into the enemy's country. This is verified in the case of Putnam's Corn Extractor, so favorably known throughout Canada. The large demand from the United States for this great corn cure has induced the proprietors to put it up there, and boldly push it to the front as the leading article in its line. From England also a demand has arisen. This is the reverse of the usual methods as a large portion of the proprietory goods sold here emenate from these countries. This speaks highly in favor of Putnam's Extractor, the great corn cure. We advise sufferers from this discomfort to test its merit. —Exchange.

OMEMEE.

About a quarter to six o'clock on Tuesday evening our villagers were thrown into a terrible state of excitement by the cry of "fire," when it was discovered that the High and Public School buildings had fallen a prey to the fire fiend. Soon the hook and ladder company was on hand and a large number of willing workers, but the flames had gained such headway that nothing could stay their progress till the fine buildings and a dwelling house owned by old Mr. Johnson were a heap of ruins. Loss about $5,000. Origin of fire unknown.

A Walking Skeleton.

Mr. E. Springer, of Mechanicsburg, Pa., writes: "I was afflicted with lung fever and abscess on lungs, and reduced to a walking skeleton. Got a free trial bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, which did me so much good that I bought a dollar bottle. After using three bottles, found myself once more a man, completely restored to health, with a hearty appetite, and a gain in flesh of 48 lbs. Call at Taylor & McDonald's drug store and get a free trial bottle of this certain cure for all Lung Diseases. Large bottles $1.00

PORT HOPE.

Mr. Johnston, Inspector of Weights and Measures for this district, had three parties doing business in the town before the Police Magistrate, for having illegal weights and measures in their possession. They were each fined $5 and costs.

Dr. Talmage paid our town a visit, on his way to Peterborough, on Wednesday morning last. He was captivated with its beautyful city-like appearance.—Times—The Dr. is very easily captivated, or is a monumental hypocrite.

Peterborough Examiner.

PETERBOROUGH, NOV. 27, 1884.

The Drainage Question.

Typhoid fever has proved fatal in so many cases at Kingston that the council is called upon to improve the sanitary condition of the city. It is proposed to expend several thousand dollars in drainage works, to begin at once. Peterborough, with her deficient drainage, should be incited to action by this good example. We are in a most lamentable position, as regards drainage. There is no denying that it is one of the most urgent wants of the town, and there is no town in Ontario that possesses such admirable natural facilities for perfect drainage. It has been pointed out that a trunk sewer built in or under Hamilton's creek is easily practicable. By making the sewer discharge in the river below the locks, there would be all-sufficient fall. Another advantage would be that by making the sewer from Spalding's Bay to the locks large enough, this monstrous nuisance, this pestiferous malaria manufactory, would be thoroughly drained; any overflow of water in the spring would find its way, as it does now, into the Little Lake. With a good-sized trunk sewer, in or under Hamilton's creek, the whole system of streets in the town could have small drains discharging into it, for the general trend of the site of the town is in every direction towards the creek. To make matters all the better, the creek would at all times keep the trunk sewer thoroughly flushed, and this expense would be saved, while the system of water works would be available for flushing branch sewers. It is hardly possible to find ready to hand more perfect natural advantages for a perfect system of drainage. If we possessed this, the conveniences and comfort to the citizens resulting therefrom, apart, altogether, from sanitary considerations, would amply repay the addition to their taxes which the construction of a drainage system would involve. But the sanitary considerations are the most momentous and important. As we have before pointed out, all the slops, refuse, etc., resulting from all domestic operations throughout the whole town are necessarily thrown upon the ground. With the porous nature of the soil underlying Peterborough, all this is absorbed rapidly by the ground, it is true; but then it must sooner or later find its way directly in the wells. The drinking water is thus contaminated, and, though its apparent purity is not injured by this absorption, yet it is certain as sunrise and sunset, that organic matter in abundance, finds its way into our drinking water. Science has proved that filtering will not remove nitrogenous organic matter, nor disease germs from water, both of which may co-exist with a bright, clear, sparkling aqueous fluid. Add to these the soakage from privy vaults which must year after year find its way into our wells, and which has on George street rendered the water undrinkably filthy, and we have alarming conditions, demanding a system of drainage with an emphasis that the mere requirements of cleanliness and comfort, per se, could not command. In the matter of the electric light, gas, water works, fine public and private buildings, we are abreast of the times, and infinitely ahead of any other town in Ontario, and many so-called cities; but in the matter of drainage, we are back in the dark ages. Of course any system of sewerage would be a great expense. So are the doctor's bills we are compelled to pay because of the lack of drainage; so is the expense of funerals and plots in the cemetery, and monuments over the graves of those who could not resist the attacks of typhoid fevers and other zymotic diseases engendered by drinking contaminated water, and breathing a pestilent atmosphere, reeking with the effluvium of matter that should be carried away by drains. But the cost need not deter Peterborough from attacking the drainage matter. We are out of debt, our rate of taxation is low, and by a judiciously arranged issue of debentures, the payment might be so distributed over many years, that our children and grand-children might help largely to pay the debt, and the burden on the present generation, be exceedingly light, while we would reap all the untold benefit that would arise from a thorough system of sewerage for the town of Peterboro'. If our town authorities do not see fit so move in the matter, the people themselves must move in it. The question is a vitally important one, and no argument is needed in proof of it. The subject must be dealt with some time, and no time is so opportune as the present.

Notwithstanding the Season is advancing Turnbull's Dress Goods Department is still furnished with the most desirable lines in all colors. Where can you get such a choice of Dress Trimmings as at Turnbull's?

Agricultural Education.

The Council of the Agricultural and Arts Association of Ontario, in accordance with the scheme of annual examinations in subjects having a direct bearing upon practical agriculture, announce that the second of these examinations will be held at the same time, at the same places and subject to the same rules regulations and provisions as the High School Intermediate Examinations, July, 1885. The course of reading for third class certificates will be concerning the nature of soils; the substances found in plants; exhaustion of land; how prevented and how restored; the necessity for manure and use of the different kinds; tillage operations, ploughing, harrowing, rolling, etc.; adaptation of crops to soil; rotation of crops, etc.; live stock and its management; food, its chemical composition and adaptation to feeding, fattening, etc.

The course of reading for second class certificates will embrace the subjects of the plant; the soil; manures; tillage operations; seed and sowing; roots; green fodder; rotation of crops; drainage; exhausted lands; breeding of animals; horses; cattle; sheep; swine; food and feeding; diseases of crops; forestry and entomology.

For third class candidates there will be given, in addition to certificates, cash prizes of $25, $20 and $15 respectively to the three securing the highest number of marks. To the three second class candidates scoring the greatest number of marks who never attended any agricultural school or college, $25, $20 and $15, respectively. To the four highest third class candidates who never attended any agricultural school or college there will be given $30, $25, $20 and $15, respectively. The object of the Association being to promote the development of a taste for reading and the acquisition of knowledge on agricultural subjects, the examination questions will not be based on any particular book or books. The following books are suggested:—

(1.) First Principles of Agriculture (Tanner); Hand Book of Agriculture, embracing soils, manures, rotation of crops and live stock (Wrighteon); Canadian Farmer's Manual of Agriculture (Whitcombe); Soil of the Farm (Sir J. B. Lawes and others); Catechism of Agricultural Chemistry and Geology (Johnston)—new edition, by Cameron.

(2.) New American Farm Book (Allen); Talks on Manures (Harris); Chemistry of the Farm (Warrinton); Elements of Agricultural Chemistry and Geology (Johnston and Cameron); Stock-Breeding (Miles); The Complete Grazier (Youatt & Burn); American Cattle (Allen); Manual of Cattle-Feeding (Armsby); The Shepherd's Own Book (Youatt, Skinner & Randall); Treatise on the Pig (Harris); Veterinary Adviser (Law); Insects Injurious to Vegetation (Harris); Insects Injurious to Fruit (Saunders.)

The first list above is for all candidates, and the second for those who intend to write for second class certificates. In addition to the prizes offered by the Association, the County Councils of Peterborough and Simcoe last year gave special prizes to those successful candidates residing in the respective counties, and the Association hopes that the example of their liberality will be generally followed. The youth of our agricultural community should show their appreciation of the interest taken in their welfare by fitting themselves, by a diligent course of reading, for the above examinations; they can be at no loss; if they are not successful, w. at they may learn is so much clear gain. Now that agricultural classes have been organized in the Peterborough Collegiate Institute, it is to be hoped that this county will turn out a large class of successful candidates. Intending candidates are requested to send their names, accompanied with a statement as to whether they have ever attended any agricultural school in Canada or elsewhere, and also of the place at which they desire to present themselves to the Secretary of the Association, Henry Wade, Toronto, on or before May first, 1885.

Since the fall in price of Millinery at Turnbull's many have availed themselves of the opportunity to secure a bargain. A fresh lot of these Job Goods trimmed up this week.

Failure of the Experiment.

When deluding the people into voting for the N. P., the Tory publications were most positive as to its being the only sure panacea for hard times—a sure cure for commercial depression for all time to come. Later, when it failed to fill the bill, it was pronounced an experiment, and time for the development of its powers was demanded. As an experiment it is a conspicuous specimen of failure. It has not assured prosperity, it has not kept up the rate of wages nor insured a steady demand for labour. It has not kept Canada for the Canadians, for the volume of imports has steadily increased under its rule. It has not made a home market for the farmer's produce, nor has it even kept up a good price. Wheat at seventy cents per bushel is not what was promised the farmers in return for submitting to high taxation. Feeling that the N. P. has failed to fill the bill, its organs are trying to distract attention from its failure by exaggerating the commercial depression in free trade England. The depression and distress is merely confined to a few localities, as is proven by reliable statistics. They forgot or do not dare to mention that the depression is far greater in protectionest countries, like Russia and France. In the latter the Chamber of Deputies is considering the establishment of public works to give relief to the unemployed. Germany, another protectionest country, is away behind in her finances. The United States are also suffering severely from hard times; many factories are closing down and throwing thousands out of employment, while others are combining to limit production and keep up prices. Judging from recent reports from that paradise of protection, the United States, the commercial condition is exceedingly discouraging. The following headings to the news columns of the Toronto World, a strongly protectionest journal, shows that protection doesn't insure perpetual prosperity to our Yankee neighbours:—"Reductions all round. A period of depression in United States factories. Cutting down wages and lessening the hours of labor—Hundreds out of employment." Still protection is a great thing, and we are asked to believe, in the face of common sense and bitter experience, that it is possible to make a country happy and prosperous by taxing the people.

CHURCH IMPROVEMENTS.

Many of the folk who are wont to meet in Fraserville Methodist church, intend building a new shed and repairing the exterior in general, which is much needed.

BIBLE SOCIETY.

The Bible Society meeting which was held at Springville Presbyterian church was poorly attended, owing to the inclemency of the weather. The Rev. Weston Jones gave us an eloquent discourse.

ORANGEISM.

The members of L. O. L. No. 46, held a grand Royal Arch meeting on Monday evening last. Some taking the degree. Orangeism is rapidly progressing in this vicinity. A number of brethren from Peterborough, Millbrook, Bailieboro and Springville were present, and spent a very pleasant time, also a very profitable time, as Bro. G. Hall and others who are well posted in the work of the order, were there and spoke fluently.

OBITUARY.

The late Minnie Goodfellow, youngest daughter of Mr. Robert Goodfellow, entered into rest, Thursday afternoon, November 13th, at 1.30, she closed her eyes to the natural sun, to gaze with unclouded vision upon Jesus the Son of righteousness. Seldom was the grace of conversion more clearly manifested, and the peace of God more happily enjoyed; and there could not be a more triumphant end. All during the weary months of her decline she enjoyed the smile of God's benediction, which enabled her to bear witness before many visitors, that the blood of Jesus Christ cleanseth from all sin, and that she longed to depart and be with Christ, realizing that perfect love that casteth out fear. It was a means of grace to many, who heard her speak so calmly of death which had lost its sting, and of sure and glorious hope of life immortal. For some years she was a member of the Presbyterian church Springville, and acted as organist during that time, and at all times faithfully discharged her duty as a Christian sister. Not only will Minnie be missed in the church, but also in society, as she was an especial favorite there. On Saturday, 15th November her remains were interred in Little Lake Cemetry, to await the archangel's trumpet.

IN MEMORY.

Who is that so white and wan,
Lying on that bed of pain,
We give one sad look—turn away,
Start—turn around and look again.

What's in that face to make us shiver,
And then draw nearer to the bed,
Gaze upon it for a minute,
Then weeping turn away our head.

Ah, our hearts have not deceived us.
It is Minnie, and we bow
O'er the death-bed of our darling,
For no help can save her now.

Oh, to think that she is dying,
She so gentle and so fair,
Surely God hath put upon us,
Almost more than we can bear.

But our anguish is subdued,
When we look on that sweet face,
Methinks almost too sweet for earth,
Fit only for a happier place.

So we pray unto the Father,
That he'll help our sorrow bear,
And will make us pure as Minnie,
So that we may meet her there.

PERSONAL.

Col. Villiers, inspector of armories, was in town on official business last Thursday.

Mr. W. J. Morrison, brother of Mr. Geo. A. Morrison, insurance agent, is visiting in town. He is agent of the Souris and Rocky Mountain Railway, in the North-West.

Mr. T. G. Choate, formerly proprietor of the Caisse House, is in town. There is every probability, we understand, that he will soon be found engaged in business in Warsaw.

Mr. J. G. Joseph, of Montreal, who was announced to appear in his wonderful coffee pot musical imitations at the Cathedral concert, came to town on Monday, but a sudden and severe attack of tonsillitis prevented his filling his concert numbers. He is now quite ill at the Oriental Hotel.

THE GEORGE BROWN STATUE.

The statute erected in Queen's Park to the memory of Hon. George Brown, was unveiled on Tuesday at noon, the cermony being performed by Hon. Alexander Mackenzie. Owing to the snow storm it was decided to adjourn to Convocation hall, where addresses were delivered by Attorney-General Mowat and Senator Allan. About two thousand persons were present.

Mr. T. C. Berchard, public school teacher, Norland, writes: "During the fall of 1881 I was much troubled with Biliousness and Dyspepsia, and part of the time was unable to attend to the duties of my profession. Northrop & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery and Dyspeptic Cure was recommended to me, and I have much pleasure in stating that I was entirely cured by using one bottle. I have not had an attack of my old complaint since, and have gained fifteen pounds in weight."

BERUBEE'S HOTEL, Lakefield,

LEON DION having purchased the Hotel business in Lakefield so long carried on by Mr. Geo. Burubee, begs to solict a continuance of the patronage of the public. The new proprietor hopes by strict attention to business, and care in managing the Hotel, to keep up the reputation of this popular House. 39-1

EXPLANATION.

To The Editor of THE EXAMINER.

DEAR SIR,—Some four weeks ago, in consequence of two very sick patients in my own house, (my wife and a stranger lady) I was obliged on one or two occasions to remonstrate with some noisy lads who have been in the habit of enjoying themselves rather loudly up and down the sidewalks during the summer evenings. There were no thoughts of violence, no threats of vengeance, nor, in the classic language of your classy correspondent, no "resort to the manly art of slugging," not even a thought of such a thing. And I must, to the credit of the boys, say that they have been much more considerate and kind of late. And now with respect to the "last encounter." Late last Saturday night, the 15th, about midnight, I was walking down the street south towards my own house; I was on the sidewalk, or at least where the sidewalk should be, when I was passed by two men going north, but in the middle of the street. When a few yards past, one of them began pelting my little dog with stones, causing him to rush up to me for protection. I, not knowing but the next stone might be sent in my own direction, and not feeling well pleased at what I considered an unmanly act, stopped and spoke to them, saying, "I am rather surprised that young men would stop to pelt a dog that was quietly following its master, at the best it is not a very manly thing to do." I got in reply some impertinence and bluster, to which I said, "well my friends, you might be mistaken in that." I was about to move on when I got some more impertinence. I turned round saying, "I shall know who you are," and immediately walked over to them. As I came near, one of them walked away saying to the other in an undertone, "come on, come on," but he stayed, and I went up to him and quietly placing my hand on his left arm, looked into his face, but in the darkness could not recognise him, and told him so. But I saw he was considerably under the influence of liquor, and I said to him, had I known he was in that state I would not have paid attention to him, and I came away, telling him I would like to know where he had got his liquor at that time on Saturday night. My object in going over to them was simply to place the men, to know who they were, in which I failed, as I know not yet who they were, and had they not been their own worst friends it never would have been heard of, as I said nothing about the incident till I was spoken to about it in the village.

But whoever your correspondent is, he must be a small-brained creature, one of those mother gossips who live on gossip and fatten on scandal, and are the curse of every community. And these creatures are always hypocrites. He has nothing to say against the unruliness near his own door, no, no, it might offend somebody. But listen to his cant when speaking of the "Lang boys," when he declares "it is time a stop was put to such doings," and the next moment he proclaimed his dishonesty and betrays the animus that governs him, by turning round and attacking with deliberate falsehood an unoffending and order loving citizen.

Yours, etc.,
JOHN MARSH, M. D.

A COMPARISON AND A CONTRAST.

THE FAIR GROUNDS QUESTION AGAIN.

To the Editor of THE EXAMINER:

DEAR SIR,—In view of an article in the Review of a recent date, no doubt written by the Secretary of the Society, elaborately attempting to bolster up and justify the purchase or lease of grounds for the Agricultural Society in the south part of the town—the Morrow property—I wish to institute a comparison and draw a contrast. In the article referred to it is asserted that the south site is much cheaper than the Cox property. Now, I am reliably assured that Mr. Cox offers terms of paymept of the most liberal nature. He is willing to accept in payment for the property the $1,000 in cash guaranteed, and for the balance accept a mortgage for nine or more years at six per cent. per annum interest. Take the price of 15 acres amply sufficient for the needs of the Society—at $200, deduct the amount paid in cash and it will be found that by investing in the north site, on the terms named, the Society, in nine years, will have paid only $100 more than will be required to pay the rent of the Morrow site for the same period; while, at the same time, there will be required to pay on the Cox site only $2000 to secure its freehold. In contrast to this, if the south site is selected; at the end of nine years, after paying as much for rent as is paid in interest on the Cox site, less $100, there will have to be paid $6.000 (12 acres at $500 per acre), to secure the freehold of the Morrow property—that is $4,000 more for three acres less land. This is economy with a vengeance. It will be well to recollect that Mr. Cox is willing to sell 20 acres as well as 15, but it seems that the latter will be amply sufficient.

Now, regarding the facility of approach, Mr. Carnegie, at a meeting of the directors, as a plea in favour of the Morrow site, urged that before long there would likely be a street railway running down George street, giving easy access to the south site grounds. Does Mr. Carnegie fancy that the street railway will only be run down George street for his pet hobby to canter on? If it is laid at all it will go north on George street, too, and give as good an approach to the north site grounds. Mr. Cox, owning the land on both sides of the old Cobourg railway track, is willing to guarantee, in case the road is not re-opened, and he secures possession of the track, which he is likely to do, that the cutting shall be kept intact, thus forming a line for the laying of a street car track to the very gates of the north site grounds.

Now that both sides of the question have been ventilated, and as there is a decided advantage in reconsidering the matter, would it not be well to not be precipitate in committing the Society, to the purchase proposed, till after January first, next?

LINDSAY CENTRAL EXHIBITION THE LAST ROUND.

To the Editor of THE EXAMINER:

DEAR SIR,—I notice in your last issue that Mr. Campbell again comes up smiling, proving the truth of Hamlet's bilious little say; ing: "A man may smile and smile and be" Mr. Campbell. His last effort is a rather phenomenal contribution to the literature of abuse and misrepresentation. Mr. Campbell asserts that he was not on the exhibition grounds. If it was not his ghost that I, as well as others, saw and conversed with on the grounds, then, I leave it to your readers to find a short word to fit his statement. I myself saw and conversed with him on the grounds, and can prove by many others that he was there. I do not intend to refer to his other statements, which are equally reliable. My object in first writing you has been served. That object was, in the interest of agricultural exhibitions, to protect them from being imposed on by false entries, and to make the directors of the Lindsay Central more careful in the future, and I fancy that Mr. Campbell has had a wholesome lesson that will hereafter lead him to cultivate his memory in the matter of the age of his stock when entering for competitive exhibition.

Yours truly,
"HAY SEED."

"I would not live alway." No; not if disease is to make my life a daily burden. But it need not, good friend, and will not if you will be wise in time. How many of your loved ones are mouldering in the dust who might have been spared for years. The slight cough was unheeded, the many symptoms of disease that lurk within were slighted and death came. Dr. Pierce's "Golden Medical Discovery," cannot recall the dead, though it has snatched numbers from the verge of the grave, and will cure consumption in its earlier stages.

ELECTRIC LIGHT EXPOSING MATTER OF INTEREST.

To the Editor of THE EXAMINER:

SIR,—The illiberality displayed by some of our Councillors in treating questions of importance by haggling and foolish talk is disgusting and painful to any one, sufficient to destroy the desire of attending such a meeting again. The electric light question has afforded ample proof, when it requires several meetings to settle it. Oh! no! A compromise had to be hit on, or they might have got stuck up to the time for the election of the new Council, and so it was agreed by a signed petition of ratepayers from the second ward to defray the expense for four lights burning after midnight, and by such means the Gordian knot was cut. I would like to know the fairness in such a division, to which I for one protest against contributing to, however little the cost may be. Residents for years past in Peterborough can well recollect what the South Ward of the town has been, and whether the improvements in fitting up, boulvarding streets and building miles of sidewalk could have been done for the taxes collected from that portion of the town, and is it not the Second Ward that contributes largely for the improvement of the outside Wards, but whenever the former puts in its claim a local tax is the answer of our all-wise Council. The reason for such apathy exhibited by ratepayers of the Second Ward against such a one-sided proceeding is that many of our business men live in a different Ward, hence their indifference. If local tax is made the rule for the Second Ward, why then is it not made a rule in general also for the other Wards? Councillor McNeil is putting forward a claim for a new heater for the fire engine. I hope that this will be treated by the Council in the same way as a local tax, as George street has the water works to depend on for protection, and I may here express myself in precisely the same way as some of the Councillors did, when the question of night watchmen came up; what business have we to protect the rich man's property? Now, Mr. Editor, I beg to differ from that rule altogether, and my view in that direction is more liberal, as I hold that every individual is morally bound to protect whenever there is a chance, rich and poor alike, and moreover I hold that the Council is in duty bound to see us protected all alike, rich or poor; for such duty they are elected, and only for such consideration have we to pay taxes. There have from time to time come up questions of greater importance as regards expenses, such as filling up Spaulding's Bay, &c.; is this not also a question of local tax? Should such feeling exist, no consideration for the well-being of the town, but jealousy over local matters. Looking back on the year's action of our Council, what has been done by them of which they can boast! Many questions affecting health, trade and protection have been brought before their notice, and all have been treated with contempt. The question of drainage, our police force, and that important matter, trade with the country east of us. Such urgent demands have been completely ignored as being too expensive and not feasible, but there are other exhibits though in a question coming up, where our Council can air their dignity, such as the entertainment of the York Pioneers, where the vote for the expense is carried without dispute.

Now look at their wisdom in rebuilding the Hunter street bridge in such a season of the year, where the expenses must be more, the delay to the unfortunates who have to pass daily to and fro, most embarrassing, and the work, no matter how well executed under the circumstances, being not so satisfactory as if built earlier in the season. The reason is not far to seek for such bungling, as if that bridge was required in the First Ward it would have been built long ago. Thanking you, Mr. Editor, for your space.

Yours, &c.,
WM. LECH.

COUNCIL MEETING.

Council met in Warsaw, Nov. 8th, 1884. All the members present, minutes of last meeting read and confirmed. Mr. Jacob White was appointed township Engineer, in terms of "Ditches and Watercourses, Oct., 1883." Under "The Public Health, Oct., 1884." The Reeve reported to council, that a local Board of Health had been appointed and organized, but had really done no work; that there was said to be several cases of diptheria in different parts of the township, but only one death from that cause, as far as he knows. Health of the township otherwise good. The report was received and adopted.

ORDERED PAID.

To S. P. Ford, M. D., amputating arm and attendance on Frederick Rattles, $25. W. Darling, refund of A. L. Davis & Co's. account, $1.25.

BY-LAWS PASSED.

One to appoint a township Engineer, and one to provide for the payment of money.

Council adjourned till Saturday the 27th of December, to meet in Warsaw.

AN OPPONENT'S TRIBUTE.

The Hastings Star, a fierce political opponent of Mr. T. Blezard, M.P.P., fairly accords him this meed of praise:—Mr. Blezard, M.P.P., was away at Booshink last week inspecting and paying for some government road work done in that place. The settlers in that locality have been greatly incommoded for want of a road to the front. Through Mr. B.'s efforts the government gave $500, the settlers gave 156 days road work free gratis, and the corporation of Norwood has promised to expend $200 next spring, so that altogether we think they should have no reason to complain about their roads. Although a political opponent, candor compels us to say that Mr. B. is discharging his duties in a manner that commands our respect.

DUFFY.

A week ago while Mr. Terry Garbutt was driving home, after night, with Mrs. Garbutt, his horse shied, completely upsetting them into the small creek as they were passing over the crossing. Mrs. G. escaped unhart, while Mr. Garbutt received a sprain in one of his ankles. The buggy was broken. We hope the worthy councilman of Smith may take a timely hint and see that these crossings have proper guards put on them. Sooner or later we are likely to hear of a serious accident occurring—perhaps a life lost. Then, probably, the necessary repairs will be made, in addition to a bill of damages. The Council should remember the responsibility that rests on them in the event of a casualty.

RECOVERED.

A telegram on the 19th instant announced the fact the body of the late K. Urquhart had been found in a canal basin at Niagara. An inquest was held and a verdict of accidental drowning returned. The remains were brought to Peterborough and buried in Little Lake Cemetery on Saturday last. There is but little we wish to add to what we have already said in a previous issue. We have lost one of our most prominent, oldest and most respected citizens. Genial, kind-hearted and sociable, he had many friends and no enemies. There is one universal feeling of regret and sorrow for his untimely end under such sad circumstances, and of deep sympathy for the bereaved.

Peterborough Markets.

PETERBOROUGH, Nov. 19, 1884

Receipts of grain during the week very light. Prices stand about as follows:—Spring wheat, 67c. to 69c.; fall, 68c. to 70c.; barley rather quiet, selling at 50c. to 63c.; rye, 50c.; peas, 58c. to 60c.; oats, 32c. Wheat looks a little better, being somewhat higher in England. Barley quiet; the close of navigation affecting it some. On the Market: Dressed hogs are moving more freely with prices higher, $6.25 being about the top price now. Keg butter, very little doing and few offering; selling mostly at 17c. to 19c., as to quality. Beef brings $5.00 to $6.00. Mutton and lamb, 6c. to 7c. Poultry holds its price very well and is plentiful. Geese bring 45c. to 55c. Turkeys 50c. to 80c., anything extra bringing something more. Apples when good sell very well, bringing $2.00 to $2.50 per barrel; in bags, 75c. to $1.00 being about the general run. Potatoes 40c. to 45c. per bag. Cordwood, sawed and mixed wood about $3.00 per load. Hard wood, sawed, $4.00 for something near a cord. Tamarac, long wood, $2.50 per load.

James Ferguson, registrar of Middlesex, died on Monday at his residence in Westminister, after a long illness, at the advanced age of seventy-five years.

What is Catarrh?

Catarrh is a muco-purient discharge caused by the presence and development of the internal vegetable parasite ameba in the delicate lining of the nose. This parasite is only developed under favourable circumstances, and these are: Morbid state of the blood, as the blighted corpuscle of tubercle, the germ poison of syphilis, mercury, tetterore, from the retention of the effete matter of the skin, supressed perspiration, badly ventilated sleeping apartments, and other poisons that are germinated in the blood. These poisons keep the internal lining membrane of the nose in a constant state of irritation, ever ready for the deposit of the seeds of these germs, which spread up the nostrils and down the fauces or back of the throat; causing ulceration of the throat; up the eustachian tubes, causing deafness; barrowing in the vocal cords, causing hoarseness; usurping the proper structure of the bronchial tubes, ending in pulmonary consumption and death.

Many attempts have been made to discover a cure for this distressing disease by the use of inhalants and other ingenious devices, but none of these treatments can do a particle of good until the parasites are either destroyed or removed from the mucous tissue.

Some time since a well-known physician of forty years' standing, after much experimenting, succeeded in discovering the necessary combination of ingredients which never fail in absolutely and permanently eradicating this horrible disease, whether standing for one year or forty years. Those who may be suffering from the above disease should, without delay communicate with the business managers, Messrs. A. H. Dixon & Son, 305 King street west, Toronto, Canada, and get full particulars and treatise free by enclosing stamp.—Toronto Mail. 48-1t

LOVE FOR A DAY!

In a passion of joy and gratitude I put my arms round his neck, telling him, with kisses and tears, how glad and happy I was, how I thanked Heaven, how my happiness was all the greater because my anguish had been so keen. He was strangely silent. But I heeded not. When my rapturous words were over, he would talk to me in the old, sweet, grave fashion.

"You may kiss my lips, Mark," I said, "for I have kept my promise. The kiss you left on them is there still; no one has touched them. I never swerved, even in my thoughts, for one moment from you. If you had never returned, and I had lived fifty years longer, I should have been just as true. All other men are but shadows. Oh, Mark, teach me—you are wiser and better than I—teach me how to thank Heaven that you have come back to me."

Strangely silent was he; but, as I remembered, great emotion often causes silence. I could not see him, for he had drawn me to him. I could only stand still, folded in his close embrace, and murmur to him all the loving words that came from my heart—how I had yearned for him—how long the days, the weeks, the months and years had been—how I had thought of him unceasingly—how, feeling sure that he was in Heaven, I had made Heaven the home of my heart—how I had been in many places and seen many men, but there was none like him, none to be compared with him. All the loving thoughts that had ever passed through my mind were poured out like water beneath his feet. The wind faintly stirred the green boughs above our heads, the birds were singing blithely, and I could hear my own voice rippling on, but not his—not his.

A gust of wind blew a lilac-spray right into my face. I seized it and kissed it passionately.

"How strange, Mark, that you should come back to me in the time of the lilacs! They seem almost like living friends. But, Mark, speak to me. I say all; you say nothing; speak to me."

Still I could not see his face.

"Great sorrow made me dumb, Mark; great joy gives me words," I said. "Tell me that you are pleased to see me, to find me."

"Nellie, my true, loving Nellie!" he said.

And I was content. Oh, wondrous love! I was content and happy. I too stood for some minutes in silence, the dark, handsome, beloved face bending over mine.

"I believe those happy birds know all about it, Mark," I said. "Hark, how they are singing. If I had known what to-day would bring, how I should have longed for it to come! Oh, Mark, what a debt you have to pay me! What hours I have spent in praying for you! What tears I have shed! You must repay me all those prayers and tears. Mark, raise your head and let me look at you. Do you know that I have hardly seen your face yet?"

But for all answer, he drew me nearer to him and whispered:

"My dear, loving Nellie!"

I was quite content, safe in the shelter of his arms, my happy face resting on his breast.

"Do you know, Mark," I said, "I was so sure you would come back to me in July when the four years were ended that I spent the greater part of every day, while the month lasted, under the trees? Since the world began no woman has ever loved more truly than I love you. I am proud of my faith, Mark—proud of my unswerving truth—proud that I knew and understood you so well—proud that no shadow of doubt has ever dimmed the sun of my great love."

Still was he strangely silent, and the fiery passion of my words was wearing away. I wanted to look into the beloved face. I wanted the dear lips to lavish love on me, as mine had on him.

"Mark, look at me!" I cried, in a rapture of loving impatience. "It seemed to me, as you came along, that you were sad and melancholy. Look at me. See the love that beams in my face and in my eyes for you."

But his head drooped lower, and he drew me nearer to him.

A thought came to me that possibly he had been ill, and I knew how illness changes people. Yes, he had been ill, and seeing me had been too much for him. Perhaps if he could have expressed his emotion in a torrent of words as I had done, he would have been better.

"Mark," I said, "look at me; let me see your face. I am beginning to fear that you are ill."

He raised his head, and once more the dark eyes looked into my own. Ah me, the face was changed. The youth, the hope, the brightness was gone; it was pale, careworn, wistful. But the eyes had their old power over me.

"Have you been ill, Mark?" I asked, anxiously.

"No," he replied, "not in body; I have been in mind."

"I will cheer you and make you better. Why, when you went away, your face was bright and brave. What has changed it?"

Was I mistaken, or could it have been a moan that had fallen from his lips.

"Mark," I cried, "you have been in sore trouble, I am afraid; but it is all over now. We shall never be parted again. Why—why do you not speak to me as I speak to you?"—and again my trembling, burning hands clung to him, again the tears rained from my eyes, and the passionate love of my heart found expression in whispered words.

Ah me, he was strangely silent. And it seemed to me, now that the first shock of surprise was over, that the figure to which I clung was growing rigid.

"Oh, my love," I cried, "speak to me—to me, Nellie Chester, your wife who is to be, the one woman in the world who loves you with a great love! Why do you not speak to me, Mark?"

"I have not yet recovered from my surprise, Nellie," he said.

"Surprise!" I repeated. "Why, Mark, you knew I was here, did you not?"

"No, Nellie; I had not the remotest idea of it," he replied.

"You did not know that I was here? You did not come purposely to find me?" I cried.

"No," he answered sadly, turning his face from me.

"Then," I asked, in wonder, "why did you come? What has brought you here?"

He looked at me, and I saw how full of sorrow and distress his face was.

"Nellie," he said, gently, "will you tell me what brings you here?"

"Do you not know?" I asked.

"I do not. I cannot even imagine," he said.

"I am living here as companion to Lady Yorke," I said. "I waited in the old home at Gracedieu until the four years were over. I lived alone, longing, hoping against hope for news of you every day, afraid to go away lest you should come during my absence."

He laid his hand caressingly on my head, and the horrible chill that had begun to creep through my veins ceased.

"My sweet, loyal Nellie!" he said; but in some vague way the words seemed forced from him.

"Then, you see, Mark," I went on, happy from the caress of his dear hand, "my money was gone, and I was obliged to seek a home. I have been as happy here as I could be anywhere without you."

"You are Lady Yorke's companion?" he said, as though he could not recover from his surprise.

"Have you been to Gracedieu?" I asked.

"No," he answered in a low tone.

Ah, well, he was here. Why he had come mattered little. He would tell me all when he recovered from his surprise. There would be no secrets, no mysteries between us. I unclasped his hands and held them in mine.

"You are tired, Mark, and not well, I am sure," I said; "let us sit down and talk quietly."

"Oh, Nellie, Nellie, you are killing me with every word!" he cried.

"Killing you, Mark? Why, I would die a hundred times over for you! I have done so. Every day of your long absence has been like a day of death to me."

"Hush, my darling!" he cried, "for Heaven's sake, hush!"

"But why, Mark? Why must I not speak to you? Why are you so strange? Why are you distant and silent?"

But for all answer he held up his hand and repeated, "Hush, my darling."

Why should that deadly chill come over me? Why should my limbs tremble? There could be nothing to fear. Mark was living, and he was with me. I beat down the horrible rising doubt. I would not listen to it. What could there be wrong between Mark and me? I sat down upon a rustic bench and said:

"Sit here with me, Mark, and we can talk at our ease."

But he did not sit down, and the terrible fear grew. I could feel the warm color leave my face, and the blood in my veins grow chill. I could have cried aloud in my agony. But I must know what it all meant. The change in my face startled him.

"Nellie," he cried, "for Heaven's sake do not look like that; I cannot bear it! Do not let the joy and love die from your face yet, my darling—not just yet."

"Why must they die at all? Now that you have come back, why can we not be happy as we were? There is no reason, Mark, is there?"

Paler, graver, sadder than ever, he took my hand in his.

"I have not the courage to speak!" he cried. "Heaven forgive me, I cannot speak!"

"Is it that you have no money, Mark?" I asked, with a sudden sense of relief. "Oh, my darling, I do not care in the least about that. Money is nothing when we have love. Ah, I see now, Mark! You failed in that Indian undertaking, and you do not like to tell me so. Why, my love, I would sooner have one lock of your hair than all the wealth of the world. If any one had left me the largest fortune you could imagine, what would it avail me without you? Ah, Mark, you should know me better."

"I wish to Heaven it was so! I wish I stood before you a penniless beggar. It is not that. I am a rich man now, Nellie, and my riches are as ashes to me."

"Why, Mark?" I asked.

Oh, why did he not love me with the frank, caressing love of love? My heart hungered and thirsted for it.

"I am a coward," he said. "Oh, Nellie, loyal, sweet, true Nellie, can you not guess?"

"I can guess nothing," I replied, piteously. "Tell me what is wrong, Mark."

I began to see that something was terribly amiss, but my faith in him was unshaken.

"Tell me, Mark. No matter what it may be, you can trust me. You know there is no end to my love. If you are in trouble or distress, I shall only love you the more. If you have come back to me, darling, and your sorrows, as are your pleasures, are mine. Perhaps I can help you—the mouse helped the lion once. I have a little money; my money, my love, my life are all yours."

The dark, handsome face grew paler, the firm lips trembled; I saw great drops on the broad forehead, I saw mortal agony in the dark eyes.

"Mark," I cried, piteously, "there is something wrong."

"Yes," he replied, slowly, "there is, as you say, something wrong."

"You will tell me what it is?" I asked.

"I must; but when I do so you will hate me. You will hate me, and send me from your presence, never to see you again."

All the love, the generosity, the passion of my heart was roused. I hate him! Rather could the sun bring darkness!

"I could never hate you, Mark, my dear love, never even dislike you. You do not know me; you have forgotten in all these years how I love you. I gave you my love for ever and for ever; mine was never 'love for a day,' Mark; it was 'for ever.' I love you so well and so truly that nothing can part us. If these hands I kiss now had committed the most grievous crimes, I would kiss them still. You could never kill my love, Mark. I would go with you into exile; I would stand by your side on the scaffold and suffer for you."

"Hush, Nellie!" he said, laying his hand on my lips. "Every word you say is as a sword in my heart."

"But it is true, Mark—it is all true. I could not love you more if I tried."

"I believe it," he said. "My beautiful Nellie! My true Nellie! Oh, how can I ask pardon of Heaven?" He knelt by my side and drew my head upon his breast, and smoothed the ripples of my hair with the old familiar gesture I had loved so well. "Poor Nellie! True, loving Nellie! How can Heaven pardon me?"

I had ceased to weep, ceased to wonder. Mark had come back to me, but there was something wrong. I felt that he was hushing me to rest in his arms for a few minutes before he told me, and I was content. What Mark did was always best.

"Nellie," he said at last, and his voice trembled with emotion—"seeing how well you love me, I could almost wish you were dying now. If the light of the sun could but strike us both dead. Yon tremble, Nellie. Love be still; rest for one moment, I will tell you all then.

She clung the more closely to him.—Should ruin, sorrow, death come, what mattered it while those arms sheltered me? A mother soothing her child in the delirium of fever could not have been more tender than Mark was in that hour to me.

"You will hate me, Nellie, when you hear all; you will send me from you, and I shall never see you again."

Does it look like it, love?" I whispered. "There is little fear of that."

Still he rocked me in his arms, calling—

"Nellie, Nellie, each moment makes it worse, makes it harder! Ah, Nellie, why have you been so true to me?"

"Why?" I replied, with a glad little laugh. "I could not help it; I was true to you naturally. I turned to you, Mark, as the sunflower turns to the sun."

"Oh, my darling, my beautiful love," he said, "you are so much better than I am. You are noble and loyal; I am—oh, Heaven, that I should have to say such words of myself!—I am a coward and a renegade!"

"You musn't say such things of yourself," I cried. "You are Mark Upton; and that, in my eyes, means all that is most noble."

"Hush, Nellie!" There was pain in his face, anguish in his eyes. "Nellie, I must tell you. Oh, my dear, do not look at me with those loving eyes. Would that I had died before this! My arms must not hold you more, Nellie. My dear, lost love, I am married!—Heaven help me, I was married more than a year ago!"

CHAPTER X.

Mark's words cleft the sweet, spring air like a sharp arrow with a poisoned barb; they had pierced the heart that loved him, and I fell upon the grass like one dead. My heart was pierced, my whole soul crushed. There I lay in the first smart of my anguish.

For a few minutes all was darkness and oblivion; and then Mark tried to raise me.

"I have killed you, Nellie," he said, "I have killed you!"

"No," I answered, raising my white, miserable face to his; "it is worse than that. Do not touch me! Leave me!"

"I knew—I knew!" he said. "Oh, Nellie, I could have died to save you this!"

A sudden overwhelming sense of scorn for him, of loathing for myself, a hot, fierce passion of defiance and rebellion seized me. I rose to my feet; new life and new strength came to me, my whole frame vibrated with passion.

"You are what?" I cried. "Say it to me again—let me be sure that I have heard aright. You are what?"

"I am married, Nellie."

"Married! And you have been wicked enough, coward enough to let me say all that I have said! You have been mean enough to let me pour out my heart, to let me lavish my love on you! How could you? Why did you not tell me the truth the first moment you saw me? How dare you take me in your arms and kiss me when you knew all the time that you belonged to some one else?"

"Forgive me, Nellie. I can never forgive myself. I had no time to think," he said, humbly.

"I shall never respect myself again!" I cried. "And I thought that Heaven had sent you in answer to my longing and my prayers. Give me back my words of welcome; give me back my kisses. They were for a true lover, not for you. Give me back my love. Believe me, before Heaven, had I known, had I guessed or thought that you were married, not one such word should have crossed my lips!"

"I know," he said, humbly.

"You are married. Oh, I cannot believe it! You are trying me. You want to see if my love be true; you are testing my faith. You cannot be married; you could not marry any one but me!"

"Alas, Nellie, it is true!" he cried.

"True!" I flung up my arms in despair. Mark had deceived me; Mark was untrue to me; Mark, my lover, my hero, was false.

Could any shame, any degradation equal mine? I had flung my arms round his neck, I had kissed him, I had called him by every loving name that one could give to another, and he was married! His love, his caresses, belonged to some other woman, not to me. The beauty of his dark face, the memory of his love, seemed to creep into my heart again and set it on fire. Mad, passionate jealousy seized me.

"Whom have you married?" I cried. "I shall kill her if I see her! She shall not live who has stolen my love from me!"

"She did not know, Nellie," he said, speaking always in the same low tone. "She knew nothing of you. It was all my fault, dear."

Quickly as it had come, the flame of jealousy died away. The light had gone from the skies, the beauty from the glad green earth; I was alone with my desolation and my sorrow. The greatness of my loss came home to me. Mark was living and well; he was here in my sight; but we were parted for ever. No grave dug by human hands could be so deep as the one that lay between us. He was there, but no longer mine. I must love him and caress him no more. I had mourned for him as absent, I had wept for him as dead; but I had never thought of him as caring for any one else in the wide world—he had been so entirely my own.

"Nellie," he said, in a low voice, "do you know that I feel like a murderer? I have blighted the sweetest life; I have killed the truest love; I have betrayed the most loyal faith ever placed in man. Oh, love, your eyes look like those of a wounded dove; and I may not comfort you any more!"

"No, never again in this world, Mark. No comfort, no consolation, can come from you to me; and I—oh, I loved you so dearly! Since that May morning when we met beside the lilac-trees, my heart has been full of you. It has held nothing else. When I thought you dead, I consecrated my life in loving memory of you. I could have taken my love to the spirit-world pure, unchanged and untouched; while you—you are married. It is enough to make the angels weep! And now I have kissed you and poured out my love to you who are no longer free!"

The next thing I heard was the terrible sound of my own hysterical laughter breaking amid the trees. Such wild horrible laughter it was. I could not help it; I tried in vain to stop it.

"A married man!" I cried, over and over again. "A married man!" And I believed him to be my true lover Mark.

He came to me. He would not heed my passionate cries that he should not touch me. He raised me from the ground; he removed the leaves and grass from my hair; he took my hands and held them in his.

"Nellie," he said, "try to listen to me, dear. You will kill yourself if you give way like this."

Was it of any use to say that I hoped I should, of any use to struggle to free my hands from his clasp? Oh, my bruised, beating, wounded heart, it was not!

"Try, my darling, try, Nellie, for the sake of old times, to listen to me," he pleaded.

"You must not call me 'darling,'" I cried, bitter jealousy flaming in my heart again; "you have another darling now. You have some one else to love and caress and call your own."

And in some vague way I knew by the groan that came from his lips that I was still his darling, and that he did not love this other, let her be who she might. The knowledge seemed to afford me some little consolation. But it was only for one minute. Then common-sense said, "What was the love of a married man to me?"

"Nellie—I will not call you 'darling' again, since it grieves you—will you try to listen to me? For the sake of old times and the old dear love, let me tell you all that has happened. You will judge me mercifully; you were always kind, and I—oh, Nellie, I am not happy! I am the most miserable man in the whole wide world. If I were happy, if I came to you in the insolence of a prosperous love, if my face were bright and my heart light, then, ah, then you would have reason to spurn me, to hate and despise me! But you have a true woman's heart, my lost love; and women are always pitiful, always merciful. Listen, Nellie, before you judge me. Mind, I am not excusing myself—even in my own eyes I am a pitiful fellow. But you will hear and judge."

The wild tumult of passion was dying down; the rapture and ecstasy of happiness, followed by the passion of despair, had exhausted me. I sat down again on the seat; my strength failed me. I leaned my head against the trunk of a tree; the wind brought the odor of the lilacs to me fresh and sweet. I grew calm with the serenity of despair. I would listen to all he had to tell me, and then rise up and go from him.

My thoughts grew confused, everything was dim and indistinct in my sight; and, when I came to the real consciousness of what was passing, Mark was bending over me, holding my hands tightly clasped in his, and speaking in a clear, low voice:

Ayer's Sarsaparilla thoroughly cleanses the blood, stimulates the vital functions, and restores the health and strength. No one whose blood is impure can fell well. There is a weary, languid feeling, and often a sense of discouragement and despondency. Persons having this feeling should take Ayer's Sarsaparilla to purify and vitalize the blood.

—The reason why "Noasuch Washing Compound" should be used in preference to all other washing preparations. First: It is perfectly harmless. Second; It saves more than half the labour. Third: It is the cheapest in the market. Many more could be given but this should be sufficient. For sale by all grocers. 49-52t

A DEATH DEALING DISEASE.

A Lynchburg, Va., despatch says: For a number of weeks past a fatal disease has been prevalent in Buchanan, Wise and Dickinson counties isolated localities in the extreme western limits of Virginia. The number of deaths and the terrific nature of the disease are yet undefined. It is supposed to arise from poisonous water. The drouth, continuing there for months, has nearly dried up all the streams, springs and wells, and it is supposed the water left is impregnated with mineral poisons. A reliable correspondent tells a pitiful story, and says in some cases as many as four corpses have been found in a single house.

Rest and Comfort to the Suffering.

"BROWN'S HOUSEHOLD PANACEA" has no equal for relieving pain, both internal and external. It cures Pain in the Side, Back or Bowels, Sore Throat, Rheumatism, Toothache, Lumbago and any kind of a Pain or Ache. "It will most surely quicken the Blood and Heal, as its acting power is wonderful." "Brown's Household Panacea," being acknowledged as the great Pain Reliever, and of double the strength of any other Elixir or Liniment in the world, should be in every family handy for use when wanted, "as it really is the best remedy in the world for Cramps in the Stomach, and Pains and Aches of all kinds," and is for sale by all Druggists at 25 cents a bottle.

Townsend waited outside till Abbot made his appearance, and then attacked him vigorously, knocking him down and kicking him so brutally that he lies dangerously ill. Townsend was remanded for trial.

Wheeler's Tissue Phosphates.

When it is more commonly known that consumption is not an entity or peculiar form of disease that can be antidoted by a cure-all or specific, but is rather a wasting away or tissue starvation from lack of nerve power, and failure of food supply owing to indigestion and malassimilation, invalids will cease to irritate and over-stimulate the organic functions by strychnine, whisky and opium preparations, which do positive harm and resort only to those sources of energy nature furnishes for the nutrition of the body as combined in WHEELER'S Elixir of Phosphates and Calisaya.

LENNOX ELECTION CASE.

Mr. McCarthy, Q.C., in behalf of the petitioner in the Lennox election case, having withdrawn the personal charges against Mr. Allison, Mr. Justice Armour delivered judgment, declaring the election of both parties void, with costs against each in the respective petitions.

AYER'S Cherry Pectoral.

No other compliments are so insidious in their attack as those affecting the throat and lungs: none so trifled with by the majority of sufferers. The ordinary cough or cold, resulting perhaps from a trifling or unseasonable exposure, is often but the beginning of a fatal sickness. AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL has well proven its efficacy in a forty years' fight with throat and lung diseases, and should be taken in all cases without delay.

A Terrible Cough Cured.

"In 1857 I took a severe cold, which affected my lungs. I had a terrible cough, and passed night after night without sleep. The doctors gave me up. I used AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, which relieved me at once, induced sleep, and effected my cure in time for the recovery of my children. By the continued use of the PECTORAL, a permanent cure was effected. I am now 67 years old, hale and hearty, and still attribute your CHERRY PECTORAL the credit due it."
HORACE FORTESCUE.
Beckingham, Vt., July 21, 1882.

Croup.—A Mother's Tribute.

"While in the country last winter my little boy, three years old, was taken ill with croup; it seemed as if he would die from strangulation. One of the family suggested the use of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, a bottle of which was always kept in the house. This was tried in small and frequent doses, and to our delight in less than half an hour the little patient was breathing easily. The doctor said that CHERRY PECTORAL had saved my darling's life. Can you wonder at our gratitude? Sincerely yours,
MRS. EMMA GEDNEY."
189 West 129th St., New York, May 16, 1882.

"I have used AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL in my family for several years, and do not hesitate to pronounce it the most effectual remedy for coughs and colds we have ever tried. A. J. CRANE."
Lake Crystal, Minn., March 13, 1882.

"I suffered for eight years from Bronchitis, and after trying many remedies with no success, I was cured by the use of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL. JOSEPH WALDEN."
Byhalia, Miss., April 8, 1882.

"I cannot say enough in praise of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, believing as I do that but for its use I should long since have died from lung troubles. E. BRADLEY."
Palestine, Texas, April 22, 1882.

No case of an affection of the throat or lungs exists which cannot be greatly relieved by the use of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, and it will always cure when the disease is not already beyond the control of medicine.

New C. P. R. Time Table.

A new time table for the Ontario Division of the C. P. R. went into effect on Monday morning last, November 24th. The St. Louis express going west, arrives at the O. & Q. station at 5:30 a. m., and reaches Toronto at 8:30 a. m. The Toronto express going west arrives at 6:43 p. m., a difference of half an hour from the former time card, 7:13, and the mixed going west arrives at 7.04 a. m. The express going east leaves Toronto at 8:25 a. m., and arrives in Peterborough at 11:40 a. m. The mixed train going east arrives in Peterborough at 8:07, and the Montreal express which leaves Toronto at 7:55 p. m., reaches Peterborough at 11:11 p. m. The Montreal and St. Louis express trains run daily, including Sundays, all other trains on week days only.

A Hospital Needed.

The case of the poor man Humphries, injured in an accident on the O. & Q., shows the necessity of some sort of hospital accommodations in Peterborough. Bruised, torn, and bleeding, he was brought to town, and there was no place to put him except the dreary, cold baggage station—in a ward furnished with stoves, crockery crates, and packing cases, upholstered with grain and coffee sacks. Pending the search for some place hospitable enough to receive him, the wounded man lay in the baggage room. On being applied to, after many other fruitless applications, Mr. R. N. Roddy, of the Canada Pacific Hotel, took the stranger in and gave him comfortable lodging. Dr. Kincaid, town physician, is in attendance, and under humane conditions and treatment, the injured man is progressing rapidly. It is a pity in a town of this size that the sick or maimed who are friendless and homeless, should have to depend on the charity of private citizens for succour and entertainment. Under such conditions the number of Levites who "pass by on the other side," compared to the good Samaritans who take the unfortunate to "an inn," is lamentably large.

Grand Trunk Change of Time.

On Monday the new time card of the Midland Division of the Grand Trunk Railway took effect. The mail express leaves Toronto at 7:35 a. m., reaching Lindsay at 11:00 a. m., and Peterborough at 11:55. The afternoon express leaves Toronto at 4:35 p. m., reaches Lindsay at 7:55 p. m., and Peterborough at 8:50 p. m. The mixed leaves Toronto at 9:15 a. m., and arrives in Peterborough at 4:00 p. m. The express leaves Port Hope junction at 7 a. m., arrives in Peterborough at 8:20 a. m., Lindsay at 9:15 a. m., and reaches Midland at 1:55 p. m. The mail express going north leaves Peterborough at 5:15 p. m., reaches Lindsay at 6:10 p. m., and arrives at Midland at 10:50 p. m. The express from Port Hope leaves that place at 7 a. m., Peterborough at 8:20 a. m., and arrives in Toronto at 12:25 a. m. The mail leaves Port Hope at 3:45 p. m., Peterborough at 5:15 p. m., and arrives in Toronto at 9:20 p. m. The mixed train leaves Peterborough at 10:25 a. m. and reaches Toronto at 5:05 p. m. On the Lakefield branch the mail express leaves Port Hope at 7 a. m., arriving in Peterborough at 8:20, and leaving Peterborough at 12:30, arrives in Lakefield at 1:20 p. m. The mail express leaves Lakefield at 3:10 p. m. and arrives in Peterborough at 4 p. m. On the Grand Junction branch, the trains leave Peterborough as follows:—Mail express at 7:30 a. m., and the mixed at 1:45 p. m., which arrive in Belleville at 11:30 a. m and 5:15 p. m., respectively. Coming north the mail leaves Belleville at 7 a. m., and the mixed at 4 p. m., arriving in Peterborough at 10:20 p.m. and 7:50 p.m. respectively.

Cheap the Order of the Day.

Fair, Van Every, & Co. having stocked every department of their large premises to the ceiling, with choice, seasonable goods, so as every shelf contains a bargain, and we claim their all-wool Seamless Hosiery will eclipse any placarded at 25 cents.

For Great Bargains

in Photograph Albums, Autograph Albums, Photograph Frames, Work Boxes, Shell Goods, Odour Cases, Violins, Concertinas, Harmonicas, Dolls and Toys of all kinds, go to Bird's Drug Store, Lakefield. Prices low and sure to please. 47-7ins.

Special Sermon

On Sunday evening next Rev. Father Teefy, of Toronto, President of the University College Literary and Scientific Society, will preach the sermon at the vesper service, St. Peter's Cathedral. A collection in aid of the building fund will be made.

A Voice From Lakefield.

A very fine assortment of Xmas Cards and Fancy Goods in great variety suitable for Xmas and New Year presents, to be seen at Bird's Drug Store, which will be sold cheap for cash. Come early and secure bargains. No trouble to show goods. Bound to make prices right. T. J. Bird. 47-7ins.

Electric Lights.

Electric lamps are now in position on George street, corner of McDonnel, Murray, Brock, Charlotte and King, and on the corner of Charlotte and Aylmer streets. The diffusive brilliancy of the rich, violet-hued light furnished, is equal to any on the continent, or in the world for that matter.

A Cruel Cut.

On Monday morning Mr. Geo. A. Morrison, insurance agent, was shaving at his home, Weller street. Unnoticed his little daughter, two years old, came near him and seizing the blade of the razor received a deep cut in the hand that nearly reached the main artery. Dr. King supplied the necessary surgical attention.

Queen vs. Ferguson.

On Tuesday morning John Ferguson, charged with larceny of a watch from Henry Noyes, some months since, was arraigned before his Honour, Judge Dennistoun, at Interim Sessions. The prisoner elected to be tried by a jury, and the trial is set down for Tuesday next. Mr. Weller prosecutes, and Mr. Poussette defends the accused.

Important.

When you visit or leave New York city save Baggage Expressage and Carriage Hire and stop at the Grand Union Hotel, opposite the Grand Central Depot

Elegant rooms fitted up at a cost of one million dollars, reduced to $1.00 and upwards per day. European plan. Elevator. Restaurant supplied with the best. Horse cars, stages and elevated railroad to all depots. Families can live better for less money at the Grand Union Hotel than at any other first-class hotel in the city. 43-1y

Another Intellectual Treat.

The popular preacher and lecturer, Dr. Vincent, of New York, the originator of the Chatsqua Sunday School Parliament, has been engaged by the George-street Methodist Sunday School to preach anniversary sermons next Sunday and lecture on Monday evening, December 1st. His subject this time is, "On the Heights." When here before it will be remembered his subjects were, "That Boy," and "That Boy's Sister." The O. & Q. Railway will issue tickets on Saturday, good to return on Monday, at a fare and a third, and on Monday return tickets at single fare.

A Reward for Zealous Work

As an evidence of how deeply the heart of Mr. H. W. Watson, D.D.H.C.R. of the Canadian Order of Foresters, is engaged in the work, he has offered as a prize an elegant piece of silverware to the member of Court Peterborough who will, during the next six months, bring into Court Peterborough the largest number of new members. The six months are from November to April, inclusive. Intending competitors will, perhaps, be stimulated to greater exertions by recollecting that one energetic member got a handsome start of five at the last meeting of the court.

THE WILLIAMS

IN PETERBOROUGH.

We the undersigned residents of the town of Peterborough, having purchased and used the Pianos from the manufactory of MESSRS. R. S. WILLIAMS & SON, Toronto, desire to add our testimony in appreciation of the merits of these well-known instruments.

For power, and singing quality of tone, elasticity of touch, superior finish and durability, we prefer THE WILLIAMS PIANO to any other. They have given us entire satisfaction, so that we can heartily recommend them to all intending purchasers.

Our dealings with the firm have always been of the most pleasant character, and we have never regretted having made the selection of a Piano in favor of the well-known firm of R. S. WILLIAMS & SON.

Overcoats and Fur Caps.

On the approach of winter, Fair, Van Every & Co., have received a large lot of superior over Coats and Fur Caps, exceedingly cheap. Don't fail to see them.

For Velveteens call at Turnbull's; he claims to have the best made in the market, none excepted; Ladies who have worn these goods, pronounce them to be perfectly fast pile.

"Big Blunders."

People make them every day by not insuring their lives against death, their bodies against accident, their houses against fire, their plate glass against breakages. Wilson & Morrison can do it right. Come in.

A Pushing Contractor.

In order to push on the work of finishing the interior of St. Paul's Presbyterian church, Mr. A. Rutherford, the enterprising contractor, is having the electric light put in so that work can be carried on at night as well as by day.

Ballet Dancing.

Remember the superb corps de ballet with the beautiful Italian solo danseuse Mad. Le Cardo in their graceful pirouettings and brilliant evolutions, on Thursday and Friday evenings, Nov. 27th and 28th, in Bradburn's Opera House. Reserved seats may be secured at Hartley's music store, where a plan of the hall may be seen.

Hand-Car Accident.

On Friday evening about five o'clock a hand-car holding seven workmen of the O. & Q. Railway was coming towards town. One of the number, James Humphries, was sitting on the front of the lory with his feet hanging down. About two miles west of town, while the hand-car was rapidly coming down grade, Humphries' feet caught in an inequality in the track; he was thrown off and dragged for some distance over the ties. He was severely bruised and injured, and his clothing destroyed. He was picked up unconscious and brought to the station in town, where Dr. Kincaid attended and dressed the wounds and bruises, no bones, fortunately being broken. The injured man was employed in cutting wood along the line. He worked as a farm laborer during the summer near Guelph.

The Mock Parliament.

This institution in connection with the Dufferin Literary Society, held its session on Friday night. The address in reply to the Speech from the Throne read at the former sitting, was moved by Mr. Deacon, seconded by Mr. J. Hawkens, in neat speeches. Mr. J. H. Long, as leader of the "Opposition," criticised the policy of the "Government." The debate was adjourned after speeches, on the "Government" behalf, by Messrs. McIlmoyle and Henry, and on the "Opposition" by Messrs. Eastwood and Armstrong. The Premier gave notice of a bill for abolition of the franking system, and the reduction of letter postage to two cents per half ounce, and the minister of justice gave notice of a bill to extend the franchise and for the purpose of punishing bribery.

Visit To Peterborough.

Surgeons from the International Throat and Lung Institute, Toronto, will be at the Caisse House, Peterborough, Friday and Saturday, Dec. 19th and 20th, for the treatment of all diseases of the throat and lungs, the most common of which are Catarrh, Deafness, Asthma, Bronchitis, Weak Lungs and Consumption. The Surgeons are specialists, and devote their whole time to the treatment of the above diseases. Spirometers are used to test the capacity of the Lungs. Respirators and Inhalers to carry antiseptic treatment to diseased parts. They can refer you to reliable people in Peterborough and surrounding country, who have been cured of long-standing diseases. Patients unable to call during the visit can be successfully treated in most instances, by writing for treatise on throat and lung diseases and obtaining list of questions.

Address, 173 Church street, Toronto. Consultation free. 48-2t

The Building By-law.

At the police court on Monday morning, the usual batch of delinquents was supplemented in the role of offenders by a formidable array of our most solid citizens. There were no fewer than ten arraigned charged with breach of the building by-law, in erecting non-canonical buildings within the fire limits. The bill of particulars showed that Dr. Kincaid, Wm. Yelland, Charles Stapleton, R. Z. Rogers, John Halpin, Thos. Bradburn, Geo. Kingdon, Wm. Cluxton, Valentine Best and W. G. Ferguson, president of the Curling and Skating Company, had transgressed the building by-law, in letter if not in spirit. Condign punishment was not in any case inflicted, the cases being adjourned for one or two weeks. Mr. E. B. Edwards prosecuted on behalf of the town, and pointed out that the constables were simply doing their duty.

Chancery Sittings.

The Chancery sittings begin in the Court House to-day (Thursday). The lawyers, like business men, have been complaining of dull times—of an exceptional paucity of victims—but according to the docket for the present chancery sittings they have not been idle. The following is the list:

MCINTYRE vs. MCINTYRE—Hudspeth & Jackson, for plaintiff; for defendant, McIntyre & Stewart.

CROWLEY vs. GALVIN—Poussette & Roger for plaintiff; Mr. Edmison for defendant.

KERR vs KERR—H. B. Weller for plaintiff; Dumble & Henry for defendant.

GILMOUR vs. STRONG—H. B. Weller for plaintiff; Smith & Currie for defendant.

DAWSON vs. RATHBUN—Mr. Burnham for plaintiff; Bell & Bigger for defendant.

CROWLEY vs. CROWLEY—Mr. Burnham for plaintiff; Mr. Hoskin for defendant.

PATERSON vs. ROXBURG—Mr. Burnham for plaintiff; Mr. Edmison for defendant.

MORROW vs. MIDLAND—Hatton & Wood for plaintiff; Bell & Bigger for defendant.

MCMARTIN vs. IRWIN—Mr. Bowers for plaintiff; Mr. H. B. Weller for defendant.

KING re. ALFORD—Mr O'Meara for plaintiff: Mr. Burnham for defendant.

MCMULLEN vs. MCMULLIN—Mr. O'Meara for plaintiff; Mr. Burnham for defendant.

EMILY vs MIDLAND—Dumble & Henry for plaintiff; Bell & Bigger for defendant.

In all twelve issues to be tried, and all local cases, we are informed, except one—McIntyre vs. McIntyre, involving a question of alimony, the parties to which live in Victoria county.

History of Peterborough.

Mr. Gardner is now delivering to subscribers, copies of "The History of Peterborough." The work is a good-sized volume, and its contents appear to be full of interest and information. To this subject we shall refer more fully hereafter. A compendious history of Canada precedes the titular subject of the work.

St. Paul's Presbyterian Church.

The social entertainment announced in our last issue to be held in the new school room annex of St. Paul's, has been postponed to Wednesday, December 17th. The committee, thinking that by an earlier date the building might not be thoroughly dry and comfortable, made the change of date above noted. At that time the building will be completed in most comfortable condition.

Some choice Astrachan Mantles, from one of the best Manufacturers in Canada, to be found at Turnbull's.

Saved Army "Trumpet."

The Trumpet, the official organ of the Saved Army, has been enlarged from four to eight pages, and otherwise improved. This is evidence that the Trumpet is appreciated by the officers and soldiers and the general public, and that the energetic efforts of the managing editor, Mr. Joseph McClelland, have been successful in giving an impetus to the circulation that warranted the enlargement and improvement of the official organ.

Midland Central Poultry Association.

A meeting of this Association was held in the Collector's office on Friday night. There was a fair attendance of members. The board of directors was strengthened by the addition of the names of Messrs. Charles Brown and James Baptie, Springville. After an exchange of ideas as to the proper time for holding the annual exhibition, it was decided to hold the annual show on Tuesday, Wednesday and Thursday, February 3rd, 4th and 5th, 1885. The following committees were appointed to canvass for subscriptions: For Cavan, Springville and Millbrook, Mr. James Baptie; for the town, south of Simcoe street, Messrs. Brown and Mason; for the town, north of Brock street, Messrs. O'Brien and Lush; for the central part of the town, Messrs. the President, Logan and Cobb; for Smith, Mr. T. E. Bell; for Lakefield and Dummer, Mr. Daubuz; for Ashburnham, Messrs. Dormer and Meade. The Secretary was instructed to correspond to secure judges and the meeting adjourned.

Address and Presentation.

On Friday night at the regular meeting of Court Peterborough, Order of Canadian Foresters, the usual routine was followed by a very pleasent event. Bro. H. W. Watson, D. D. C. H. R., addressing Mr. A. McNeil, read the following address.

PETERBOROUGH, Nov. 21, 1884.

Andrew McNeil, Esq.

DEAR SIR AND BROTHER,—The officers and members of Court Peterborough, No. 29, Canadian Order of Foresters, having found your services of such value in assisting them in their work of securing and furnishing their Hall, cannot let this opportunity pass without presenting you with some token of their appreciation of the same. On behalf of this Court we are requested to present you with this water pitcher and drinking cup, as a token of the high esteem in which you are held by the officers and members of this Court.

Signed on behalf of the officers and members.

JOHN FANNING, R. Secretary. H. W. WATSON, D. D. C. H. R.

The pitcher alluded to is a fine tilting vessel of silver, accompanied with a drinking cup. The inscription upon it indicates the services recognized by its presentation:—"Presented to Bro. A. McNeil, Nov. 21st, 1884, by the members of Court Peterborough, No. 29, for his services in assisting them to furnish their new Hall."

Furs.

The high favor with which my furs are regarded by the public is well attested by orders coming in, as to keep me fully busy at them. The repairing of furs has been suspended long ago until after the holidays. I would, in fact, feel more embarrassed were it not for the unusually mild season. The public has found out long ago that to buy of dealers in cheap wholesale made up furs, purposely made up for a sell, won't pay, as the seller, with all his pushing and puffing energies, does not know himself what goods he is offering. The deceiving trade carried on by them of goods under fictitious names, such as Baltic seal, French seal, and many others, as British sable and all sorts of sable, will secure of dupes a better price, but will leave the furs muskrat or rabbit, &c., all the same. Furs, unless bought of a reliable manufacturer, can be more deceiving than jewellry, and hence the reason of so many dabbling in goods, which often do not stand for one season. The advantages are therefore manifold if you have the assurance of the manufacturer, as he will be accountable, but not so with the dealer. Are your furs wanting repairs? Then you know from whom you bought them, and can get the necessary repairs done when brought in the proper season. WM. LECH.

JUDICIAL SALE

OF VALUABLE

FARM PROPERTY.

BARRY vs. ALLEN.

Pursuant to a Judgment of the High Court of Justice, Chancery Division, made in the above action on the 18th day of October, 1884, there will be sold, with the approbation of C. A. Weller, Esquire, Master of the said Court at Peterborough, at his chambers in the Town of Peterborough, on Monday the 12th day of January

1885, at the hour of 2 o'clock p.m.,

The East Half of Lot Number 3, in the Seventh Concession of the Township of Douro, containing one hundred acres more or less.

The soil is well adapted for agricultural purposes. The land contains 6 or 7 acres of good hardwood, near the South West corner of said farm, pumps of hard water convenient to house and stbales, and a never failing spring on the North West side, a log House and a summer kitchen, a barn 55 feet long by 24 feet wide with hayloft and shed attached, and a log stable capable of holding 3 or 4 span of horses.

The farm is well fenced throughout with cedar rails. About 9 acres is seeded down with clover and timothy, and about 13 acres of fall wheat has been sown. The fall ploughing to the extent of some 24 acres has been done. The farm is situated about 7 miles from the Town of Peterborough, is well stoned and stumped and altogether is in good condition.

The property will be sold subject to a reserved bid. The purchaser will pay 10 per cent of the purchase money at the time of sale and the balance in two months without interest.

The other conditions of sale will be the standing conditions of the said Court.

Further information can be obtained gratis from John O'Meara, Vendor's Solicitor Peterborough, W. H. Moore, Esq, Solicitor, Peterboro', E. H. D. Hall, Esq., Solicitor, Peterborough.

Dated this 24th day of November, 1884.

CHEAP!

"What is the matter?" asked a lawyer of his coachman.

"The horses are running away, sir!"

"Can you not pull them up?"

"I am afraid not!"

Then said the lawyer, after judicial delay, run into something cheap:

THE MIDDLE STATE.

"Theodore" Reviews "Laicus."

To the Editor of THE EXAMINER:

SIR,—Having shown in my previous letter that the proof of "Laicus" taken from Machabees to support the figment of a Romish purgatory, is, on the most approved R. C. grounds, no proof at all. I purpose in this to deal with his proofs taken from Scripture.

But before proceeding, I beg the reader's attention to the creed of Pope Pius IV, article 2, by which every good R. C. is bound to guide himself when interpreting Scripture. The last clause of the article reads thus: "Neither will I ever take and interpret them (the Scriptures) otherwise than according to the unanimous consent of the fathers."

According to this, the interpretation of Scripture which has not got the

of the fathers, is of no authority to a R. C., and cannot, therefore, be either offered or received in support of any doctrine.

"Laicus" confusedly refers to four portions of Scripture, takes a word or two out of each as it suits him, jumbles the whole together, and leaves his readers to believe that his proof is as incontrovertible as infallibility itself. We shall examine the passages separately. And first, Matt., 5, 25-26, where a prison is mentioned, and it is stated that those who go in cannot come out till they "pay the utmost farthing."

Romanists infer that the prison is purgatory, and that the debtor may pay the last farthing and come out. But this is not implied, for, if the debtor has nothing to pay, he can never come out.

Now if this passage refers to spiritual matters at all, the debtor is the sinner and the creditor is God. The case then applies to all debtors alike, and the prison is for all, and, as the reason in every case for the debtor going to prison is, that he cannot pay, it follows that those cast into this prison can never get out. Because of their inability to pay the debtors are put in, and the same inability for the only condition of release is to "pay to the utmost farthing." The prison there cannot be purgatory which is not to last forever, and which is not intended for completely broken down debtors who cannot pay, but for those dishonest rascals who are able to pay and won't, till the fire has to fry it out of their reluctant souls.

WILL KEEP THEM IN FOR EVER,

But let us ask the fathers for a verdict. Well, so much the worse for purgatory, they are not agreed. Augustine, one of the most honorable among them, says, "the prison is hell," and Jerome agrees with him, and adds, "that the person who does not before the end of his life pay the last farthing mentioned in the words of the inspired penman, will never be released from prison—because he will always pay the last farthing while he pays the external punishment of his sins." Bede and others follow in the same strain, and Maldonatus, not so far removed from our own time, calls the prison "carcer infernus (hell), from which the debtor who will be punished with the utmost rigour, will never escape, because he will never pay."

There is no hope of getting a unanimous consent here, and we pursue those saints no further. This proof then cannot be received, and for the two reasons given, viz: First, the conditions necessary to establish a purgatory are not in the passage; Second, the fathers refuse their unanimous consent.

Next we take Matt. 12, 32, which speaks of blasphemy against the Holy Ghost, and concludes, "but whosoever speaketh against the Holy Ghost, it shall not be forgiven him, neither in this world, neither in the world to come."

This, it is asserted, implies that some sins will be forgiven in the future world, and purgatory is the place where that forgiveness shall take effect. But this is simply impossible, for purgatory is a place not of forgiveness, but of and paying to the "utmost farthing." Clearly a place of forgiveness in the world to come, if there be such a place, and purgatory cannot be one and the same. If a man bear punishment, and expiate, and pay to the utmost claim against him, then he has earned his release and there is no forgiveness in the case, and, as the passage in question is all about forgiveness, it cannot possibly refer to purgatory where it is all pay.

The expression "neither in this world nor in the world to come," was a common Jewish mode of emphasizing never, and both Mark and Luke understood it so, and recorded it accordingly. But what of the fathers, are they agreed on the subject? Well, Rome claims Matthew, but Mark and Luke are opposed, and unceremoniously exclude purgatory from the passage altogether. Augustine, Jerome and Theophylact, and later, Calmet and Maldonatus, join Mark and Luke, and say that the meaning is, that blasphemy against the Holy Ghost is "unpardonable in its nature, and shall never be forgiven." These fathers and doctors leave no room for purgatory, and Bellarmine himself admits that the passage does not teach the doctrine, so that "Laicus" must part with this proof also.

We come now to I Cor. 3, 12-15. In this passage the church is represented as a house—Christ the foundation, and workmen are engaged in building. Some lay gold, silver and precious stones on the foundation, and some lay on it wood, hay and stubble. There comes a day when every man's work is tested by fire, some getting a reward and some suffering loss. This fire Rome claims is the fire of purgatory. But note, the fire of purgatory is intended to purge souls, and only some souls. This fire is to try works—every man's work. And the one day is to do all the testing, so that the day of trial must be the day of general judgment when purgatory shall have ceased to exist. The whole context demands that the gold, silver and precious stones represent genuine believers in Christ, and that the wood, hay and stubble and the trial simply shows what they are,—brings out their true character—proves the good to be good, and the bad to be bad—but works no reformation on any one, as the fire of purgatory is supposed to do. The fire here is not to purify but to try, to exhibit character and not to reform it. The language is figurative and tells the searching nature of the test which God will apply to men, and shows the impossibility of hypocrites to escape. There is no purgatory here.

Again we appeal to the fathers and ask for a unanimous verdict, and get a direct refusal. Both Bellarmine and Calmet give numerous specimens of the very unbecoming want of harmony among the saints in the case. Bellarmine says, there are five difficulties connected with this passage, and as many batches of fathers supporting their own views and contradicting one another. Some, as Gregory and Augustine, affirm that the trial by fire means the tribulations and trials of this life. Some, as Origen, Ambrose, and Jerome say, that it refers to the last judgment. Another party, as Chrysostom and Theodoret, as warmly assert that the testing fire is hell. And so the contradiction goes on, father against father, one saint tripping up another, and a host of expositors in grand onslaught turning their weapons against one another till the purgatorian fabrication is demolished, and the superstitious notion imposed on the Apostle's words grows so etherial that at last it altogether vanishes.

As regards 1 Peter 3-19, which tells of Christ preaching "to the spirits in prison," I need only wait to say that, those preached to in this case had all died in "mortal" sin, and therefore must have been in hell, and as hell is not purgatory there is no proof here on the side of that fabulous and fiery abode. None of the ancient fathers recognise purgatory here, so that this proof must go into oblivion with the rest.

Thus from beginning to end the proofs of Laicus have forsaken him. Tested by principles which no good Roman Catholic can repudiate they give no support to the existence of a Roman Catholic purgatory. From first to last the teachings of Christ and His Apostles refuse to give the doctrine the slightest recognition,—the essential "unanimous consent of the fathers" is everywhere wanting, so that there is nothing left us, but on the best Roman Catholic grounds to proclaim purgatory in the Christian church, a huge imposture, contrived by ambitious and unscrupulous men, imposed on an ignorant and credulous people, and kept up for sake of the advantage.

Thus for proofs, let us now look at the argument attempted to be founded on the alleged fact that some of the ancients prayed for the dead. The reasoning of "Laicus" amounts to this, "We learn from the Maccabees that some Jews prayed for the dead, therefore, there must be a purgatory." He might as well argue, "We learn from the book of Exodus that the Israelites worshipped a golden calf, therefore there is a heaven for calves." The argument is as good in the one case as in the other, and equally as conclusive.

It is admitted that some of the ancients did pray for the dead, but we don't admit that that fact either proves or implies a Roman Catholic purgatory. Any one acquainted with the history of ancient nations, knows hat it was customary in many of them to make offerings to the departed spirits of the dead. This was too much like idolatry to take a place among the Jews, who were devoted to the worship of one God. But the pagan custom soon accommodated itself to the higher feelings of the Jewish religion, and the offerings were at length made not to the departed spirit, but to God on its behalf.

Once in this form, some of the Jews fell into the snare, but because some were led away by a pagan corruption, and did what was wrong, is it therefore right and Christian to build on that corruption a second and a greater, and thus increase and GREATLY MULTIPLY THE SIN?

We hear nothing of the practice among the Jews till it came in through Grecian influence after the conquest of Alexander. The thing existed, but we don't admit that it had grown to anything like a common custom in the time of Christ.

"Laicus" assumes the extent of the custom, and then asserts that our Saviour did not speak against it. This is gratuitous throughout, and our answer to it is, that the custom was neither so public nor so common as to meet the Saviour in any way calling for a special public condemnation.

The Jews recognized the authority of Scripture and tradition only in matters of religion, and as their Scriptures did not teach them to pray for the dead, those who did must have done so on the authority of tradition, and our Lord did for "teaching for doctrines the commandments of men," and for "transgressing the commandment of God, and making it of none effect by their tradition."

If the practice was so common as "Laicus" assumes, then, all the apostles, Paul included, who were born and educated as Jews, must have believed in it and practised it, and it is strange that we never hear a word of it from their lips. Matthew and John, Paul and Peter, James and Jude, all left a record behind them. They speak of life and death, resurrection and judgment, heaven and hell, of the believer's hope and the believer's rest, of prayer for ourselves and for one another, but not a word about either praying for the dead, or purgatory. If ever the Apostles believed in such things, when they became disciples they must have repented their wickedness and left the superstition behind them. They became Christians indeed. Their Christianity had no room for such absurdities, and it might be well for those who are trying to modernize the

FOSSILS OF TWO THOUSAND YEARS AGO

to follow their example. And passing strange it is that so many thousands of Jews, all supposed to be infected with this superstition, were converted to Christ and had a controlling influence in the formation and working of the Church, and yet for two hundred years the thing is not once mentioned. And more might be added to the wonder if we only think of the thousands won to Christ from all ranks of heathen society, where the custom was common, and yet nothing to show that it had any place among them as Christians. Can "Laicus" explain this strange feature of the early Church? The Jews when converted to Christ gave up the custom, and the heathen when converted gave it up, and the Church for two centuries knew nothing of its baneful influence. The fact is patent—the thing is not of God, it belongs not to Christianity—it has no place in the Kingdom of Christ. And it was not till the Church, weary with suffering and forgetful of her high calling, began to be too concilitory to her pagan surroundings, in order to escape persecution, that the idea found a place in Christian thought at all. Tertullian is but it was after he became infected with the heretical fancies and whims of the Montanists that he does so. Here, then, we have a clean two hundred years of the Church's history during which she knows nothing of either prayers for the dead or purgatory.

THE FIRST TO MENTION IT,

The Limbus of the Jews was left empty when the Messiah came, and no one as yet has thought of getting the old concern fitted up and repaired for the use of Christianity. No, Rome has not yet got her Gregory, but she will, if we can wait. THEODORE.

THE MIDDLE STATE.

"Laicus" Reviews "Theodore"

To The Editor of THE EXAMINER.

Aside from the question of the canonicity or non-canonicity of Machabees, the doctrine of a middle state has a solid foundation, such as to deserve recognition and reception at the hands of any one more concerned for the attainment of truth than for the obstinate maintenance of a favorite opinion, or for the resulting gratification of unenviable notoriety. Passing reference of ten lines, or thereabouts, devoted to a canonical affirmation of Machabees, elicits a rejoinder with a promised "return to the subject." "Some of the things written," however, are believed—so great is the force of affable condescension. Nevertheless, despite this gracious circumstance, the idolatrous Jews for whom sacrifice was offered up, must be pitch forked into hell fire direct, whether or no. Not so precipitate. Through motives of piety and patriotism did Judas and his brethern go forth to encounter an impious enemy. Gorgias and his army were met and routed. A few of the Jews, having appropriated to themselves votive-offerings of the idols, were slain deservedly. Then the Jews believed, as they now believe, in a middle state. What wonder, therefore, that Judas should entertain a hope that some, at least, of the unfortunate deceased, falling by the way through human frailty from their good intentions, might have sincerely repented their sinful act, ere life was wholly extinct. In any event it was simple charity to "give them the benefit of the doubt,"—a privilege not denied by common law to the worst type of criminals. But no, this must not be. For Theodore, the-gift-of-God, the celestial illuminator and infallible expositor, himself amply inspired for the occasion, cuts off at one fell blow,

MODEST COLUMN AND A HALF

EVERY IOTA OR SHADOW OF REPENTANCE,

and plunges, without exception, the erring brethern of the noble Judas into the merciless depths of hell. He who runs may read, honor to whom honor is due, and the like. Both Jew and Catholic allow hope of forgiveness to the mortal sinner, even in articulo mortis, where there is a hearty and sincere repentance. Reason and charity demand as much, but our omniscient witherer will have none of it. He may make the most of it, and haggle away at till doomsday. Continuing, it is an authentic fact, uncontradicted by any respectable authority, that Judas did forward money for the purpose specified; nor will it be an easy task to Theodorize the human mind into the deception that the zealous high-priest of the Jews was so ridiculously stupid as to endeavor to redeem souls, whom, at the moment he must have known (according to our angelic doctor) to have been suffering already in the caverns of Tartarus. Thus, in the twinkling of an eye, would our charming Thaumaturgus, with his sophistical wand, transform the

VENERABLE JEWISH HIGH-PRIEST

into a consummate idiot. Such unmitigated bosh for intelligent people!! In good truth Rome can "take a hint" and "introduce something new." Why not. Kindly permit us, dear reader, to introduce to you the venerable Doctor Theodore, a late arrival from Paradise, etc.; yet will we not venture to add that he will "surprise the world" by the presentation of anything characterized by sense or utility.

Witness, moreover, with what confidence and facility our shining-light formulates rules of conduct and guidance for the poor benighted Roman Catholic. Unless all the fathers are made to give a positive assent to the interpretation of Scriptural text, church and people alike are bereft of rudder, sail and compass. At divers' times and occasions, the shoemaker is admonished to stick to his last, whilst our own Theodore, nothing daunted, would fain legislate for the whole Catholic world. After this manner it is that he from his busy brain, then straightway falls to and demolishes them in true Quixotic style. Verily, a logician, a Daniel come to judgment!

Again, in his "all else is to be condemned, rejected and anathematized," he gets decidedly funny at the supposed expense of hated Rome. Boldly he grasps the bull by the horns, as it were, and is deservedly gored for his presumption. Like his chivalrous patron no difficulty frights him, be the result what it may; the impossible becomes superlatively probable. To his imagination goes Sancho for his facts, in delineating the fanciful Dulcina to his crazy master. And in the person of our champion the famous squire finds a worthy disciple.

Passing on to the

CANONICAL FEATURES OF MACHABEES—

a strong, yet unessential evidence of a middle state—our purgatorial abominator must needs haggle, of course, at what was not specially insisted on. A glance at our former article, where the subject is briefly adverted to, then presently dismissed, will show a previous mention of Carthage and Trent in one and the same breath, and in the immediate vicinity of the disputed territory. Carthage proclaimed at an early day what was afterwards effectually sanctioned. But, joining issue on the canon of Machabees, since Theodore is bubbling over with zeal and anxious to conquer new worlds, it will be fairly demonstrated that the weight of authority is in favor of the canonicalness of the books in course of contest. And first let us hear the testimony of St. Augustine, one of the "Trusty Records of the Past," and who needs no certificate of character from any man, not even from Theodore. Yet

LUTHER SAYS OF HIM,

"after the sacred Scripture there is no doctor in the church who is to be compared to Austin." Now then, Austin remarks that "elsewhere, as in the books of the Machabees, which, although they are not received by the Jews as canonical, are acknowledged as such by the church." And in A. D. 400, he placed them in the canon of Scripture. The Apostolical canons, the Codex Alexandrinus, every approved Catholic bible from the, beginning Tertullian, Cyprian, Hilary, Ambrose, are witnesses to the same effect. Thus the council of Hyppo (393,) third council of Carthage, (397,)—corresponding precisely in character to the National council now sitting at Baltimore, and in every respect regular—thus Pope Innocent I, (402,) Pope Gelasius and council of seventy Bishops at Rome in 494, thus Casiodorus in the sixth century, Council of Trullo (680) St. Isidore in the early part of the seventh century who observes that "although the church of the Jews places these books among the Apocrypha,

THE CHURCH OF CHRIST TEACHES THEM, and honors them as Divine." A like evidence is manifested by the Council of Florence (1439), the like by Pope Eugenius IV., who in his decree for the Armenians, a hundred years anterior to Trent, sets forth the exact canon of the latter Council. The fourteenth article of the Greek Church declares that "Machabees make part of the Holy Scripture," and such was the doctrine of that church from the earliest times. The Nestorians, Eutychians and Jacobites agree with the Greek Church respecting this canon. At an early day the Syrian Church adopted Machabees, while it is also found in the Arabic and Alexandrian versions of Scripture. Even the Hebrews, although they did not count Machabees in the canon, neither did they at any time

DENY THEIR INSPIRATION.

On the contrary, they esteemed them as of great authority. Nor can Jerome or Origen be made to deny the inspiration of Machabees, since they often termed them divine and prophetic—equivalent to inspiration. Replying to Rufinus respecting apparent denial of certain portions of Jewish apocrypha included in the Christian canon, St. Jerome remarks, "it is not what I myself thought, but what they (the Hebrews) are wont to say against us that I explained." Origen observes that, "though the church of the Jews places these books among the apocrypha, the Church of Christ teaches them and honors them as divine." Hence, it is clear that, albeit for the sake of argument, they were wont to concede to the Jews their standard of canonicity, still they held as intrinsically divine and prophetic, books which the Jews utterly rejected; just as Catholics nowadays, to facilitate the decision of a contention, often ignore the canonicalness of Machabees. A book may be divine, prophetic, inspired, although it may not be employed to until declared canonical by competent authority. Meanwhile it may be read for edification, since it is properly endowed with a sacred character. Wherefore it is evident that the Council of Trent, in authoratively and effectually enrolling Machabees in the canon of sacred Scripture, merely voiced, in that regard, the received sense of the Church from the beginning of Christianity.

"ESTABLISH ANY DOCTRINE"

Proposition one is correctly stated by friend "Theodore," but the conclusion predicated of it does not admit of justification. He cannot affirm positively and unequivocally, as he does, that these Jews slain, on account of abstracting the idolatrous votive-offerings, were each and all condemned to eternal torment. Judas had a better knowledge of the facts and circumstances than our "honest man" and hocus-pocus logician. He drew a different conclusion, and it is not unfair to presume that he was as pious and as intelligent as this man "Theodore," "attempting further to PRACTICE ON OUR CREDULITY."

Propositions two and three are incorrectly laid down, hence all his castle-building thereon is a gratuitous presumption. "But, what do the people know about it? and he takes the risk." The "unanimity" which he would force upon Rome, with a "twisted" interpretation calculated to promote his silly notions, is an illegitimate child of his own generation.

Laodicea (held in 364, some thirty years and more anterior to Carthage, and at a time when the tradition in favor of the canonicalness of Machabees was not minutely ascertained,) did not canonize Machabees, hence Rome must acquiesce and do likewise. On a given measure affecting the whole empire the Legislature of Ontario refuses to legally enact; ergo, the Parliament at London is forever precluded from passing upon the same subject. Verily, an Aristotle, a more than Aristotle! The Council of Trent (1545-1563) was protracted through a period of about eighteen years, and the sitting occurred at a time fraught with trouble and danger, so as to render it exceeding inconvenient for many prelates to be in attendance. At the opening of the seventeenth session, however, were present, and on another occasion upwards of 200, which is something more than our "honest man" cared to signify. The identical Bible which "Theodore's" forefathers erstwhile had accepted, namely, the ancient Latin Vulgate edition, was a declared authentic and canonical. Protestants were cordially invited to attend, and compulsion was alike unwise and impracticable. But to his amazing logic. Trent legislated for the entire Catholic world, yet, forsooth, because Protestants may not consider themselves concluded by its proceedings, it is not therefore ecumenical. But the authority of the General Council of Nice was denied by those regarding themselves as good Christians; ergo, the Council of Nice was not ecumenical.

One point further and we have done. Doubtless friend "Theodore" will act on principle, practice what he preaches, and "regulate his faith by the principles of his own creed." A "good, sound" Protestant canon teaches that "we do understand these canonical books of the New Testament, of whose authority was never any doubt in the Church." Now, the second epistle of St. Peter, second and third of St. John, epistle of St. Paul to the Hebrews, the Apocalypse, etc., have been REPEATEDLY DOUBTED OF IN THE CHURCH.

Hence, friend "Theodore" "is bound to throw the thing (his canon) overboard," and "ought either to keep his groundless nonsense to himself, or, as an honest man, confess the deception, give up the superstition of the thing, and cease to be a" reproach to Protestantism. "But let it go." Hardly, behold our crafty "flesh-weak" but "spirit willing," canon masher hoist by his own petard! Let the foregoing suffice until our Quixotic dialectician hurls another crushing thunderbolt 'gainst

"Rome eternal, faithful Rome,
The pilgrim's high attraction;
The martyr's grave, the Church's home,
The spring of Christian action."

MORE PAP.

To the Editor of THE EXAMINER:

DEAR SIR,—The last Review announces that "Mr. Rowland C. Strickland has been appointed by the Department of Indian affairs, to oversee the islands in Stony Lake and the Trent Valley waters."

What need there is at this time of day for an "overseer" of the few barren islands that yet remain unsold in Stony Lake, no one except Mr. Strickland and his political friends can see. And as to the "Trent Valley waters," they assuredly would flow on in the even tenor of their way, until the crack is made, as though Mr. Strickland nor any one else had not been appointed to oversee them.

Without the supervision of any one there is no danger of "these beautiful islands being burned or destroyed." They are composed of good solid granite rock that cannot easily be "burned or destroyed." They will stay there.

But is it right to sell all these islands to private parties to the exclusion of the public?

It is well known in Peterborough and to many in the Province, and outside of it, that the islands in this lake, during the summer months, are much frequented by tourists, sportsmen, invalids and those seeking pleasure.

Many who, tired of town and city life, seek relaxation and health in the cool and bracing breezes to be enjoyed upon them.

Within the last few years the largest and best of these islands have been sold by our paternal "Department of Indian affairs," to private individuals, and they are now as much sealed against the public as any private property can be. This is not just. The people of Peterborough and their families, the toiling mechanics, artizans and shop keepers have a special interest in the preservation of what remains unsold of these islands, and it is to be hoped that in their interests and in the interests of the public generally, you will raise your voice in protest against the further sale of any more of them.

Editorial Notes.

Of the 27 translators of the new version of the Old Testament twelve have died during the progress of the work.

The celebration of Archbishop Lynch's silver jubilee has been postponed till the 11th of December.

The telephone has been introduced in New Zealand, Van Diemen's Land, Borneo and Formosa. In Borneo the natives call it the "hell talker."

The British Chancellor of the Exchequer proposes that a deficit in the revenue this year amounting to $10,000,000 be met by adding a penny in the pound to the income tax.

At the educational convention in Hamilton, on Monday, Hon. G. W. Ross, Minister of Education, said that the new series of school readers would be ready for use after the Christmas holidays.

Mr. W. H. Gibbs, of Oshawa, is in Ottawa pressing his claims to the seat in the Senate vacated by his brother, the late Senator Gibbs. The seat has been vacant for two years, and Mr. Gibbs complains bitterly to his friends of the ungrateful manner in which he has been treated.

The cry throughout the Southern States is that Cleveland's election means that the neglected resources of that vast portion of the republic will be rapidly developed; and law and order take the place of the anarchy instigated by carpet-baggers, which has hitherto prevailed.

The Mail doesn't like the Irish any more than the colored people. Here is a sample of the way it sits on both classes in speaking of the colored people of Jamaica: "They are unquestionably hard citizens, a sun-burnt sort of Tipperary men, prone to rioting, who have given Her Britannic Majesty and her predecessors a heap of trouble."

The Tory sheets try to make themselves and the public believe that protectionist principles are making headway in England. It looks very much like it when Professor Stuart, of Cambridge University, an advanced Liberal and free trader, has been returned for the seat vacant through the lamented death or Prof. Fawcett, Postmaster-General, by 6,000 majority!

It is now said that the Dominion Parliament will be summoned for the despatch of business either on the 15th or 22nd of January, and rumors begin to float about that the Canadian Pacific Railway Company will require more legislation or more help. There is vague talk among politicians that Sir John Macdonald has succeeded in raising $12,000,000 for the Company by a sale of their stock, but we are afraid the news is too good to be true.

When Sir John is ovated at Toronto on the 18th of next month, wouldn't it be an opportune time for him to repeat his barley farm story. Just now our farmers find that they have to be content with from 50 to 60 cents for prime samples, while under the despised Grit rule they raked in from 90 to $1.10 every time. Sir John ought to revamp his old story and see how it will take with his farmer friends, and he might also, says the Dundas Banner, give us his twenty-dollar-on-a-horse racket, which did such good service in deluding the farmers once upon a time.

Our N. P. journals urge that the result of the Presidental election did not turn on the question of protection and that, therefore, the election of Cleveland was not a condemnation of a high protective tariff and a move in the direction of free trade. But the Philadelphia Press, the leading protectionist paper in the United States, kept standing in its columns during the campaign this unmistakable statement:

"The great issue before the people is the tariff. That is the question which is to be answered November 4th. Shall we continue the protective system, or shall we begin and by quick approaches substitute free trade for it?"

ST. ANDREW'S SERMON.

Preached on Sunday Evening, November 30th, by Rev. A. H. Munro, Pastor of the Baptist Church.

Rev. 22, 2. "And the leaves of the tree were for the healing of the nations."

From time immemorial human life has presented two very different aspects. Viewed a one light, man has appeared to be worthy of admiration and justifying hope. In his past history he has given proof of stupendous powers in his penetration of the secrets of nature and his productions in mechanics, literature and art. But there is another and very different aspect in which man has presented himself. One in which he does not excite our admiration of what is great, noble and praiseworthy, but our shame and sorrow, on account of what is mean, wicked and sad. Never before

WAS THIS CONTRAST SO GREAT

as at the present time. No theme is more common and popular than that of the progress of the age in which we live. The description is easy and the eulogy pleasant. But often as it is the topic of the public speaker, no orator has done it justice, tar less exhausted it. During the last hundred years more has been done in discovery, invention, the practical conquest of this earth and its resources, for the benefit of our race, and in the improvement of the conditions of human life, than in a thousand years preceding. Virtually we are from that which was inhabited by the people of the last century. Imagine our exchanging places with them. They would be ignorant of half that belongs to our daily life, and we would find it difficult indeed to endure what constituted theirs. They travelled by slow stages over the land, and in wave-tossed vessels on the sea. We, by the use of steam, outstrip the wind as we travel over the one, and plough our way through the waves in defiance of it, on the other. They climbed the snow-capped mountains with weariness and peril; we go through them with ease on our iron roads. They waited for long months for answers to communications which we can flash in an instant to the most distant parts of the civilized world, in expectation of speedy replies. They sent messengers to those with whom we could converse as easily as if they were standing beside us. Better still,

TO-DAY LIVING IN ANOTHER WORLD

THE BENEFITS OF OUR IMPROVEMENTS

are not the exclusive privileges of a class, but the common heritage of all. The labouring man to-day can enjoy comforts and intellectual advantages, which, formerly, no money could purchase for the wealthiest. Intelligence is spreading, religion prospering, benevolent institutions and enterprises multiplying and morality improving.

All this is true, but it is NOT THE WHOLE TRUTH.

If it were we might think that the millennium was not far off. But there is another picture we must place beside it, and say not only, look at that, but also at this. To-day the most civilized nations in the world have so little confidence in each other's honor and justice, that mutual suspicion, jealousy and fear are causing them to maintain the most costly armaments that have ever existed; and one of those nations is at the present hour waging, in the meanest way conceivable, one of the most unjust and mercenary wars that history has had to record. In no country have virtue and industry a fairer field than in the United States. Yet during the past year 1,500 murders were committed in that land, and in its chief city one in seven of the inhabitants received charitable assistance. There is not in the whole world any large city that does not contain a numerous class and whose only pleasure is vice. And no small town is safe from the incendiary and the burglar.

WHOSE ONLY OCCUPATION IS CRIME,

There is an Eastern story which runs something like this: In a large city there was a deep, dark well full of unmentionable horrors, and called the devil's well. A wise man had told the people that if ever the beams of the sun should penetrate that well, fearful calamity would follow. So the well was always kept covered. But one night the cover was removed and not replaced, and in the morning when the sun shone, the waters of the well rose till they overflowed and filled yard and street, square and park, and overwhelmed them all, and, in a mighty torrent, swept on to the sea, leaving not a vestige of the city, nor ought to tell where it once had been.

Is there not

A DEVIL'S WELL IN EVERY LARGE CITY?

In London, in Paris, in New York? A something into which few care to look, but which may not always hide itself and be kept down? Vast hordes of social pariahs, too wretched to fear any worse fate, too vicious to feel any compunctions, are hidden away in the garrets and cellars of the alleys and slums of all our cities. The wonder of wonders is that they do not come forth, an army of desperadoes, to rob, murder and destroy. To what does society owe the measure of safety and immunity it enjoys? To its police and standing armies, to some extent, no doubt. But in no small measure to the fact that the vicious are too vicious to unite and try their combined strength against the orderly and well-to-do. If it were not for this the one-half of society would have to arm itself to the teeth against the other. At what a price is such protection purchased! The late Mr. Hill, Recorder of Birmingham, estimated the criminals of England, the country whose statistics prove her to be of any in the world, to be 100,000 in number, costing, at the lowest calculation, ten millions sterling per annum, and probably twice that amount.

Society has not been indifferent to its own evils. For thousands of years it has been trying remedies for their cure. It has experimented with laws as severe as those of Draco or as mild as those of Confucius; with governments as tyrannical as those of the Cæsars, or as free as those of modern republics, and all have failed, for the wicked still do wickedly and the heart of man is untouched, unchanged by human laws or human governments, whatever their nature or form. But men still believe that it is by political changes. France has tried it in repeated revolutions—from a monarchy to a republic, then from a republic to an empire, then from an empire to a monarchy, then from one monarchy to another, then from a republic to an empire, and once more from an empire to a republic. And now she is as ill satisfied as ever and is agitating for another change.

The air is full everywhere with the cries of human discontent and pleas for human remedies. The educationist declares that the cure of social ills will be found in popular instruction; the socialist advocates as his panacea, communism; the agnostic, the worship of humanity, whatever that may be; and the Nihilist says that it is universal anarchy.

"THE LEAVES OF THE TREE WERE FOR THE HEALING OF THE NATIONS."

Every intelligent physician, before he prescribes a remedy satisfies himself as to the nature of the malady. What are the wounds of humanity that need healing?

They are the wounds of heart and conscience and life, of manhood and womanhood, of family and home, of business and politics, made by ignorance, selfishness and Godlessness.

The leaves of the tree were for the healing of the nations. If man has no suitable remedy, God has. There is something which when thrown into human life is like the tree Moses cast into the waters of Marah and the bitter became sweet. A something which can do what discovery, invention, science, art, literature or education cannot do, convince men that right is better than wrong, truth than falsehood, reality than illusion, kindness than selfishness, goodness than evil, God than the devil. Teaching them to and walk humbly with God. To deny all ungodliness and worldly lusts and to live righteously, soberly and Godly in this present life. The Gospel of Christ, and it alone, can do this. How does it do it?

(1.) By the ideas it gives to man himself, imparting to him conceptions of what he is and may be, that are inspiring and restrictive, and full of stimulus and hope.

It tells him not that he has been evolved from the brute, but that he is a son of God, a being of so much importance as to be continually subject to the records of omniscience and so precious to divine fatherhood as to be for his redemption, possessed of powers whose future attainments and achievements will be so great as to make his present ones seem as childish things in comparison and whose present life has all the grandeur and solemnity of a preparation for a spiritual and eternal harvest beyond the grave, where verily men shall reap as they have sown.

Christianity does not ask men to come and make their bargains with heaven; to do so much and gain so much, to suffer so much and to be forgiven so much. It does not ask them to sink their manhood, but to rise into a higher, nobler, more blessed manhood through faith and hope in Christ. It invites them to come to him and accept him as their Saviour, Teacher and Lord. To receive life from Him, the life of those who are new creatures in Christ Jesus, the life of those who know that they are divinely forgiven and saved and that they are sure of heaven. The life of those who know Christ, believe in Him, love and wish to be like Him. This life it gives them and bids them live it out before God and among men.

(3.) By the

BAN IT PLACES UPON ALL THAT IS EVIL

and the sanction it gives to all that is good.

It has sometimes been the case that religious people have seemed to think that piety was great and valuable according to the number of things it prohibited. Now, as I read the New Testament, it appears to me that only one thing is prohibited there, and that is sin. No affection of the heart, no innocent use of any power God has given to man, no pleasure that does not injure, no instrumentality that is not evil, is forbidden there. It gives not only the sanction of its silence, but that of its precept and example to the love of family, home, friends and race and country. Surely there is when the Son of God wept over Jerusalem, and told his apostles to there begin their world wide mission. And when Paul said he could almost wish himself accursed for his countrymen's sake, for his kinsmen according to the flesh.

SUCH A THING AS CHRISTIAN PATRIOTISM,

Widely and deeply may such patriotism dwell in the hearts of all Scotchmen. How can they do otherwise than love Scotland and be proud to be called her sons? Let her be dear to them not only because of her unrivalled scenery of mountain and lake, of isle and waterfall, of forest and glade; not only because, though originally poor, industry and thrift have made her, in proportion to her population, the wealthiest country in the world; not only because she was the first to set the nations the

and to demonstrate its benefits. Not only because in science, art, literature, commerce and government, she has a list of famous names of which any nation might be proud. Not only because her history is a long and triumphant conflict for freedom of life and conscience, but, besides all these and more than all these, because in her past and present she shows more than any other country what Christianity can do to inspire, fortify and exalt a nation. Well may Scotchmen say of their native land or of that of their forefathers: "With all thy faults I love thee still."

It is well that Scotchmen throughout the world should have organizations to foster memories so honorable and a patriotism so healthful. It is well that do not lessen the recognition of human brotherhood in any case, but deepen and make it more fruitful in special instances and relations. A society which will give its welcome to the stranger, its sympathy to the afflicted, its help to the needy; and which surely ought, because of the very name it bears,

TO HAVE SOCIETIES LIKE YOUR OWN,

AND THE ASSOCIATIONS IT CHERISHES, be a power for good and not evil in the land of our adoption, ever throwing its influence and weight on the side of right and justice of truth and godliness.

Arrived this week, a new lot of Men's Underclothing worth a dollar, sale price seventy-five cents, at Turnbull's.

Potash.

Iodide of Potassium is one of the strongest of the minerals used in medicine, and has produced much suffering in the world. Taken for a long time and in large doses, it dries up the gastric juices, impairs digestion, the stomach refuses food, and the patient declines in health and weight. Persons with Blood or Skin Diseases should be careful how they take these mineral poisons, as in most instances the effect of them is to almost permanently impair the constitution. To take the place of these poisons we offer you a safe, sure, prompt and permanent relief from your troubles. Shaker Blood Syrup is entirely a vegetable preparation, and it is easy to convince you of its merit.

I have cured permanently Blood Taint in the third generation by the use of Shaker Blood Syrup, after I had most signally failed with Mercury and Potash. Dr. Smith, Bangor, Pa.

A young man requests me to thank you for his cure of Blood Poison by the use of your specific after all other treatment had failed.
J. E. Kennody, Druggist, Cobourg, Ont.

For years I was afflicted with Dry Tettor of the most obstinate type. Was treated by many of the best physicians; took quantities of mercury, potash, and arsenic, which, instead of curing the Tetter, crippled me up with mineral poison and rheumatism. The tetter continued to grow worse, and the itching almost made me crazy. In this condition I was induced to take Shaker Blood Syrup, and the result was as astonishing as it was gratifying. In a few months the Tetter was entirely well, the Mercurial Poisoning all out of my system, and I was a well man—and due only to Shaker Blood Syrup. All like sufferers should take it.
C. H. Sargent, Haverhill, Mass.

COST OF NAVIES.

The expenditures upon the navies of the world since 1863 have been as follows: England, $305,000,000; France, $630,000,000; Russia, $345,000,000; Italy, $142,000,000; Germany, $144,000,000; United States, $251,000,000. For the construction of new ships, England has expended $91,000,000; France, $121,000,000; Russia, $38,000,000; Italy, $38,000,000; Sweden, $14,000,000; Germany, $36,000,000; and the United States $4,007,454.

A Black List

of diseases follows an unhealthy condition of the liver, one of the most important organs of the body. Impure blood, bronchitis, asthma, malarial diseases, consumption, sick headache, diseases of the skin, kidneys and heart, all may be traced to faulty action or torpidity of the liver. No other known preparation so rapidly and thoroughly restores a disordered liver as Dr. Pierce's "Golden Medical Discovery." It is pleasant to the taste, mild but sure in its action, and a gift to suffering humanity from one of the most successful physicians of the age.

A ROYAL VISITOR.

Prince Albert Victor, the eldest son of the Prince of Wales and the future King of England, is to make a tour of the United States and Canada next year. He will be 21 years of age on the 8th of January next, and his birthday will be celebrated with imposing ceremonies at his father's palace at Sandringham. Soon after this celebration the young prince will start for the continent, and will sail for America some time next spring.

HOLD THE FORT!

Rev. Mr. Pickett, pastor of the Methodist Episcopal Church at Henrietta, and a small faction of his congregation, and the Rev. Mr. Fellows and his crowd, had a fight for the possession of the pulpit on Wednesday. The Pickett people barricaded the doors with benches, and put out of the window two of their opponents who had concealed themselves in the building.

C. A. Livingstone, Plattaville, Ont., says: "I have much pleasure in recommending Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil, from having used it myself, and having sold it for some time. In my own case I will say for it that it is the best preparation I have ever tried for rheumatism."

What It Will Do.

Polson's NERVILINE, the great pain cure, never fails to give prompt relief in the following complaints:—Sprains, bruises, cuts, tic douloureux, rheumatism, spinal pains, neuralgia, toothache, lumbago, sciatica. Buy to-day at any drug store a 10 cent sample bottle and test it in any of the above complaints. It never fails, for Nerviline is composed of the most powerful pain subduing remedies in the world. Get a bottle at any drug store. You will be made happy. Ten and 25 cents a bottle.

AN IMPORTANT MISSION.

It is understood that the Imperial and Canadian Governments have both authorized Sir Charles Tupper to visit Madrid at an early date and to seek the closing of the treaty which Sir Alexander Galt failed to complete. The treaty provided for increased trade relations between Canada and the Spanish West Indies. All concessions made by the British West Indies to the United States will only be sanctioned by the Imperial Government if extended to Canada as well.

Do Not be Discouraged

even if you have tried many remedies for your Kidney disease or Liver complaint without success it is no reason why you should think your disorder incurable. The most intractable cases readily yield to the potent virtues of Kidney-Wort. It is a purely vegetable compound which acts on the Kidneys, Liver and Bowels at the same time and thus cleanses the whole system. Don't wait, but get a package to-day and cure yourself.

KILLED BY A METEOR.

Julius Robb, a farmer, was instantly killed on Wednesday by a meteor which descended through a tree, cutting a limb clean off. It then passed through Robb's body from the shoulder obliquely and buried itself in the earth. It was dug up and found to be an iron pyrite of the size of a tea cup. There is great alarm among the people of the country since the occurrence.

Rest and Comfort to the Suffering.

"BROWN'S HOUSEHOLD PANACEA" has no equal for relieving pain, both internal and external. It cures Pain in the Side, Back or Bowels, Sore Throat, Rheumatism, Toothache, Lumbago and any kind of a Pain or Ache. "It will most surely quicken the Blood and Heal, as its acting power is wonderful." "Brown's Household Panacea," being acknowledged as the great Pain Reliever, and of double the strength of any other Elixir or Liniment in the world, should be in every family handy for use when wanted. "as it really is the best remedy in the world for Cramps in the Stomach, and Pains and Aches of all kinds," and is for sale by all Druggists at 25 cents a bottle.

FINE FARM

FOR SALE.

That beautifully located Farm.

The West half of lot 26, in the 12th Concession of Otonabee.

Situated east of the old Cobourg Railway. The property comprises 86 acres more or less. The soil is excellent and well adapted to gardening purposes. Its situation is very desirable, it being only one mile from the market square, and commanding a fine view of the town of Peterborough. Since the property came into possession of its present proprietor, over $3,000 has been spent on its improvement. It is one of the best watered farms in Ontario, being supplied by a never-failing spring well, so situated as to provide ten feet head. From this are laid nearly 700 feet of iron piping. At a distance of 240 feet from the spring this pipe leads to a watering trough in the barn. A continuation of the pipe carries the overflow from this, 440 feet further to another watering trough into another field. From the latter the overflow passes into a tile drain on the road side, and thence away. This pipe is provided with two taps, by which the water supply to the stock may be regulated. This water supply makes the farm eminently fitted for grazing purposes; stock can be supplied with continual access to an unlimited supply of pure living water. Or for market gardening the facilities for irrigation would admit of setting dry seasons at defiance, this together with the proximity to a first class market (only one mile) makes this farm unequaled for this purpose.

For either a gentleman of leisure who wishes to devote his retirement to agricultural pursuits, or for a pushing man who desires to make money, this farm for fertility of soil, water supply, beauty of situation and convenience to town, can have no superior.

TERMS: One thousand dollars to be paid down when deeds are handed over, the balance may remain on the property at 6 per cent interest for any term agreed upon.

IN CLUB WITH

Godey's Lady's Book

Will be sent for one year to any address on receipt of $2.50 which should be sent to the publisher of the EXAMINER.

GODEY'S LADY'S BOOK is the oldest family magazine in America, and is conceded by the press and public to be the leading Fashion Magazine, especially so, as its circulation probably covers the largest area of any American publication, its patrons being found in every civilized country under the sun. 1885 will mark the fifty-fifth year of this Magazine, and it is proposed that it shall not only exceed in excellence in every department anything in its previous history, but surpass in attractiveness, quality and quantity any other Magazine published for the same price. The Magazine during 1885 will contain:—

1000 pages of reading, consisting of Stories Novels, Romances, Sketches, Poetry, History, Biographies, by the best magazine writers; also, Art and Current Notes, Charades, Dialogues, Lessons on Dressmaking and Cooking.

300 Practical Recipes; besides descriptions of Fashions, domestic and foreign.

150 pages illustrating Fashions in colors, and black and white.

50 pages illustrating Fancy-Work in colors and black and white.

24 pages of Select Music.

18 Beautiful Engravings.

12 Illustrations of Architectural Designs; besides illustrations of Household Interiors and Stories.

Each subscriber will be allowed to make a selection each month of a "Full Size Cut Paper Pattern" or any design illustrated in the Magazine, without extra cost; these patterns are worth more than the price of the Magazine. We will also present to every subscriber a Steel Engraving (for framing) of Perault's celebrated picture "Sleeping Love," prepared expressly for this Magazine.

As GODEY'S LADY'S BOOK has faithfully observed its promises with the public for fifty-four years, there need be no doubt about the above offer being fulfilled to the letter. Subscription price $2.00 a year. Sample copies, 15 cents.

THE REASON WHY!

OUR

Shoe Store is Always Crowded

With Customers is very apparent to those that have visited it and seen our Immense Stock and compared our prices with those asked elsewhere for the same goods. Never have we had such Bargains in Boots and Shoes as now. Never have we sold as many goods as now, and the more goods we sell the

GREATER BARGAINS

we have, as we are able to buy in larger quantities and at corresponding low prices. We retail as many Boots and Shoes as most jobbers sell at wholesale, consequently manufacturers make no difference in price to us than the wholesale trade, while smaller dealers are obliged to pay which is about the same as our regular retail price for the same quality of goods. It must be very evident then to any thinking person that there must be a good reason for our immense Shoe Business, and that our low prices, complete stock, and attention shown to our customers can be the only attraction powerful enough to draw such crowds to our store, and place us, with but two years' growth, as one of the largest retail Shoe Houses in Eastern Ontario.

JOBBERS' PRICES,

REMEMBER OUR SYSTEM OF BUSINESS IS SQUARE WITH ALL

Goods marked in Plain Figures and No Second or Third Prices Made.

A FEW HINTS

FOR THE USE OF

AYER'S PILLS

DOSE.—To move the bowels gently, 2 to 4 Pills; thoroughly, 4 to 6 Pills. Experience will decide the proper dose in each case.

For Constipation, or Costiveness, no remedy is so effective as AYER'S PILLS. They insure regular daily action, and restore the bowels to a healthy condition.

For Indigestion, or Dyspepsia, AYER'S PILLS are invaluable, and a sure cure.

Heart-burn, Loss of Appetite, Foul Stomach, Flatulency, Dizziness, Headache, Numbness, Nausea, are all relieved and cured by AYER'S PILLS.

In Liver Complaint, Bilious Disorders, and Jaundice, AYER'S PILLS should be given in doses large enough to excite the liver and bowels, and remove constipation. As a cleansing medicine in the Spring, these PILLS are unequalled.

Worms, caused by a morbid condition of the bowels, are expelled by these PILLS.

Eruptions, Skin Diseases, and Piles, the result of Indigestion or Constipation, are cured by the use of AYER'S PILLS.

For Colds, take AYER'S PILLS to open the pores, remove inflammatory secretions, and allay the fever.

For Diarrhœa and Dysentery, caused by sudden colds, indigestible food, etc., AYER'S PILLS are the true remedy.

Rheumatism, Gout, Neuralgia, and Sciatica, often result from digestive derangement, or colds, and disappear on removing the cause by the use of AYER'S PILLS.

Tumors, Dropsy, Kidney Complaints, and other disorders caused by debility or obstruction, are cured by AYER'S PILLS.

Suppression, and Painful Menstruation, have a safe and ready remedy in

AYER'S PILLS.

CHANCERY SITTINGS.

Chancellor Boyd Presiding.

The fall sittings of the chancery division of the High Court of Justice for Peterborough, opened on Thursday last. The bar was well represented, there being present Messrs. McIntyre and Stewart, Lindsay; G. T. Blackstock, Toronto; H. B. Weller, Millbrook; W. H. Biggar, Belleville; Charles Moss, Q.C., Toronto; A. Hudspeth, Q.C., Lindsay; W. Cassels, Q.C., Toronto; Smith & Currey, Port Hope. The local bar was represented by Messrs. D. W. Dumble, James Henry, A. P. Poussette, G. M. Roger, Geo. Edmison, J. Green, R. E. Wood, Geo. W. Hatton, J. Burnham, J. O'Meara, C. W. Sawers and E. B. Edwards.

There were twelve cases, the first called of which was McINTYRE vs. McINTYRE.—An action brought by the wife to recover alimony from the husband. The parties are residents of Lindsay. Case settled out of court, the wife to have $100 per year for self and child. Messrs. Hudspeth & Moss, Q.Cs., for plaintiff; McIntyre & Stewart for defendant.

CROWLEY vs. GALVIN.—An action of ejectment, brought by Mary Crowley against Catharine Galvin, her tenant, to secure possession of lot 20, in the 13th concession of Otonabee, on the grounds of breach of conditions of covenant. Verdict for defendant. Messrs. Poussette & Roger for plaintiff; Mr. Edmison for defendant.

McMARTIN vs. IRWIN.—An action brought by D. McMartin to recover from J. M. Irwin $500 for sawing railroad ties. Referred to County Judge. Messrs. C. W. Sawers and G. T. Blackstock for plaintiff; Mr. Weller (H.B.) for defendant.

KERR vs. KERR.—An action arising out of the administration of an estate—of the late James Kerr—brought to set aside award of arbitrators. Judgment reserved. Messrs. Dumble & Henry and Mr. Moss, Q.C., for plaintiff; Messrs. W. Cassels and H. B. Weller for defendant.

PATERSON vs. ROXBURG et al—An action to set aside a contract for the timber on a swamp, made by Rachel Paterson with defendants. The judge decided that the contract was valid but that the defendants should confine their cutting operations to the swamp lands. Mr. Burnham and Mr. Moss for plaintiff; Mr. Edmison for defendants.

MORROW vs. MIDLAND.—Action brought for trespass, by R. A. Morrow against the Midland R. R. Co., on a lot corner McDonnel and Park streets. Judgment for plaintiff, and defendants ordered to arbitrate for damage done. Messrs. Hatton & Wood for plaintiff; Messrs. Bell & Bigger for defendants.

KING re. ALFORD.—Action brought against J. W. Alford and James McNamara, contractors, and the O. & Q. Railway, to set up a mechanics lein for work done on the round house at Havelock. The judge did not grant the lein, but it was agreed that ten per cent. of the contract figures should be paid into court. Mr. O'Meara and Mr. W. Cassels for plaintiff; Messrs. J. Burnham, C. Moss and G. T. Blackstock for defendants.

McMULLIN vs. McMULLIN.—An action brought by plaintiff to recover from her sons for breach of agreement for maintenance. Judgment recorded ordering defendants to pay plaintiff $25 per year for her natural life. Messrs. O'Meara and Blackstock for plaintiff; Mr. Edwards for defendants.

DAWSON vs. RATHBUN.—An action for breach of contract brought against Rathbun & Co., Deseronto, in respect of sawing a drive of logs. Referred to the Master in Chancery to decide the amount of damage sustained. Mr. Burnham and Mr. Moss for plaintiff; Messrs. Cassels and W. H. Biggar for defendants.

EMILY vs. MIDLAND.—An action brought by the township of Emily against the Midland R. R. Co. to compel the latter to construct certain crossings. While suit was pending the Company were removing the grievances, and asked time to complete the works. Further judgment reserved. Mr. Dumble and Mr. Cassels for plaintiffs; Mr. Biggar for defendants.

CROWLEY vs. CROWLEY.—An action to decide the validity of a deed to certain lands in Douro. The judge decided that Timothy Crowley was owner of the land and that Mary Crowley had no rights of dower therein. Mr. Burnham for plaintiff; Mr. Hall for defendants.

GILMOUR vs. STRONG was enlarged till the next sitting.

Loss and Gain.

CHAPTER I.

"I was taken sick a year ago
With bilious fever."

"My doctor pronounced me cured, but I got sick again, with terrible pains in my back and sides, and I got so bad I

Could not move!

I shrunk!

From 228 lbs. to 120! I had been doctoring for my liver, but it did me no good. I did not expect to live more than three months. I began to use Hop Bitters. Directly my appetite returned, my pains left me, my entire system seemed renewed as if by magic, and after using several bottles, I am not only as sound as a sovereign, but weigh more than I did before. To Hop Bitters I owe my life."

R. FITZPATRICK.

Dublin, June 6, '81.

CHAPTER II.

"Malden, Mass., Feb. 1, 1880. Gentlemen—I suffered with attacks of sick headache."

Neuralgia, female trouble, for years in the most terrible and excruciating manner.

No medicine or doctor could give me relief or cure, until I used Hop Bitters.

"The first bottle

Nearly cured me;"

The second made me as well and strong as when a child.

"And I have been so to this day."

My husband was an invalid for twenty years with a serious

"Kidney, liver and urinary complaint,

"Pronounced by Boston's best physicians—

"Incurable!"

Seven bottles of your Bitters cured him and I know of the "Lives of eight persons"

In my neighborhood that have been saved by your bitters,

And many more are using them with great benefit.

"They almost

Do miracles?" —Mrs. E. D. Slack.

HOW TO GET SICK.—Expose yourself day and night; eat too much without exercise; work too hard without rest; doctor all the time; take all the vile nostrums advertised, and then you will want to know how to get well, which is answered in three words—Take Hop Bitters!

☞ None genuine without a bunch of green Hops on the white label. Shun all the vile, poisonous stuff with "Hop" or "Hops" in their name. 16-4t

Catarrh A New Treatment.

Perhaps the most extraordinary success that has been achieved in modern medicine has been attained by the Dixon treatment for Catarrh. Out of 2,000 patients treated during the past six months, fully ninety per cent. have been cured of this stubborn malady. This is none the less startling when it is remembered that not five per cent. of patients presenting themselves to the regular practitioner are benefitted, while the patent medicines and other advertised cures never record a cure at all. Starting with the claim now generally believed by the most scientific men that the disease is due to the presence of living parasites in the tissue, Mr. Dixon at once adapted his cure to their extermination—this accomplished, he claims the Catarrh is practically cured, and the permanency is unquestioned, as cures effected by him four years ago are cures still. No one else has ever attempted to cure Catarrh in this manner, and no other treatment has ever cured Catarrh. The application of the remedy is simple, and can be done at home, and the present season of the year is the most favourable for a speedy and permanent cure, the majority of cases being cured at one treatment. Sufferers should correspond with Messrs. A. H. DIXON & SON, 305 King street west, Toronto, Canada, and enclose stamp for their treatise on Catarrh.—Montreal Star, Nov. 17, 1882. 48-52t

"Sleeping Love."

A fine steel engraving of Perault's charming picture, "Sleeping Love," has been offered by the publishers of Godey's Lady's Book to every new subscriber to the magazine for the year 1885. The plate is a very artistic one, beautifully printed on thick paper of a size suitable for handsome framing. The subject, a little dimpled Love, adorned with nothing but his baby charms, is lying on a soft grassy couch, fast asleep among the wild flowers, his round, white limbs approaching the cool umbrage of a pond of water lillies. One little chubby hand rests lightly on his unstrung bow, which is lying under him, while the other hand is softly pressed upon his cheek, the plump fingers threading the wavy masses of his floating hair. Under the right arm and shoulder one little downy wing is snugly tucked away, while the other peeps up from the back with a pretty suggestiveness. Overhead are drooping, shadowy boughs covered with rich foliage, and the background reveals a deep perspective of cool forest shade. The picture is one of striking simplicity, yet admirable composition, and the figure of the "Sleeping Love" himself, with drooping eyelids and softly parted lips that offset the rounded beauty of babyhood, is one of the prettiest you could well conceive of. Messrs. J. H. Haulenbeek & Co., proprietors of Godey's Lady's Book, have produced this charming picture most successfully. It is much admired by some of the most fastidious connoisseurs.

Since the fall in price of Millinery at Turnbull's, many have availed themselves of the opportunity to secure a bargain. A fresh lot of those Job Goods trimmed up this week.

GENERAL GORDON'S POSITION AND CONDITION.

The news from Egypt is re-assuring. The heroic defender of Khartoum, Gen. Gordon, is well supplied with ammunition and provisions, and has, besides, a very considerable force, consisting of Turks, blacks, and Arabs. What has become of his Egyptians is not stated; there must be a good deal of bravery amongst the Turks and blacks, or the beleaguered garrison could scarcely have held out so long. The news that a British expedition was en route to their relief was received by the population with great rejoicings, testified by a general illumination. The knowledge that aid is near will do much to make the struggle of the garrison against their besiegers all the more likely to be successful.

PETERBOROUGH, DEC. 4, 1884.

The George Brown Statue.

Four years ago the bullet of the assassin cut short the career of one of the most prominent, as well as most useful public men that Canada has ever produced, and the statue unveiled a few days ago in Toronto, is a partial tribute to the honesty of character, great intellect and sterling political, as well as personal integrity, of Hon. George Brown. Through his journal, the Globe, which he established, as well as through his personal effort, he has done more to ameliorate political conditions, to promote material prosperity, and arouse the spirit of true Liberalism, than, perhaps, any other Canadian living or dead. His convictions were strong, and he had the courage of his convictions. He was patriot enough to uphold and advocate a principle which he believed to be right, and for the benefit of his country, when it was unpopular; and in spite of many discouragements and delays, worked faithfully and untiringly till success crowned his efforts. He set out and travelled in a given path because it was right to do so, regardless whether it led to office or to the opprobrium of mistaken men. That his career has made him hosts of friends, and that his life work for Canada is appreciated, the noble bronze statue in Queen's Park, Toronto, is an evidence. Yet the political liberties we possess, the breadth of personal religious and social freedom we enjoy, the grand Confederation we live under, combine to constitute a monument to his memory more enduring than brass.

See that you are warmly clothed for winter, and avail yourselves of the benefit of Andrew McNeil's 20 per cent discount sale of Underclothing.

Municipal Reform.

Peculiarly excellent as is the municipal system of Ontario, it is still susceptible of many reforms. Toronto is agitating the question exhaustively, and general attention is being called to defects that mark the operation of the system. One in particular may be specified, and its remedy pointed out. Under the present mode of electing councillors, there is the widest room for evils that are of not the least important magnitude. Sectionalism is engendered in its most mischievous form. "Log-rolling" legislation marks the history of urban municipalities, conspicuously. As the electing is done now, councillors, as representatives of a ward, are expected to do their best for that ward irrespective of the wants of the other parts of the town. Then a council is liable to be divided into as many cliques as there are wards. One councillor in ward has a "job" that he wants put through; other councillors may be in a similar position. Thus a combination is easily possible, and an expenditure is authorized, which on its merits, and unassisted by "log-rolling," would never have been made. The councillor thus favored must return the compliment, and thus expenditure after expenditure is made that has only a sectional or ward importance to recommend it, and which the finances and general interests of the town do not warrant. Recent meetings of our council have not failed in supplying examples of this most pernicious result of the present system of electing councillors by wards. The remedy seems to be available by a simple change. Let each councillor be elected as the mayor now is, by the vote of the electors of the whole municipality. In that event he would not consider himself the representative of any ward, and need not fear being called to account by his ward, and shelved, because he refused to work for its interests without considering the general good. Hundreds of little "jobs," in the way of street improvements, etc., in any one section of the town in advance or out of proportion to the general expenditure in this department, would be baulked and made practically impossible. A municipal representative thus being a representative of the whole town, would be undeterred by threats of electoral displeasure, unless he extend special favors to one part of the town, (always at the expense of some other part) and would have less temptation to save his bacon by combing with his fellow representatives in some ward grab scheme. Besides, he will in representative dignity, be more a par with the first magistrate of the corporation, and an added sense of dignity will tend to render "infra dig.," "jobs," which, as a ward politician, he would have less hesitation in working up. Any great undertaking, such as drainage, which might be an incalculable boon to the town generally, but less benificial to some particular ward, would receive more dispassionate consideration, and not be as liable to a fatal opposition being formed through the medium of ward "log rolling." Every session the legislation makes some amendment to the municipal act, and we know that to hundreds in this town, the change hinted at above, would be hailed as a great stride in municipal reform.

The Trent Valley Canal Bungle.

Justice, under ordinary human conditions is rare enough a commodity, but justice at the hands of the Dominion Government to Peterborough and the Midland District seems to be an impossibility. The Trent Valley Canal scheme, instead of receiving the attention its importance and necessity demand, is being used solely as a political expedient. The utmost of the attention paid to it has been in the way of utilizing it as a political machine. If its actual construction had been as ...igently prosecuted as its political resources have been developed, it would at this moment be open and in operation from end to end. First we have the delay in beginning the work; next we have the miserable patch-work-way of going at the work—instead of beginning at the beginning—at one end or the other—a patch here and there is begun, and even this is carried on in such a way as to defeat the intent of the work, and has the effect of obstructing rather than promoting the building of the canal. Instead of a careful departmental supervision, we have blunders fatal to the speedy prosecution of the work, resulting from the employment of incompetent or careless engineers. A case in point occurs on the contract of Mr. Geo. W. Goodwin, the contractor for the 2¼ miles canal at Burleigh Rapids, with three lift locks and dams. No doubt Mr. Goodwin entered into the contract in good faith and expected that the conditions he had to meet in the prosecution of the work would correspond with the specifications prepared by the Government engineers. But what is the result? In the specifications for the slide at Lovesick Rapids it is laid down that there were only seven feet of water to dam back, whereas it was found in the course of work that the depth of water was twenty-seven feet!—a grave difference on a contract taken at close figures. In consequence, there is a dispute between the contractor and the Government, and we understand the former has thrown up the contract—at any rate the men are discharged and the work is at a standstill, Thus we have more of the delay that has marked the Government's criminally indifferent attitude toward this great work so vitally important to the interests, and essential to the development of the commerce and resources of the Midland District. The Government may seek to lay the blame on the engineer; but they are responsible for his acts and should see that he devotes to the duties for which he is well paid, as much time, attention and zeal as he and his staff throw into their frequent deer-stalking and duck-shooting expeditions. Another instance of the indifference, that leads to bungling, is the fact that there are laid down for building in the space between Lovesick Rapids and Perry's Creek, three lift locks, where one would, we are assured by a competent authority, be amply sufficient. But it may be urged that the engineer is a better judge than the most "competent authority." Are we asked to believe this because the engineer made a mistake of twenty feet in the depth of the water at Lovesick Rapids? If the contractor finds the actual conditions so widely at variance with the specifications at one point, may he not find similar mistakes on his contract elsewhere? The truth is that the Government care infinitely less for the actual progress of the work than for its value and importance as an electioneering scheme. It did good service as a political help at the last general election, and it will be made to do duty at another. Little is cared for the few hundreds of thousands frittered away on canal patchwork, so long as political ends are served. The time for such a policy is past. We demand on behalf of the Midland district that the Trent Valley Canal be dropped as a political bait and taken up as a business. The people have been fooled and made tools of long enough. Political loyalty may stand a good deal, but the business men of this district prefer the advancement of their own interests to those of political adventurers, who have long and repeatedly insulted their intelligence by transparent trickery and betrayed their vital commercial interests by double-dealing or delay, for the sole purpose of making political capital. Whether justified by the facts or not the impression is abroad that the engineer, at the instance of the heads of the Department, is purposely delaying his part of the work, so that when deputations visit Ottawa to urge on the construction of the canal, they may be met with the answer that the plans are not ready. The first step suggested in dealing with this matter is that the Government replace the present engineer and staff by efficient officials, and the second is that the people replace an administration which in this matter, as well as every other, show that no public interest is too important to be sacrificed to their retention of power.

For Velveteens call at Turnbull's; he claims to have the best made in the market, none excepted; Ladies who have worn these goods, pronounce them to be perfectly fast pile.

Belleville is the first to move in carrying out the Conservative policy of introducing party politics into municipal elections, but with no success. A meeting was held a few nights ago to select a Tory candidate for the mayoralty, but the outlook was so hopeless that the idea was abandoned, and the field is left to Messrs. Dunnett and Frost, two Liberals.

SCHOOL BOARD.

The Preparatory Form Abolished and Mr. McKee Appointed to Miss Fair's Vacancy—Salary $600.

The regular meeting of the School Board was held on Tuesday evening, at which all the members, except Dr. Burnham, were present.

COMMUNICATIONS AND ACCOUNTS.

After the minutes were read and confirmed applications for the vacancy caused by Miss Fair's resignation were read and referred to the Committee on Appointments.

Accounts from McKee & Davidson and the Times Printing Company were ordered to be paid, and a deputation, composed of the Chairman and Messrs. Errett and Dumble, was appointed to wait on the County Council at its next session in connection with the accounts presented to the Board by Mr. J. C. Brown.

ATTENDANCE.

The average attendance at the Central School for the past month was 526; Third Ward School, 128; South Ward School, 167.

INSPECTOR'S REPORT.

The Inspector said that there were no marked changes to report, and that the teachers were desirous of promoting the educational interests of the pupils. They were improving in effort and zeal.

REPORT OF HIGH SCHOOL INSPECTOR.

The report from the Inspector of High Schools was read as follows:—

The report, after dealing with the staff of teachers and the attendance—97-91, goes on to speak of the

ACCOMMODATIONS.

The Institute occupies a building which once contained junior classes of the Public School. One of the rooms now occupied by the preparatory form is in the basement; it is badly lighted and is otherwise also unsuitable as a class room. There are, however, four other fairly commodious rooms belonging to the Institute proper. The Public School and Institute have a common play ground. The former is only a few yards distant from the Institute building. The classes of the latter are sometimes disturbed by the noise made by the Public School pupils in their school grounds during their recess. Most undoubtedly a town of the wealth and importance of Peterborough should have a far better Institute building and surroundings.

EQUIPMENT.

The supply of maps is not as good as it should be. The chemical apparatus may easily be made sufficient, but there is no opportunity for teaching physics. This defect the Board should remedy without delay. The subject has little value if taught without proper illustrations.

ORGANIZATION.

There is at present a head-master, who is classical master, teaching also a junior English grammar class and a senior one in history. A modern language master who is also to teach a class in physics, a mathematical and science master, an English master and a master for the preparatory form, who teaches also book-keeping in the Institute. I do not consider the school to be at present well-organized, but, to a very large extent, its condition is chargeable to former teaching staffs. My objections to matters as they now stand, I pointed out to the headmaster. I found, too, that the preparatory form is not, as it should be, wholly distinct from the Institute proper. The present arrangement is injurious to the Institute.

REMARKS—PREPARATORY DEPARTMENT.

A salary of $750 is paid to the master of the preparatory form for teaching of pupils, while the salary of each of the assistants, who are graduates and who teach the highest work in their respective departments, is only $900. As the income from the preparatory form cannot, as matters stand, exceed $130 a year, it is evident that the liberality of the Board is misdirected. I wish to be understood, not as reflecting upon the ability of the teacher of the form, but simply as reporting that, considering the smallness of the attendance, the amount paid for his services is disproportionately large. My objection is disproportionately large. My objection is strengthened by the fact that, to pay this amount, the Board must use the fees paid by the pupils of the Institute proper, which fees should, in justice, be expended for the benefit of those who pay them. Evidently, if the form cannot be made self-sustaining, as contemplated by the law, it should be discontinued.

Very good results have already been attained in several of the departments. I was much pleased with Mr. Earl's teaching and with the proficiency, order and tone of his classes. Mr. Long, too, though a recently appointed master, is making good progress and is adopting good methods, and Mr. Horning, though an inexperienced teacher, will, I am confident, prove a successful one. In the classical department, which is a large one considering the size of the school, the pupils are being well drilled in elementary work.

Semi-annual summary of report on proficiency and estimated standing of the school in five groups of subjects, ranging from I. (highest) to IV. (the lowest mark):

1. English Department	II. IV.
2. Mathematics	II. IV.
3. Physical Science	Just begun
4. Classics	III. IV.
5. Modern languages	II. III.

On motion it was referred to the Committee on Appointments.

Miss Errett's non-professional certificate was placed on fyle.

Communications from the Minister of Education, with regard to the Entrance Examinations, were received.

TESTIMONIAL.

Moved by J. R. Stratton, seconded by A. Rutherford, that Miss Fair having tendered her resignation as teacher in the Public School, with a view to pursuing a still higher course at the University, this Board regretfully accepts her resignation. They, however, take advantage of the opportunity to give expression to their appreciation of her services while engaged by this Board. They have always found her a very careful, zealous and painstaking teacher, manifesting the greatest interest in her work and in her pupils, apt to communicate, governing with kindness and inspiring her pupils with her own enthusiastic love of study, and giving the fullest satisfaction to the Board and to the parents of pupils. They wish her continued success in aiming at a still higher literary standing, and express a hope that they may again be able to secure her services.—Carried.

FEES.

Moved by Mr. Millar, seconded by Mr. Dumble, that the resolution carried at this Board on the 8th October, in reference to the question of fees of pupils entering the Collegiate Institute be rescinded, and that in lieu thereof a fee of $1.00 for each pupil writing for the Entrance Examinations be charged, to be refunded to those pupils who pass, and that there be no charge to pupils of our own school.—Carried.

COMMITTEE AND BOARD MEETING.

The Board then adjourned into a Committee on Appointments, when the preparatory form was abolished and Mr. McKee appointed to take the position now held by Miss Fair, after the holidays, at a salary of $600. The Committee resumed as a Board meeting, adopted the report and adjourned.

SPRINGVILLE.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

HYMENEAL.

For two or three years now Cupid has been doing his work almost with a vengeance in this locality. His last victim is is Miss Addie, eldest daughter of Robert Howden, Esq., of "Fair View Farm," Cavan. On Thursday, 27th November, 1884, Miss Addie entered into the holy bonds of matrimony with Mr. Robert Fair, dry goods merchant of Peterborough, of the firm of Fair, Van-Every & Co. The marriage ceremony was performed at the residence of the bride's father, at 4 o'clock p.m., after which the numerous guests sat down to a table laden with a vast variety of luxuries. The wedding presents were numerous and costly. The happy couple took the train at 7.20 o'clock, at Cavanville, and proceeded on a tour through the west, but the rest of the wedding party remained at Mr. Howden's residence till late in the night, where a really delightful evening was spent. We congratulate the newly wed each on being so fortunate in getting a good partner, and wish them happiness and prosperity, and hope that life will be all Fair sailing.

"SCOTLAND YET."

St. Andrew's Banquet.

A DELIGHTFULLY SUCCESSFUL DINNER.

The St. Andrew's annual dinner held in the Opera House on Tuesday evening (unavoidably postponed from Monday) was very largely attended, over eighty guests being present, and it was in every way a most pleasant success. The supper, furnished from Faucher's restaurant, was in thoroughly first-class style, and the service and attendance were well-conducted and prompt. Mr. D. McLeod, chairman, presided.

The secretary, Mr. Wm. Cumming, read letters of regret from Geo. A. Cox, Mayor, D. W. Dumble and others.

The chairman said he was glad to see so large a gathering present. The Society was fairly prosperous, the treasurer at the annual meeting reported a surplus of funds of $180, after all claims were met.

The first toast was, "The Queen and Royal Family." The orchestra—"God Save the Queen."

The second toast, proposed by the first vice-president, Mr. John Erskine, was, "The Governor-General." Song—Mr. Galletly—"Hail to the Chief," sung in excellent style, with enthusiastic applause.

Ex-president Telford proposed the toast of "The Army, Navy and Canadian Volunteers." Song—"Red, White and Blue," Mr. James Stewart. Captain Edwards responded, and his neat allusion to the association of the Canadian contingent with the army was received with loud applause.

Mr. Menzies, treasurer of the Society, proposed the toast of "The Dominion Government and Provincial Legislature," responded to by John Burnham, M.P., who, in referring to the senatorial branch, strongly urged the claim of this district to a representative in the Senate. Referring to the House of Commons, he said that all nationalities were represented, and it was, perhaps, owing to the Globe that we had not Jamaic "niggers" in the House, and the speaker thought that the day was not far distant when the Heathen Chinee might be represented. He eulogized the House of Commons, and stated that the Dominion Government was willing to give what improvements the people needed in the way of canals, etc., for the asking, though they might have to ask often. (Laughter.)

Mr. T. Blezard referred to the work and position of the Local Legislature. He argued against the reduction of the number of members of that body. In referring to our educational system, he feared the Government was giving too much attention to the higher branches of educatian, which, though excellent in itself, was not what the majority of the people wanted.

"The Day and a' wha Honor it," proposed by the president, was received with rousing enthusiasm—song, "Scotland Yet"—in Mr. Galletly's inimitable style. Dr. Massie, of Keene, in responding to the toast, spoke of the propriety of patriotism, and insisted that every man was called on to love his own country best, which he could do without disparaging the same feelings as held by the natives of another country.

Mr. Erskine proposed "The Poets and Poetry of Scotland"—Song, Mr. Bowie, "Hame cam oor Guidmon," Mr. Galletly, read an eulogistic essay on Scottish poetry, followed by the reading of the poem by Mr. Tilford, bard of the society, both, which, for lack of space, we are compelled to omit from this report.

Mr. Alex. Morrison contributed the song, "The Man behind the Plough," and Mr. Galletly sang "McGregor's Gathering," as he only can sing it.

The president gave "Canada our Home," responded to by Mr. Geo. Edmison, in a neat and telling speech.

Mr. Menzies proposed "Our Educational Interests and the Learned Professions," responded to by Mr. J. Frith Jeffers and Mr. W. H. Moore. Mr. Jeffers cleverly set forth the advantages of a higher education, and successfully combatted the aspersion cast on our school system as a godless one, and Mr. Moore gave instances of the eminent lawyers and jurists Scotland had produced.

The Vice-president—"The Commercial, Manufacturing and Agricultural Interests." Mr. Menzies, Mr. Shortly and Mr. T. Blezard, M.P.P., responded, the latter pronouncing a decided eulogy on the Agricultural College, Guelph.

Song—"Allister McAllister," Mr. Henry Bowie, Smith, very humourely rendered.

Dr. Massie, of Keene, proposed, "Our Mothers, Wives and Sweethearts." Selection, orchestra. Responded to by Mr. Charles Cameron, who very touchingly and gracefully alluded to the sacred associations connected with a mother's name and memory.

The "Press," was responded to by Messrs. Stratton and Yokome, of the EXAMINER, and Mr. Armstrong, of the Review.

The Peterborough orchestra furnished music at intervals, and Mr. McDonald, piper of the Society, was liberal of his inspiring strains.

The hand-locked "Auld Lang Syne," with "God Save the Queen," brought a very pleasand successful occasion to a close, somewhere in the "we sma' hours ayont the twal."

PERSONAL.

On Thursday morning Mr. Wm. Croft and family, of Smith, started for Georgia, to secure the benefit of a milder climate.

Our thanks are due to Mr. Ralph O. Helm, a former Peterboroughnian, for copies of Kansas and St. Louis papers:

Mr. Rowland C. Strickland of Lakefield has been appointed by the Government, overseer of the islands in Stony Lake and the Trent Valley waters.

Mr. W. H. Anderson, a Peterborough member of the Nile contingent, has been appointed foreman of one of the gangs of 25 each, into which the Canadian contingent is divided.

Mr. E. C. Hill, who has charge of the renovation of the Port Hope Opera House, reports the work progressing rapidly. Port Hoper's heads are level on one point—when they want an opera house rejuvenated in first-class style they know whom to call on.

"Well, Pat, which is the way to Burlington?" "How did ye know me name was Pat!" "Oh, I guessed it." "Thin, be the powers, if ye air so good at guessing, you'd better guess the way to Burlington."

"Now, my dears, you must do as the Romans do," said old man Scroggins to his daughters, on their arrival in Italy. And the first thing they saw was a boy trying to stand on his head in the corner of a railway station.

Purge out the lurking distemper that undermines health, and the constitutional vigor will return. Those who suffer from an enfeebled and disordered state of the system, should take Ayer's Sarsaparilla to cleanse the blood, and restore vitality.

THE SUPER-CONUBIAL NEWBOLD.

The Many-Wived "Master" on Trial for Bigamy—Found "Guilty."

(From Our Special Correspondent.)

TOLEDO, Ohio, Nov. 25th, 1884.—Charles Neiville—otherwise held to be Charles Newbold, a former figurer in your town and vicinity, and the latest claimant for the Tichborne title and estates, was arraigned in court here this morning on a charge of Bigamy. Neiville is the man who created such a furore last May, as is alleged, running away from Detroit with Lillian Whitney, daughter of C. J. Whitney, a prominent theatrical manager in that city and Chicago.

Neiville was employed as coachman for Whitney's family, and lived with his (Neiville's) wife and two children in the carriage house. He fascinated Miss Lillian, a beautiful girl eighteen years old, and came to Toledo, where they were married. In the course of a few days they were discovered, and Neiville was placed in jail and the girl returned to her parents.

A MAN OF MANY WIVES.

Mr. Whitney set detectives to work, and they found that Neiville, as alleged, had been married eight times, as follows:—At Kingston, Ont., to Miss Jerusha Wood; then to Miss Julia Durnford, at Collingwood; to Miss Adelaide Nichols, at Campbellford. At Belleville he was arrested for a larcenous crime and jailed, the wife of the jailer became enamored of him, and the two ran away to Morristown, N. J., where they separated after living together a short time. Neiville then, as alleged, married Anna Henry in Schuectady, Miss Selina Row, at Newark, N. J., and Harriet Shaw in Paterson. In these transactions he used different names. His parents live in Peterborough, Ont., although he insists he is the original Tichborne heir and that the Peterborough family brought him over.

A large number of witnesses are here from New York, Canada and Michigan. The meeting of the several victimized women today formed a pathetic scene. Counsel for the defence tried to secure a postponement of the case, but the court would not grant it. Several witnesses were examined, principally parties who helped to tie the last nuptial knot in Toledo.

Nov. 26th.—The trial was resumed to-day. Sir Charles Roger Neiville Tichborne as he now calls himself, appeared to be the most unconcerned person present. His latest victim, Miss Whitney, with her father, were in court, and were, of course, the target for all eyes. The defence resorted to all the dodges possible to stay proceedings, but the court was firm and refused to grant any delay, though it was late in the day before the prosecution was able to get two witnesses heard. These were the judge who issued the license for the marriage of "Sir Charles E. Neiville Baronet," and Miss Lillian Whitney, and the justice who performed the ceremony. Miss Whitney's infatuation with the dark eyed deluder is past, and the reaction has brought disgust and hatred. It is stated that she has asserted that if she got an opportunity she would kill the seductive baronet.

Nov. 27th.—This morning on the opening of the court Newbold was confronted by three of his wives, and two very pretty and interesting children, who recognized their pa', and insisted, contrary to court rules, to get on the father's knee. The wives appeared as Mrs. Newbold, the one that has stood true to Newbold through all his matrimonial adventures, Miss Selina Rowe, and Miss Lillian Whitney. Rev. Dr. Brice swore to having performed the marriage ceremony between the prisoner, under the name of Perry, and Miss Rowe, at Newark, N. J. Mrs. Brice's testimony completed the indentification of the prisoner as Perry. A considerable sensation was created by placing Newbold on the stand. His confession to the detective received the most of his attention. He said in this that he was married at Newark, N. J., under the name of George Perry, but that he really forgot the lady's name Another marriage was also made in New York State, under the name of Newbold. His real name is he said was Sir Roger Tichborne Neiville, and he was the legal heir to large estates in England and Ireland. He asserted that the confession was wrung from him by false pretences, the detective claiming to be an attorney. The prisoner seemed to delight in the evident sensation he made in the court. The lawyers addressed the jury and the court adjourned.

Nov. 28th.—This morning the judge reviewed the evidence and charged the jury. The jury were out a short time, and returning into court, after the usual formalities, returned a verdict of "guilty." Newbold or Neiville or Tichborne, requested to be allowed to thank his counsel, which was granted, and he was removed by the sheriff.

Nov. 30th.—A determined attempt is being made to secure a new trial. The prospect of a seven years sentence, the lightest for his crime, has made the bogus baronet weary of life. He is reported to have made an attempt, whether bona fide or not, to commit suicide by dashing out his brains against the bars of his cell. He is seriously injured and there is a chance that he may not recover.

Andrew McNeil's Winter Underclothing is unexcelled in quality, and is now being sold at 20 per cent reduction to clear out before the season advances.

Facts Relating to the Draft Horses of France.

While some people in America call all horses imported from France Normans, it is a fact that there is no breed in France called by that name by the French people; the name Norman therefore, is purely American. The principal breeds of France are known as Percherons and Boullanais. The Percherons are the most highly prized of all French races and all departments of France go to the Perche for Stallions to improve their local breeds. The Percheron Stud Book of France is published under the authority of the French Government and admits only animals of pure Percheron origin and birth, established by their pedigrees and the pedigrees of their ancestors for generations. The fact that no recorded pedigrees can be furnished with any of the more common breeds of France, explains the eagerness of many importers in insisting that all horses imported from France are alike, and that pedigrees are useless.

It is a well known fact that what a man gives for a horse over from $500 to $800—the price of a good grade—is paid for purity of blood; and where the seller is not able to give the recorded pedigree of the animal sold as evidence of additional value, he has no right to ask it. With these facts before him no intelligent man will buy a horse imported from France unless he is recorded with his pedigree in full in the stud book in France, and the importer furnishes with his bill of sale the French certificate of registration, as this is his only guarantee of safety, a large number of horses of unknown blood being imported to this country and sold as pure bred.

LAKEFIELD.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

ELECTION.

A meeting of the rate payers was held on Monday the 1st, inst., to elect a councillor to fill the vacancy caused by the death of the late K. Urquhart. Mr. Isaac Garbutt was nominated to fill the vacancy. Dr. Armour, as a ratepayer, protested against the election; it was illegal, as the proper notice had not been given. The Reeve and Clerk showed that the proceedings, so far, were quite formal and in keeping with the statutes. Mr. Graham thought the Doctor was getting very particular as he had known great irregularities in some elections and no fault found. No other nomination being made, Mr. Isaac Garbutt was declared duly elected by acclamation.

ACCIDENT.

Mr. J. B. Chapin, had his hand caught in a planing machine, on Tuesday last, and badly mangled, losing part of one finger, the others all injured more or less.

SKATING RINK.

The rink is being put in order; if frosty weather continues, it will soon be open for the public.

NEW STAGE LINE.

Mr. John Cooper has decided to run a tri-weekly stage to Peterborough and back, Tuesdays, Thursdays and Saturdays. Leave Lakefield at 9 a.m., and Peterborough at 3 o'clock. The first trip will be on Saturday next. John will make it a success, if anyone.

RAILWAY MATTERS.

A slight change has been made in the time table. The train arrives at 1.20 p.m.; departs at 3.10 p.m. The Saturday evening train will be continued for the present. We are glad to see our old friend and citizen, Robt. Richardson, has received the appointment of station master for our village.

NEW WOOLEN MILL.

Messrs. R. and G. Strickland have let the contract for the erection of a new woolen and carding mill. Mr. Peter Baptie who has the contract, calculates he has the finest shop in the country, new, three story, large, well lighted, warm, with every convenience, new machinery, a splendid water power, he is prepared to push business and execute orders with despatch.

DRAMATIC.

The comedy of "Caste" was enjoyed a second time in the P. C. A., Hall on Friday evening of last week. There was a good audience, good music, and good acting, all seemed delighted, and many compliments were paid to the actors. The play, we think, will, if given again during the winter, draw a much larger house.

MUNICIPAL.

Council meeting Monday evening next, and P. S., Board on the Tuesday following, at 7.30 p.m.

CHURCH REOPENING.

The Methodist Church, which has been much enlarged and re-seated, will have a reopening on Sunday next, morning and evening. Rev. Dr. Carman conducts the services, and on Monday evening gives a free lecture on the Worth and Work of Woman. A collection will be taken up in aid of the building fund.

NEW CHEESE FACTORY.

Mr. J. W. Moore has the estate of the late Dr. Mann, and is going to erect a cheese factory near Phalen's Corners.

Andrew McNeil, to clear out his large stock of Winter Underclothing is offering it at a reduction of 20 per cent.

NORWOOD.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

A DECIDED SUCCESS.

The Norwood grain elevator has proved a decided success, and is drawing patronage from townships far and near, even from distant Percy. Last week was a very good week, but not exceptionally so, when Mr. Roxburgh paid out about $3000 for different kinds of grain received at the elevator. The merchants of the village are now realizing the great benefits derived from this enterprise, as many farmers feel the convenience of being able to take a number of loads of grain to the elevator daily, and do their shopping at home, without the expenses incurred at distant markets. The reputation of dealing strictly honest with the farmers has also done considerabe in gaining a strong reputation for the Norwood elevator.

INSPECTION.

A few days ago, Colonel Villiers, D. A. G., Military District No. 3, of Kingston, inspected the armoury of the Norwood Volunteer Company. He minutely examined the arms accoutrements and clothing, and at the close of his examination stated that the rifles were very clean and in good order, and that the clothing was in excellent condition. He also stated that No. 5 Company had a very clean and tidy armoury. Being the first visit of the Colonel to Norwood, he took a walk around the village, and expressed himself as much pleased with the general appearance of the village, its well laid ont streets, its large and handsome dwellings and places of business, and further said that thar the magnificent buildiug on the corner of Peterborough and Colborne streets, would compare favourably with some of the best business stands in the limestone city.

N. M. INSTITUTE.

The annual report of the Norwood Mechanics' Institute for 1884, just forwarded to the Education Department, shows that the receipts during the year have been $197.81, and the expenditure for books, periodicals, etc., $156.53, leaving a balance in the hands of the treasurer of $41.18. The stock and assets amount to $1,111.18. The total number of books in the library being 1063. The membership is about 50. The Graphic, London Illustrated News and Grip, are weekly received at the reading room. A number of new books received recently are added to the library, which now comprises a large variety of first-class works, and which certainly deserves a greater patronage from the reading public than it now receives.

MINSTRELSY.

A "New Orleans" minstrel troupe, no doubt a Port Hope organization, held forth here on Friday last, announcing a nigger show of "predonmnating" merit. But our people didn't take the thing in worth a cent, as the audience was about as numerous as the performing company. To retrieve their prestige and their fortunes they held forth again on Saturday night, but the Norwoodites again failed to show any appreciation for the nigger business, or the "predommating" merits of these distinguished minstrels.

ANNIVERSARY SERVICES.

A minister from Peterboro' will conduct the anniversary services of the Sabbath school in connection with the Dummer Methodist church, on Sunday next. For both Sunday and Monday evening an excellent programme has been prepared, and there is no doubt the attendance on both occasions will be large. The rev. gentleman will also occupy the pulpit of the Norwood Methodist church both morning and evening. The Rev. Mr. Gee, of Norwood, will on that day assume the duties of the minister at Peterborough.

DEER HUNTING.

The deer hunting season is now in full blast, and quite a number of the nimble-footed deer have already fallen a prey to the huntsman. A Norwood party—not the chief and his party—last week brought home nearly a dozen deer, while others of the neighborhood succeeded in obtaining several heads. A large party left here on Monday morning for the haunts of the deer, and it is expected they will meet with their usual success. At any rate, if they get anything, by hook or by crook, the fact is sure to become widely known. Several loads of fine, fat deer passed through our village for the front last week, some Indians having been the successful hunters.

FOR MONTREAL.

Last week two cargoes of fine sheep were shipped from here, by the Ontario and Quebec railway, for the Montreal market. The cattle and sheep trade is becoming here, and large lots of both have lately been sent over the O. & Q. for Montreal. Good prices in all cases have been obtained by the shippers. Cattle buying is causing quite a circulation of money in this vicinity, but still the supply (of money) hardly meets the demand.

DOURO.

SUDDEN DEATH OF AN OLD RESIDENT.

On Monday of last week the many friends and acquaintances of Daniel Leahy, an aged and respected resident of this township, were shocked to hear of his sudden death. On Sunday he was at church in his usual health. On Monday in company with his son-in-law, Mr. James Condon, he started to deliver some fat cattle and pigs at the Indian River station of the O. & Q. Railway, going on foot. When a few rods distant from his own lot on the concession line, the son-in-law left Mr. Leahy, to go ahead to call at his own house for a coat. Mr. Condon had gone only a short distance, when he looked back and saw his father-in-law lying on the road on his back. Returning he found that life was extinct, Mr. Leahy having literally dropped dead in his tracks, from, it is supposed, heart disease. The deceased gentleman was 72 years of age, and came from Ireland to Canada in 1825 with his parents, who settled in Douro. The father died soon after his arrival in Canada, and the mother passed away about fifteen yeas ago, at the mature age of 108 years. The deceased leaves behind him a wife, four sons and five daughters. He was a devoted Roman Catholic and one of the first councillers of the township of Douro, and also served the municipality two or three times as assessor.

OTONABEE.

The many friends and neighbors of Mr. John O'Connor, sympathise deeply with him and the family, in the sudden death of their only daughter, Sarah Ann, which occurred on Sunday morning last, after a very short illness from typhoid fever. Miss O'Connor was well thought of wherever she was known, and very many friends mourn her untimely death—at the early ago of 23 years.

LOVE FOR A DAY!

CHAPTER XI.

"When I went away, Nellie," said Mark, "I did love you with all my heart. Do you remember how my father teased us, and called my love 'lad's love?'"

"And said it would die as soon," I remarked.

"It was lad's love, Nellie, but it was honest, eager and true. You filled my heart, and I had no thought save for you. I would have given up going to India, but my father was not willing. Would to Heaven that I had! I left England, Nellie, in the hope of returning at the end of four years and making you my wife. My father's death was a blow to me. I should have come back then, but I could not throw up my appointment. I shall tell you the candid truth, Nellie; I will not hide one word, one thought from you. During the first year of my absence, I loved you as truly and dearly as ever. You were never out of my thoughts by day or by night. I lived for you. The second year—ah, Nellie, if I wound you, I wound myself more deeply!—the second year I found myself thinking more of my work. I had been promoted, and the difficulties of my profession engrossed me. I thought less of you, but I loved you just the same. I own that some little coldness crept into my letters, that at times I missed a mail; but my heart was true to you. One thing that had an evil influence over me was the constant 'chaffing' of my comrades. It was strange that the cry of 'lad's love' should be used in India as it had been in England. They laughed at the number of letters that came in your dear handwriting, Nellie. They laughed at the number of letters I sent away. They said that it was 'lad's love,' that in a few years' time I should laugh at it, that all boys suffered from it; and, though at times I blushed over it, yet my heart was always true to you, Nellie."

He stopped and looked into my miserable face. I could not keep my lips from quivering, and my eyes were heavy with unshed tears.

"Nellie," he said, "have you any news—anything about me?"

"Not one word since you wrote last," I replied.

"Then," he said, with some little hesitation, "you do not know what name I bear now?"

"Your own, I suppose," was my listless reply.

"Yes, my own, but it is a new one. Is it possible, Nellie, that you do not know who I am and why I am here?"

No suspicion of the truth came to me; indeed nothing was farther from my thoughts.

"How can I know?" was my impatient answer. "I have never heard any one mention your name."

He was silent for a few minutes, and then continued slowly:

"I know not which part of my story is the hardest to tell. It was in the beginning of the third year of my absence from England that a strange event happened. It was so unexpected, so bewildering, that for some time I seemed to lose my senses; and you know, Nellie, I was in many respects what my father called me—merely a lad. I was so dazzled and bewildered that I forgot all I ought to have remembered. My first thought was of you, and I ought to have written to you; but I had let two or three mails go without writing, and I intended to surprise you. I had to go to England at once, and I knew that I should reach you as soon as my letters could. I did a strangely careless thing; I left no address, forgetting that you would probably go on writing. I thought I should see you. Nellie, do you follow me? Do not look at me with such sorrowful eyes. You see that up to this time, the third year of my absence, I had done nothing specially worthy of blame. I had been shy and self-conscious about my love, [illegible] ought to have been bolder and more courageous. I had allowed my time and thoughts to become engrossed in my profession, at the expense of my love; still I was true at heart, Nellie. I had no other love; and I set sail from India, still thinking more of your surprise and delight than of anything else. But, Nellie, I have not told you what the strange event was. Can you not help me, Nellie? Can you not guess what called me back to England and to you?"

"How should I? You may tell me safely; nothing can hurt me now, Mark. I have realized the fact that you are married; nothing more remains."

"I hate myself for having to tell it," he said, his face flushing; "but, Nellie, I was only a lad, and the news completely bewildered me. Do you remember that once when we were together I asked you about your friends and relatives? You replied that you were almost alone in the world; and I told you that, while I had some very wealthy relatives and some very poor, I knew but little of either. There had never been any correspondence, nor even the slightest acknowledgment of any kind. My father was a most peculiar man; he did not like his poor relations. His dislike was not caused by their poverty, but because they had offended him many years before, and he had never forgiven them. As to the rich members of the family, he was too proud to seek to know them; nor would he allow me to speak of them; they took no notice of us, nor we of them. Lord Severne—Baron Severne is the proper title—of Severne Court and my father were second cousins."

In one moment I saw it all.

"You are Lord Severne, Mark!" I cried.

"Yes, it is so, Nellie; I am Lord Severne," he said, gravely.

"And Lurline—your wife is named Lurline," I said.

"Yes, my wife is named Lurline," he answered. "Now you understand. I did not know that you were here, Nellie. I never dreamed of seeing you when I came out this morning. I am here as Lady Yorke's friend and guest; Lurline is with me."

He stopped, thinking perhaps that I should speak; but what had I to say? Words were useless.

"Now you know what happened, Nellie," he continued. "In the third year of my absence this news came from England—Lord Severne of Severne Court was dead; the brother who should have succeeded him was drowned in returning from Italy, and the two sons of his brother, the heir, died from fever at school—two generations swept away. My father, had he lived, would have been Lord Severne; he was the next heir, and both title and estates are entailed. As my father was dead, I was the next heir. My father had never given me to understand that there was the most remote possibility of our succession. I do not believe he ever thought of it himself; he was only second cousin, and at that time Lord Severne was a strong, healthy man, his brother the same, and the boys at school gave every promise of a long life.

"Now all was changed; they were dead; and, as I was the nearest of kin, I became master of Severne Court, and Baron Severne. Nellie, as truly as there is a Heaven above us, my first thought when I heard this news was of you. 'What will my Nellie say?' I cried aloud; and I felt proud to think that I could make my fair and beautiful love Lady Severne.

"If I had written one line to you then, all would have been different—my life and yours; but I was restless and excited. I had so much to think of, so much to do. I was pleased, proud, agitated, but not untrue to you then, Nellie—I swear it, not untrue.

"The letters sent by Messrs. Norton & Son were most peremptory in their summons. I must return at once.—Fortunately there was a young Englishman who could without difficulty take my place, and I was free. My friends and comrades were honestly pleased with my good fortune, and we parted on excellent terms. Nellie, when I started in the Queen of the Seas, bound from Bombay to London, my thoughts were all of you. Oh, my true love, my lost love, how shall I tell you what happened then?

"I deserve to be shot as a traitor, as a coward," he continued, with passionate bitterness. "When I look back, I cannot think what folly, what madness possessed me. I am sure that my good fortune had in some measure turned my brain.

"On the second day that I was on board I began to take an interest in my fellow-passengers. My romantic story was known amongst them—how from a simple engineer, glad to earn an income of a few hundreds, I had suddenly and quite unexpectedly come into possession of a title and estates worth sixty thousand per annum. On the second day of the voyage I walked about the deck amusing myself with the novel sights and sounds, when, Nellie, I saw one of the most beautiful women I had ever beheld in my life—beautiful as a dream or a vision, but, ah, Nellie, not half so fair and winsome as you!

"I had seen but little of women. I had never been thrown much into their society. I hardly remembered my own mother; sisters and cousins I had none; you and your mother were the only two with whom I had been on friendly or intimate terms. I loved you. I understood your simple, noble nature; I knew your true earnest character; but I was perfectly ignorant of the arts of women. I thought they were all like you; their caprices, fascinations, charms, arts, and intrigues were all unknown to me. Never was prey more easily caught. I hate myself when I think of my own folly.

"The beautiful woman was walking up and down the deck; her veil was thrown back, and the sea-breeze had brought a lovely bloom to her face. Her graceful carriage, so free, so stately, attracted me first.

"I saw her lay her hand on the rail. She was looking over at the passing waves; the hand was white as a snow-drop; a wedding-ring shone on it, with broad bands of diamonds and sapphires. 'She is married,' I thought. Then, little as I understood the mysteries of ladies' attire, I perceived that the coquettish line of white defining the form of her beautiful head was a widow's cap.

"'Who is that lady?' I asked of Captain Luttrell.

"His eyes brightened, as did the eyes of every other man on board, when they rested on her.

"'She is a Mrs. Nugent,' he replied—'a young widow returning to England. Her husband, Captain Vere Nugent, died a few months since. I will introduce you to her,' and the next moment I was bowing before the beautiful young widow, who seemed still but a child.

"Lurline is my wife now, and I will not say one word against her. I will not even say that I could do so. She was certainly the most beautiful, the most fascinating woman I had ever seen. She looked so young that it was almost impossible to believe that she had been a wife and was a widow; but I knew afterwards that she was at least ten years older than we thought her. I will not describe her to you; you will see her and judge for yourself.

"Nellie," continued Mark, "there is as great a difference between you and Lurline as between a simple natural lily of the valley and a gaudy artificial camelia. I saw it afterwards; but at first she took my senses captive and held them in thrall. I remember how she puzzled me, how I watched her. One of the first things that struck me was the subtle odor of sweet violets that seemed to envelope her. Everything belonging to her—her sables, shawls, books, fans, gloves—everything had the same sweet odor of fresh violets. That charmed me. Oh, Nellie, I was a rash, foolish coward, but I never thought of loving her, and I never dreamed of marrying any one but you! Every man on board was in love with her; but she favored me, and I was weak enough, young and foolish enough, to be flattered by this preference, to feel proud and delighted when the little court of admirers had to make way for me, when she turned from them all with a smile for me, when she laid that white-gemmed hand of hers on my arm, dismissing the others with a little nod of the head, saying, 'I will accompany you, Lord Severne. I should like a quiet promenade.'

"It pleased me to mark hot, angry jealousy in other men's eyes; it pleased me to note how they envied every mark of preference which this beautiful woman showered on me. Still, Nellie, I never dreamed of being false to you.

"At first I was attracted by her great beauty, her fascination, her low sweet voice, her nameless charm of dress and manner; then by her decided, open preference for me, shown at all times and in all places.

"I never thought that rank, title, or money had anything to do with it; I believed it was for myself alone that she cared. Ah, Nellie, perhaps even a stronger man than myself might have succumbed! I shall never forget the nights on the ocean, with the stars like golden meteors in the sky, the sea dark, silent, mysterious and solemn. Such nights they were—the sea and sky so calm, and the beautiful face looking into mine! Ah, Nellie, you taught me love, and it will never die; she taught me passion, and it is dead!

"There can be no excuse for me, Nellie—I offer none. But remember that for the first time in my life I was flattered by all the subtle flatteries that a clever and beautiful woman could use. The balance of my reason was gone. She had roused passion that yet was not love in my heart. I was driven onwards by the anger of those whom she slighted for me; and one night—one fatal night, when the moon was shining brilliantly, and the sea was calm as a lake—we stood together at the stern of the vessel, hidden by the wheel-house. Her hand stole into mine, her face was raised to mine, pale with emotion, her eyes glistening with tears. I forgot you, Nellie; I forgot honor, truth, and loyalty. I bent down to her, and—Well, I cannot tell you how it happened. I am speaking the truth, Nellie. I would not hide one thought from you. I feel sure that when I bent my head to kiss her I had no thought of asking her to be my wife; but before another half hour had passed, I had promised to marry her, and—Nellie, love, listen—from that moment to this I have never had one single happy moment—not one. There could be no drawing back—no hesitation even, for I found the next day that the whole of the passengers knew that Lord Severne and the beautiful Mrs. Nugent were engaged.

"Weak, cowardly, disloyal—ah, yes, I know I was all that! But I have suffered horribly. From that hour to this I have been a miserable man, for I found out that it was you I loved after all, and that the love of the lad was better than the passion of the man. There were times when I resolved on telling her, but it would have been useless. She had decided on marrying me, and I knew that my intentions were quite secondary to hers. When it was too late, my heart went back to its first allegiance. I found my engagement to this woman of the world a very business-like matter. There was no nonsense, no delay. We were married three weeks after the Queen of the Seas reached London.

"Ah, Nellie, you have suffered, but my pain has been greater! My conscience gave me no rest. Night and day your image was with me, night and day my folly and cowardice were ever before me. I longed, yet dreaded to see you. If I had known that your mother was dead, and that you were waiting for me in the old home alone, I should have gone to you, no matter what had happened; but your letter did not reach me."

"It was returned to me," I interposed.

"As soon as my affairs were settled," he continued, "I went abroad. Lurline preferred it. She said she never cared to live in England; and, in truth, I was indifferent on the subject, knowing that no place could ever be the same to me again. At Mentone we met the Yorkes, and I liked them very much. I was a miserable, haunted, gloomy man. My wealth brought me no happiness, because I had lost you. I found rest in talking to Lady Yorke. She seemed to think that I had some great sorrow in my life. I do not suppose I should have returned to England, at least for some years, had not imperative business compelled me to go to Severne Court a few weeks ago. Oh, Nellie, there are some disappointments too bitter, too great for words! I shall return to Italy; I cannot live in England."

"Why?" I asked.

His face clouded, an angry gleam came into the eyes which had been full of pain and despair.

"I cannot tell you why, Nellie, but my life is blighted. I cannot stay anywhere for long."

"Shall you never live at Severne Court?" I asked.

"Never," was the gloomy reply. "The punishment of my folly is that I shall be a wanderer on the face of the earth."

"But why, Mark—why?" I cried, beginning to forget my own troubles in his.

"There are some things that a man cannot speak of," he replied, "cannot even think of, or lay bare to his own heart. This sorrow of mine is one of them."

"Then Mark," I could not help saying as I looked sadly at him, "you have ruined all the happiness of my life without securing your own."

"That is just what I have done, Nellie. Between the remorse I feel at the loss of you and the sorrow of my secret, I am the most miserable man in the world."

Ah, Mark, my lover, I read in your face that your folly had cost you dear! We sat in silence for some time, the wind stirring the lilac branches and bearing to us sweet gusts of perfume. We had not been there an hour, and already it seemed to me an eternity. I knew that we must part. Time was passing, and I should be wanted. Then the full force of my misery rushed over me like a lava tide. How could I ever take up the duties of life again? My heart and soul had no strength, no life. Where should I turn for help or comfort? For, alas, I had given my whole heart to a man who had married another and had forgotten me!

"Mark, what shall I do with the rest of my life?" I asked, wearily. "I cannot die just because I wish to die. I am like a ship without a rudder. Love of you, whether living or dead, has hitherto filled my life. What am I to do?"

"I cannot tell, Nellie," he replied. "Are you happy with Lady Yorke?"

"Yes—as happy as I could be anywhere without you," I replied.

"Then do not go away. We will do that, not you. We will remain for a few days; then I shall say that I am summoned to the Court on business. Nellie, forgive me for what I am going to say. All I have in the world ought to have been yours—and I have such abundant wealth; let me give you what will keep you in comfort and affluence."

I could not be angry; his eyes were full of tears, and his lip quivered.

"No," I replied, gently; "you must not do that, Mark. I do not care for money. I would rather have had one true word of love from your lips than all the money you possess."

"I should be so much happier, Nellie, if you would let me do this. Let me buy for you a pretty little home. In the midst of my misery let me have the one gleam of comfort that you have no worldly cares."

"No!" I cried, with quick, impatient scorn. "Can you not understand that I would rather—a thousand times rather—die of hunger by the roadside than accept even one crumb of bread from your hands?"

"Will you ever forgive me?" he said. "In the years to come, when you remember that I am—ah, a thousand times!—more unhappy than you, and when you remember that I can find no comfort because it is all my fault, will you not try to forgive me? Think of me as you did; forget this interval of folly and falsehood. Think of me only as Mark with his honest 'lad's love;' forget Mark, the man who failed you—will you, Nellie?"

I could not help it—doubtless it was very undignified; but, when I saw the pain on the honest face, the humble sorrow in the dear eyes, when I saw Mark distressed, grieved with the misery of a lifetime on his face, I forgot my wounded love for one short moment. How could I refuse him anything to whom I had never said nay? How could I refuse him pardon when he asked it with tears in his eyes? He had marred my life, ruined my happiness, made every hope bankrupt; but I loved him still. I held out my hands to him; I tried to smile, although the raining tears blinded me.

"I will forgive you, Mark," I said. "Ah, my dear, I could not, if I would, be angry with you! We must never meet again, Mark. The wide world must be ever between us two who were once to be always together; a deep grave lies between us, and in it I must bury my love; but I forgive you, even as I hope to be forgiven."

He held my hand in his for one moment, and then he said, with tears that did not shame his manhood:

"My dear, lost love, farewell!"

I knew what he meant. It would be better for him, better for me, that we should meet as strangers. He would be leaving in a few days, and we should see each other no more. Better so!

Trembling, fainting, dazed by my own misery, I dared not go back to the house just then, lest any one meeting me should ask what ailed me. I had a strange, vague idea that I had changed my own identity, and that the sorrow-stricken woman walking by herself under the summer trees could not be Nellie Chester.

CHAPTER XII.

That evening Lady Yorke came to my room. She was always kind and considerate to me.

"You have not been well to-day, Miss Chester. Masham tells me that you have had one of your bad headaches. Are you better? You look very pale and changed in some way. I came to ask you if you would bring your music to the drawing-room this evening. It would be a great help to me."

I thought for a few moments before I answered her. I could crush down my own pain and anguish, for I had plenty of self-control; and I longed to see Mark's wife. How the words pierced my heart—"Mark's wife!" I kissed the white jewelled hand laid so kindly on my shoulder, and said what was true—that I would do anything to please Lady Yorke.

A Pennsylvania girl who expected to take the first prize at a county fair, for making the best cake, has not been made to rejoice to any great extent yet over the receipt the of premium. To tell the truth, the cake didn't give the judges time to send in their verdict before it killed them.

A Baltimore girl has become insane because she could not be a man. She never had to meet the rent, nor shave, nor serve on a jury, nor pay a poll tax, nor pay for the ice cream, nor fasten her suspenders with a shingle nail; but she didn't know when she was well off.

FOND MEMORIES.

Pass the butter gently, Mabel,
Shove it lightly through the air,
In the corner of the dish, love,
You will find a nut-brown hair.
What fond mem'ries it awakens
Of the days 'ere we were wed,
When upon my fine coat collar
Oft was laid your little head.
Lovingly I stroke those tresses,
In the happy days gone by;
Now I strike them every meal time
In the butter or the pie.

Wheeler's Tissue Phosphates.

The Terrific Tension on the nervous system at concert pitch for prolonged periods in the present struggle for existence tells with fearful effect on the organic processes. Excessive mental toil leads to functional disturbances of the digestive apparatus which prepares food for brain and muscular work. Diabetes may be set up by mental emotions, and prolonged anxiety and worry about business is a potent factor in Bright's disease; liver troubles, notably jaundice, are the outcome of failure of nerve power. The physiological remedy is brain and nerve food, Wheeler's Phosphates and Calisaya, avoiding excitants and stimulants.

A STORM MACHINE.

Among the latest inventions reported from Australia is a machine for producing storms. It is intended to force a rain supply from the clouds during a period of drought. The apparatus is in the form of a balloon, with a charge of dynamite attached underneath it. The balloon is to be sent into the clouds, and when there the dynamite if to be fired by a wire connecting it with the earth. A trial of this novel contrivance is to be given upon the dry districts of New South Wales, and the result is looked forward to with interest by some of the residents of that colony. If the machine is a success, perhaps the Australia fire underwriters may employ it with benefit to wet down the arid districts in that country, and reduce the losses by fire.

KING'S EVIL

Was the name formerly given to Scrofula because of a superstition that it could be cured by a king's touch. The world is wiser now, and knows that can only be cured by a thorough purification of the blood. If this is neglected, the disease perpetuates its taint through generation after generation. Among its earlier symptomatic developments are Eczema, Cutaneous Eruptions, Tumors, Boils, Carbuncles, Erysipelas, Purulent Ulcers, Nervous and Physical Collapse, etc. If allowed to continue, Rheumatism, Scrofulous Catarrh, Kidney and Liver Diseases, Tubercular Consumption, and various other dangerous or fatal maladies, are produced by it.

SCROFULA

Ayer's Sarsaparilla

Is the only powerful and always reliable blood-purifying medicine. It is so effectual an alterative that it eradicates from the system Hereditary Scrofula, and the kindred poisons of contagious diseases and mercury. At the same time it enriches and vitalizes the blood, restoring healthful action to the vital organs and rejuvenating the entire system. This great

Regenerative Medicine

Is composed of the genuine Honduras Sarsaparilla, with Yellow Dock, Stillingia, the Iodides of Potassium and Iron, and other ingredients of great potency, carefully and scientifically compounded. Its formula is generally known to the medical profession, and the best physicians constantly prescribe AYER'S SARSAPARILLA as SE

Absolute Cure

For all diseases caused by the vitiation of the blood. It is concentrated to the highest practicable degree, far beyond any other preparation for which like effects are claimed, and is therefore the cheapest, as well as the best blood purifying medicine, in the world.

A Baltimore girl has become insane because she could not be a man. She never had to meet the rent, nor shave, nor serve on a jury, nor pay a poll tax, nor pay for the ice cream, nor fasten her suspenders with a shingle nail; but she didn't know when she was well off.

FOND MEMORIES.

Pass the butter gently, Mabel,
Shove it lightly through the air,
In the corner of the dish, love,
You will find a nut-brown hair.
What fond mem'ries it awakens
Of the days 'ere we were wed,
When upon my fine coat collar
Oft was laid your little head.
Lovingly I stroke those tresses,
In the happy days gone by;
Now I strike them every meal time
In the butter or the pie.

Wheeler's Tissue Phosphates.

The Terrific Tension on the nervous system at concert pitch for prolonged periods in the present struggle for existence tells with fearful effect on the organic processes. Excessive mental toil leads to functional disturbances of the digestive apparatus which prepares food for brain and muscular work. Diabetes may be set up by mental emotions, and prolonged anxiety and worry about business is a potent factor in Bright's disease; liver troubles, notably jaundice, are the outcome of failure of nerve power. The physiological remedy is brain and nerve food, Wheeler's Phosphates and Calisaya, avoiding excitants and stimulants.

A STORM MACHINE.

Among the latest inventions reported from Australia is a machine for producing storms. It is intended to force a rain supply from the clouds during a period of drought. The apparatus is in the form of a balloon, with a charge of dynamite attached underneath it. The balloon is to be sent into the clouds, and when there the dynamite if to be fired by a wire connecting it with the earth. A trial of this novel contrivance is to be given upon the dry district of New South Wales, and the result is looked forward to with interest by some of the residents of that colony. If the machine is a success, perhaps the Australia fire underwriters may employ it with benefit to wet down the arid districts in that country, and reduce the losses by fire.

A Remarkable Escape.

Mrs. Mary A. Dailey, of Tunkhannock, Pa., was afflicted for six years with Asthma and Bronchitis, during which time the best physicians could give no relief. Her life was despaired of until in last October she procured a bottle of Dr. King's New Discovery, when immediate relief was felt, and she continuing its use for a short time she was completely cured, gaining in flesh 50 lbs. in a few months.

Free trial bottles of this certain cure of all Throat and Lung Diseases at Taylor & McDonald's Drug Store. Large bottles $1.00.

STARCH SUGAR.

The starch sugar industry in the United States consumes daily 40,000 bushels of corn, and produces grape sugar and glucose syrup of the yearly value of $10,000,000. There are thirty factories in the United States, furnishing their product to brewers and for the manufacture of table syrup and the adulteration of cane sugar. It is also largely used in confectionery, in canning fruits, making fruit jellies, and in cooking. Artificial honey is made from it, and so, also, is vinegar.

Dairymen Prefer It.

MESSRS. WELLS, RICHARDSON & CO.:

Since the introduction of your Improved Butter Color among my customers, it has given universal satisfaction. The leading dairymen of this section who have used it give it the preference over all other colors, of whatever name or nature.

They are especially pleased with the fact that it does not become rancid, like other oil colors, and their product brings highest prices in market.

PAINLESS TOOTH EXTRACTOR.

A novel, and it is said, painless mode of extracting teeth has just been invented by a Swiss surgeon. A thick square of soft rubber, perforated in the center, is pushed over the offending tooth until the upper part of the root is well enveloped. The contraction of the rubber exercises a steady and painless but nearly painless pressure, gradually sundering the nerve and vessels and lifting the tooth from its bed without troublesome hemorrhage. The process requires four or five days, but is not accompanied by any serious liability to inflammation.

These are Solid Facts.

The best blood purifier and system regulator ever placed within the reach of suffering humanity, truly is Electric Bitters. Inactivity of the Liver, Biliousness, Jaundice, Constipation Weak Kidneys, or any disease of the urinary organs, or whoever requires an appetizer, tonic or mild stimulant, will always find Electric Bitters the best and only certain cure known. They act surely and quickly, every bottle guaranteed to give entire satisfaction or money refunded. Sold at 50 cents a bottle by Taylor & McDonald.

"IT WAS THE CAT."

Daniel Shea, of New York, 70 years old, killed a cat belonging to a neighbor, Mrs. Miller, alleging that it annoyed him so that he could not sleep. In the war of words between the two that followed, Shea plunged a pocket knife into Mrs. Miller's neck, killing her. He was arrested.

A Card.

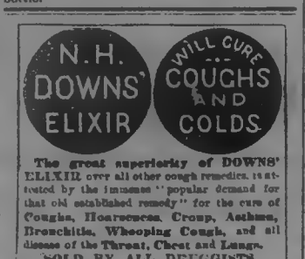
To all who are suffering from the errors and indiscretions of youth, nervous weakness early decay, loss of manhood, &c., I will send a recipe that will cure you, FREE OF CHARGE. This great remedy was discovered by a missionary in South America. Send a self-addressed envelope to the REV. JOSEPH T. INMAN, Station D, New York City

Itching Piles Symptoms and Cure.

The symptoms are moisture, like perspiration, intense itching, increased by scratching very distressing, particularly at night, seems as if pin-worms were crawling in and about the rectum; the private parts are sometimes affected. If allowed to continue very serious results may follow. "SWAYNE'S OINTMENT" is a pleasant, sure cure. Also for Tetter, Itch, Salt Rheum, Scald Head, Erysipelas, Barbers' Itch, Blotches, all scaly, crusty Skin Diseases. Box by mail 50 cents; three for 1.25. Address, DR. SWAYNE & SON, Phila., Pa. Sold by Druggists. 7-52t

Advice to Mothers.

Are you disturbed at night and broken of your rest by a sick child suffering and crying with pain of cutting teeth? If so, send at once and get a bottle of MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP FOR CHILDREN TEETHING. Its value is incalculable. It will relieve the poor little sufferer immediately. Depend upon it, mothers, there is no mistake about it. It cures dysentery and diarrhœa, regulates the stomach and bowels, cures wind colic, softens the gums, reduces inflammation, and gives tone and energy to the whole system. MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP FOR CHILDREN TEETHING is pleasant to the taste, and is the prescription of one of the oldest and best female nurses and physicians in the United States, and is for sale by all druggists throughout the world. Price 25 cents a bottle.



The great superiority of DOWNS' ELIXIR over all other cough remedies, is attested by the immense "popular demand for that old established remedy" for the cure of Coughs, Hoarseness, Croup, Asthma, Bronchitis, Whooping Cough, and all disease of the Throat, Chest and Lungs.

SOLD BY ALL DRUGGISTS.
TRIAL SIZE 25 CTS. LARGE BOTTLE $1.00.

KING'S EVIL

Was the name formerly given to Scrofula because of a superstition that it could be cured by a king's touch. The world is wiser now, and knows that can only be cured by a thorough purification of the blood. If this is neglected, the disease perpetuates its taint through generation after generation. Among its earlier symptomatic developments are Eczema, Cutaneous Eruptions, Tumors, Boils, Carbuncles, Erysipelas, Purulent Ulcers, Nervous and Physical Collapse, etc. If allowed to continue, Rheumatism, Scrofulous Catarrh, Kidney and Liver Diseases, Tubercular Consumption, and various other dangerous or fatal maladies, are produced by it.

SCROFULA

Ayer's Sarsaparilla

Is the only powerful and always reliable blood-purifying medicine. It is so effectual an alterative that it eradicates from the system Hereditary Scrofula, and the kindred poisons of contagious diseases and mercury. At the same time it enriches and vitalizes the blood, restoring healthful action to the vital organs and rejuvenating the entire system. This great

Regenerative Medicine

Is composed of the genuine Honduras Sarsaparilla, with Yellow Dock, Stillingia, the Iodides of Potassium and Iron, and other ingredients of great potency, carefully and scientifically compounded. Its formula is generally known to the medical profession, and the best physicians constantly prescribe AYER'S SARSAPARILLA as an

Absolute Cure

For all diseases caused by the vitiation of the blood. It is concentrated to the highest practicable degree, far beyond any other preparation for which like effects are claimed, and is therefore the cheapest, as well as the best blood purifying medicine, in the world.

Determined to Load.

We understand that the handsome matched team sold at Mr. Edward Ried's sale last week were bought for use on Mr. A. Clegg's superb hearse. They are certainly well adapted, being young, jet black, without a single white spot on either of them, they have been fitted with a set of black harness, rubber trimmings gold lined heavy plated chain martingales, everything so far has been the very best he could obtain. This completes what is without doubt the finest funeral equipage in Canada in every case as for those who have employed Mr. Clegg, have expressed themselves as being well pleased with the attendance and surprised at the very moderate charges.

CHRISTMAS CARDS in great variety; also a large assortment of SCRIPTURE CARDS, in packets at list prices, besides a fine variety of SCRIPTURE TEXT BOOK. Miss Havergal's Books, Scripture Mottoes, etc., at JOHN ERSKINE.

Our New Watchmaker, Mr. Hughan, comes well recommended, and we are sure any work entrusted to him will be done in good style. Office lately occupied by Elias Burnham, Simcoe Steet. 18-tf

New Telephone Offices.

The Bell Telephone Co., has lately opened and connected with its Trunk Line System the following new offices, viz—Acton, Brampton, Brooklin, Georgetown, Goodwood, Liverpool Market, Markham, Meadowvale, Port Perry, Petrolia, Sarnia, Streetsville, Stouffville, Uxbridge, and Wyoming, and Belleville, Strathroy and Watford will be connected next week. Conversations have already been carried on quite successfully between Hamilton and Sarnia over the new lines. 49-1t

Obituary.

It is with deep regret and sympathy that we allude to the sad death of the young wife of Mr. J. F. Holden. The bride of only a year, she was called away on Thursday last, dying at the residence of her mother, Mrs. Miller, Napanee mills. Deceased was a most estimable and amiable young lady, beloved by all who knew her at her home, and during her short residence in Peterborough, she gained a strong hold on the affections of the numerous friends she made here. She was an active and earnest member of the George street Methodist church, in whose circles she will be greatly missed. Her pastor, Rev. I. Tovell, attended the funeral, which took place on Friday last. Mr. Holden has the sincerest sympathy of all in his great bereavement.

Selecting Teachers.

School trustees will be busied the next few weeks in making their selection of teachers. To obviate haphazard and consequently, as a rule, hazardous selections, the matter should be undertaken in time. There is, perhaps, more false economy in the engagement of teachers than in any other business transaction. A good teacher is never too dear, while a poor one is dear at the cheapest price. With a good teacher secured the engagement should be made to last during good behaviour and efficiency. Great confusion, injury, loss of time and failure of progress in pupils result from frequent change of teachers. What progress could be hoped for in a pupil who was sent to a different school every month with different methods of teaching and different rules of discipline. The same effect, however, is produced by frequent change of teachers.

Congratulatory.

We desire to extend to Mr. Robert Fair, of the firm of Fair, VanEvery & Co, our warmest congratulations on the occasion of his marriage to Miss Howden of Cavan. The particulars of the interesting event will be found under our Springville correspondence. Mr. Fair, since his arrival in Peterborough has shown himself a pushing and energetic business man, while his possession of many winning social qualities, has attracted to him a large circle of friends, who, in his marriage recognize with pleasure the fact that his coming to a domestic anchorage in Peterborough, means that himself and fair young bride are to become permanent residents of the town. We repeat our most cordial congratulations and give the newly wedded pair our warmest wishes for a long and happy life.

The Churches.

Rev. Mr. Curtis, of Victoria University, will preach in the George street Methodist church next Sunday morning, and in the Charlotte street church in the evening. Mr. Curtis occupied the pulpit of the Metropolitan church, Toronto, during the absence of the pastor, Rev. Hugh Johnston, in England last summer.

Rev. Mr. McAmmond and Rev. Mr. Manning exchanged pulpits on Sunday evening last.

Rev. Mr. Roberts, formerly of the Bible Christian church here, was in town attending the wedding of his neice, Miss Lockhart, on Wednesday last.

Rev. E. F. Torrance occupied the pulpit of the Baptist church on Sunday evening.

Rev. N. F. Alexander, who has for thirty years been a most successful missionary in British India, addressed the pupils of St. John's and south ward mission school on Sunday afternoon.

Lifting a Shop-Lifter.

On Thursday last the head of one of our business firms developed an unexpected exhibition of mercantile muscle. A man entered the shop, and, while haggling over the purchase of a pair of gloves, managed to secrete in his pocket another pair, though not unseen by another member of the firm. He bought a pair of gloves and tendered a $5 bill in payment, and to say that he was astounded is a mild way of indicating his feeling, when the salesman, in returning his change, remarked, "So much for this pair, and so much for the pair you have in your pocket." The thief strenuously denied the implied accusation, but refused to be searched, and the gentleman of unexpected muscular resources downed the thief on the floor, like a baby, and found the gloves reposing in the pocket alongside a bottle of whiskey. He then raised the rascal to his feet with the gentleness of a steam derrick; and, seizing him by the collar and the ground floor of his pantaloons, handled the man with the gloves without gloves. He hoisted him to the door and gave the shop-lifter a lift into the street that sent him sprawling like an electrified frog.

Missionary Sermons.

The Rev. W. F. Campbell, Mission Agent, will preach on the subject of missions, in St. Luke's church, Ashburnham, on Sunday next at 11 a. m. and 7 p. m. Mr. Campbell is an eloquent speaker, and being thoroughly acquainted with the needs of the church in Canada, very interesting sermons may be expected on this occasion. Seats free. The general public are heartily invited to attend.

Y.M.C.A.

The managers of this Association have made arrangements for a winter course of popular lectures on literary and scientific subjects. The gentlemen to deliver the lectures are: Dr. Fife, Rev. W. C. Bradshaw, Dr. Bell, Rev. Alex. Bell, Rev. T. Manning, B. A., Dr. Pigeon, J. H. Long, L. E. Horning, Dr. Clarke and Barton Earl. The first lecture will be delivered by Dr. Fife, on the subject of "Respiration and Circulation," on December 18th, in the Association Rooms, Postoffice Block. Tickets ten cents each, or, for the course, 50 cents.

Fires.

Early on Friday morning a fire broke out in a frame tenement house on Charlotte street, occupied by Mr. J. Carveth. The fire "took" in the rear part of the building, and before the firemen could bring the water to play on the flames from the George street hydrant, the building was gutted beyond occupation, as the wood was very dry, this house, owned by Mr. Robert Harper, North Monaghan, being perhaps, the oldest house in Peterborough. Mr. Carveth's loss in household effects is about $100. On Friday night a fire was discovered in the front parlor on the third floor of the Grand Central Hotel. Though there was more smoke than fire, yet considerable damage was done, and but for the prompt response of the firemen the building would have been in great danger. It is probable that the occupant of the room had left a lighted cigar on the window-sill, which fell on the sofa under it, and thus started the fire, which smouldered a long time before it began to burn actively. Still, considerable damage was done, which is, however, we are glad to say, fully covered by insurance.

The "Examiner" Book-Bindery.

The attention of the public is directed to the fact that the book-bindery in connection with the Peterborough EXAMINER, is one of the most thoroughly equipped in the Province. The machinery and appliances are all new, and of the most modern and improved character. The bindery is in charge of the most competent hands to be had, whose work for years past has distanced all others when placed on competitive exhibition—always securing first prizes. THE EXAMINER bindery is now prepared to fill all orders for binding, ruling or blank books, in the highest style of the art and at reasonable figures. Every sort of book bound in any desired style, in a manner guaranteed to be in every case satisfactory. We have arranged special facilities for the binding of "Picturesque Canada," in styles corresponding to the beauty of the work—in full or half morocco, full or half calf, half roan, gilt or marbled edges, etc. The copies already bound are pronounced superb, and a fitting setting for this fine work. Having unusual facilities for doing the binding of "Picturesque Canada," we can afford and hereby offer to pay the express charges on the numbers forwarded to our bindery, and on the bound volumes when returned. All work of this kind, such as parts of Shakspere, handsome magazines, art journals, etc., receives special attention; strong flexible binding and artistic finish of the first order, will mark our execution of this class of work. The manufacture of blank books, ledgers, journals, invoices, etc., etc., is another department in which THE EXAMINER bindery excels. Our stock, paper, etc., is purchased at most favorable rates, and considering its excellence, and the thoroughness of the binding, our prices are extremely moderate.

We urge the public of Peterborough and Central Ontario, to give THE EXAMINER book-bindery, Peterborough, a trial, well convinced that satisfaction will be the result. No pay will be exacted of any patron who is honestly dissatisfied with the work turned out. Correspondence and patronage solicited.

Shannon, Robert Beavis, David Anderson, William Anderson.

A Narrow Escape.

On Monday evening the Stewart House had a narrow escape from being burned. About 6.30, the nurse girl, Theresa Judge, went to a large closet or trunk-room in the eastern wing. She sat the coal oil lamp on an oval top trunk; of course, it fell and the top coming off the oil spilt and was at once in a blaze. The girl attempted to put the flames out with her clothing, which, of course, took fire, and she rushed screaming with pain and terror through the long draughty corridars and down the front stairs. Mr. T. Cavanagh being at tea rushed out and met her at the foot of the stairs, and with his hands tore her blazing garments from her person, and, in so doing burnt both hands severely. The girl owing to her wearing heavy clothing, was not burned much. Meanwhile the fire was raging in the closet, filled with trunk boxes, cushions, etc., and it is due to the presence of mind, and promptness of Mrs. Hector McIntyre, who emptied on the fire the contents of the pitchers in the adjacent bedrooms, as well as other help, that the fire was subdued. As it was, the escape was most fortunate. The damage done will amount to about $200.

Visit To Peterborough.

Surgeons from the International Throat and Lung Institute, Toronto, will be at the Caisse House, Peterborough, Friday and Saturday, Dec. 19th and 20th, for the treatment of all diseases of the throat and lungs, the most common of which are Catarrh, Deafness, Asthma, Bronchitis, Weak Lungs and Consumption. The Surgeons are specialists, and devote their whole time to the treatment of the above diseases. Spirometers are used to test the capacity of the Lungs. Respirators and Inhalers to carry antiseptic treatment to diseased parts. They can refer you to reliable people in Peterborough and surrounding country, who have been cured of long-standing diseases. Patients unable to call during the visit can be successfully treated in most instances, by writing for treatise on throat and lung diseases and obtaining list of questions.

Address, 173 Church street, Toronto. Consultation free. 48-2t

Furs.

The high favor with which my furs are regarded by the public is well attested by orders coming in, as to keep me fully busy at them. The repairing of furs has been suspended long ago until after the holidays. I would, in fact, feel more embarrassed were it not for the unusually mild season. The public has found out long ago that to buy of dealers in cheap wholesale made up furs, purposely made up for a sell, won't pay, as the seller, with all his pushing and puffing energies, does not know himself what goods he is offering. The deceiving trade carried on by them of goods under fictitious names, such as Baltic seal, French seal, and many others, as British sable and all sorts of sable, will secure of dupes a better price, but will leave the furs muskrat or rabbit, &c., all the same. Furs, unless bought of a reliable manufacturer, can be more deceiving than jewellry, and hence the reason of so many dabbling in goods, which often do not stand for one season. The advantages are therefore manifold if you have the assurance of the manufacturer, as he will be accountable, but not so with the dealer. Are your furs wanting repairs? Then you know from whom you bought them, and can get the necessary repairs done when brought in the proper season. WM. LECH.

THE MIDDLE STATE.

"Laicus" Reviews "Theodore."

To The Editor of THE EXAMINER.

Attention, it will be remembered, was specially called, and with playful sarcasm, to our original contribution on the middle state, as being "in one respect, at least, a remarkable one—it is long enough." To the point and well taken was this sage observation, inasmuch as the article referred to contained a little less than three columns; yet, consistently enough, the critical review of the same comprises something more than three columns. Further comment is needless. Granting the canonicalness of Machabees, the existence of a middle state necessarily follows, since alms, prayer and sacrifice, whether for the citizens of hell or heaven, are idle and to no purpose. Using Machabees merely as an authentic history—a character positively attaching to it, and which no man of honesty and intelligence doubts—a custom is evidenced among the Jews, the whilom of praying and sacrificing for the faithful departed. Supplementary to what has been already adduced on this head, may be mentioned the explicit testimony of the historian Josephus, (wars of the Jews, C. 91) who assures us that the Hebrews would not pray for those among their brethren who committed suicide—an exception which proves that they were wont to pray for those dying by other kinds of death. Now, assuredly, there must have been a good and sufficient reason for that custom—a reason supplied by Almighty God, who had singled out this people in preference to every other, in order that they might be specially enlightened respecting divine truth, and specially blessed in the application of the doctrines imparted for their proper conduct and guidance.

DEPOSITORIES OF THE DIVINE MYSTERIES,

Four Scriptural quotations and the alleged introduction of pagan corruption, are presented for consideration in this article. At this stage of contention, however, it is advisable to advert particularly to the terms and a general council. Concerning the term first mentioned, the paragraph in full from the creed of Pope Pius, runs thus, and is substantially as laid down by Irenæus in the second century: "I also admit the holy Scriptures according to the sense which our holy mother the church has held, and does hold, to whom it belongs to judge of the true sense and interpretation of the Scriptures; neither will I take and interpret them otherwise than according to the unanimous consent of the fathers." Here it may be seen what is required from one about to connect himself with the church Catholic. In the absence of such precaution the church would surely and speedily be divided into a thousand and one sects, each contradicting the other, and each claiming to possess the truth entire and as it is in itself. Reference, then, is becomingly had, in the first instance, to the supreme authority of the church—the "judge of the true sense and interpretation of the Scriptures." Allusion is made, secondly, to the "unanimous consent of the fathers," either as regards matters definitely settled, or questions wherein the fathers and the church are in unanimous accord. Power of infallible guidance and protection is promised, not to the fathers, whether individually or collectively, but to speaking ex cathedra through its visible head on earth. On many points of doctrine, however, such as the power of binding and loosing, the oblation of the mass, the doctrine of a middle state, etc., that unanimous consent obtains. Questions which the church has decided once, and for all time a Catholic is obligated to accept without hesitation or reservation. Otherwise his liberty of judging is unrestricted. He may opine, for instance, that the pain endured in a middle state is neither more nor less than mental anguish, and the product of any causes which may appear suitable or reasonable. And, be it observed that the unanimity in question is moral, not absolute. Moreover, unanimous consent of the fathers is not required for the interpretation of each several verse of Scripture - a thing at once absurd and impossible. A general council, which is at once ecumenical, in legislating upon questions touching faith and morals, has,—its acts being subsequently sanctioned by the executive head of the church—supreme authority which may not be resisted or gainsaid by any true Catholic. All else is to be condemned, etc., which operates as a virtual denial or contradiction of the authoritative adjudications of the foregoing council. And, were it otherwise, all unity, all certainty of truth and doctrine

THE UNIVERSAL CHURCH,

WOULD QUICKLY DISAPPEAR.

It does not follow, however, that the proceedings of a lesser council are to be condemned which are not a negation of established doctrine. On the contrary, the acts of a local or national council have force within a circumscribed territory, and serve, moreover, to manifest prevailing sentiment respecting various articles of religion which have not received final ratification. "All else," etc., stands, meanwhile, for what it may be worth until such time as it may be condemned or sanctioned as a negation or affirmation of the deposit of Christian truths.

Proceeding now with the argument, we will pass in review the texts dealing with payment of the utmost farthing, blasphemy against the Holy Ghost, trial by fire, and preaching to the spirits in prison.

And, first, let us premise that a Catholic has the church for his interpreter, whilst a Protestant, relying upon private judgment, may give to a text of Scripture any rendering agreeable to his fancy or purpose. An Episcopal may quote Scripture in behalf of a middle state; a Presbyterian the like for a denial of the same abode. Variation and instability resulting from the very principle of private judgment, makes it difficult to obtain a fair and candid polemic argument with a Protestant, since he may disagree with contemporary specialists, and prefer his own say so or think so to all else. But time and space urge expedition.

Payment of the utmost farthing is taken to mean satisfaction for God's justice in a middle state. In this life by repentance and good works, temporary punishment may be alleviated or canceled. But when the debt is carried over to the middle state, the unhappy sinner being unable to help himself, must suffer during the allotted period. Reparation being thus made for injury done, the sinner is released and attains eternal happiness. Augustine—aptly termed "most honorable"—Jerome (?) Bede and another, are quoted in opposition to this explanation of the text. But these, one and all, believed in a middle state; no want of unanimity in that regard. Listen to St. Augustine: "It (the middle state) will be more grievous than whatever a man can suffer in this life." And Augustine is, indeed, "most honorable." Moreover, Origen, Cyprian, Hieronymus, (who is Jerome himself) and a variety of later commentators hold that the middle state is intended for payment of the last farthing. Next, as to blasphemy against the Holy Ghost. Matthew, we are well aware, enters at greater length into details than either Luke or Mark. Each gospel is supplementary to the other, the four going to form a united whole. One relates a fact or circumstance that a second mentions not at all; yet may it not be inferred that they militate the one against the other, since

INSPIRATION IS NOT SELF-DESTRUCTIVE.

An insinuation to that effect is unworthy of any person styling himself Christian. Regarding the term forgiveness in the world to come, it may properly be observed that sin in its very nature is an infinite insult to one's Creator. Seemingly trivial was the offence of our first parents, but terrible the consequence. The punishment which one may be called upon to endure, as the issue of sin, is by no means an actual and complete satisfaction to God for transgression. Hence, it may not truthfully be said that, when the sinner is liberated from the intermediate state, this is by reason of having rendered such an atonement as is strictly and justly due to the enormity of sin; from which it is clear that what may be lacking, in that respect, is really forgiven by God when the sinner is at length set free. But it is said that the blasphemy in question will never be forgiven. At an early day when the faith was, confessedly, pure and newly received, comparatively speaking, from the apostles, Tertullian was branded as a heretic for teaching such a doctrine. This pronouncement against blasphemy of the Holy Ghost is interpreted as not of absolute impossibility, but of extreme difficulty. The Jews, to whom the words of the text were addressed,

CREDITED A MIDDLE STATE;

hence the significance of the phrase "world to come." Augustine, Jerome et alii are cited as claiming that this grievous sin may never be remitted. Augustine (De Civ. lib. xxi., C. 13) teaches the exact opposite, and gathers from the words of the text an argument in behalf of an intermediate state. And the like of St. Gregory and an abundance of other sacred writers. When, therefore, Augustine—"the most honorable among them"—is made to testify in opposition to what he taught, does it not occasion a suspicion that other fathers may be likewise treated? "But let it go." Again give heed to the "most honorable" Augustine in expounding I. Cor., iii., 11-15: "Cleanse me so, O Lord," he says, "that I may not stand in need of that purifying fire, designed for those who shall be saved, yet so as by fire. And why, but because (as the apostle says) they have built upon the foundation, wood, hay and stubble. If they had built gold and silver, and precious stones, they would be not only from that fire in which the wicked shall be punished forever, but likewise from that fire which will purify those who shall be saved by fire." Similarly reason Origen, Basil and Ambrose on these verses of the great apostle. Coming now to the disputed meaning of St. Peter (I. epistle, 3-19) will we be told that Christ preached to those spirits in prison—the place of which it is said in the apostle's creed, "He descended into hell"—when they were already in hell? Did Christ then descend into the hell of the damned? Had not St. Peter in mind those souls who died before the crucifixion of Christ and who, being uncondemned, remained in a middle state awaiting redemption? Certainly Christ did preach "to the spirits in prison." And is not the object of preaching reformation and improvement and encouragement? Did Christ therefore lose the fruit of his mission?

SECURED FROM BOTH FIRES;

THE CATHOLIC CHURCH THINKS NOT.

Moreover, we find it expressly stated that "The limbus of the Jews was left empty when the Messiah came." Here we have an explicit admission that limbus, a middle state, did obtain up to the time of Christ. And is there a solitary particle of evidence going to prove that this middle state does not still exist? Has it any time been abolished? And, if so, when, in what manner, or by whom was this affected? Is it, then, an idle vacuum, so to speak, and serving no purpose whatever? Would such a condition of things be characteristic of the Creator? Previous to the descent of Christ into limbus, was not that abode certainly inhabited? Will we now be gravely informed that "our Lord did soundly rebuke them"—the Jews—for obedience in a then actual reality? Dr. Jeremy Taylor (a Protestant) states that our Lord "spoke no word against this public practice, (italics our own) but left it as he found it," Has not subsequent practice of Jew and Christian justified Dr. Taylor's statement? Tertullian, who lived in the age next to that of the apostles, says: "Among apostolical traditions received from our fathers (italics our own) we have oblations for the dead on the anniversary day." Here we perceive a custom of praying for the dead, handed down by the apostles themselves. Any evidence in this that the middle state was left unoccupied? St. Cyprian, who lived in the following age, observes that it is "one thing to suffer lengthened torments for sin, and to be chastised and purified for a long time in that fire; another to have cleansed away all sin by suffering." A little later St. Chrysostom says that the practice of praying for the dead

WAS DECREED BY THE APOSTLES.

Both the third and fourth Councils of Carthage ordained that a certain class of deceased penitents "should be remembered in the prayers and sufferings of the faithful." Excavations of the Roman catacombs—the sepulcher of countless early Christians—indicate a like belief. Following is a sample inscription: "To Lucifera, the sweetest wife," etc. "Let each one of the brethren who shall read the inscription beseech God that the holy and innocent soul may be taken to God." Were all these, then, Tertullian, Cyprian, Chrysostom, the fathers of two early councils, the martyrs of the catacombs, superstitious, deluded and corrupted that they still held to the ancient doctrine of a middle state? Assuredly, in that event, did the apostles execute their sublime mission in a very disgraceful manner: since that may mean the nearer the source of divine revelation, the greater the distance from a correct knowledge of Christian principles. Again, the Protestant Bingham, in his "Antiquities of the Christian Church," acknowledges that the custom of praying and sacrificing for the faithful departed, "most evidently appears to have prevailed in the church, even from the very times of the apostles." French Protestant ministers affirmed, in 1730, that if the early fathers were now again to return to the earth "it would be in the Church of Rome alone that they would find that society of which once they had been members." They would find, too, the good old doctrine of a middle state, not abolished, but continued in its pristine truth and purity. But still the theory of a middle state must be attributed to pagan corruption. Much assertion and no proof has been advanced to support this groundless charge. Now for something to the point against this truly pagan allegation. In his "Exhortation to the Greeks," St. Justin Martyr clearly demonstrates that the few correct ideas possessed by the Greeks, concerning divine subjects, were borrowed from Jewish writings. St. Clement, of Alexandria (A.D. 194), in his "Miscellany," ably exposes the same practice on the part of this people. And through this chosen people of God did both Greek and Roman come to the knowledge—such as it was—of the

DIVINELY REVEALED DOCTRINE

of a middle state. Perfectly natural it was that the children of darkness should derive the very best of their religious ideas from the children of light. Whence the use of an enlightenment that does not enlighten? And was not the light to be sought where only it existed in its, then, fullness? It were well to have a care that this business of "huge imposture" does not carry the signs and marks which evidence a fitting ownership on the part of recent author. Wisdom and understanding neither had their origin in him, nor will they necessarily and infallibly perish with him.

Heretofore it has been adverted to that nothing defiled, as St. John informs us, can enter heaven. Yet many a soul is called, instantly and without words of warning, to the seat of judgment. Will a slight stain of sin damn such a one for all eternity? And can a soul defiled go direct to heaven? Let the reader judge for himself; if the existence of a middle state be not reasonable and necessary.

In a word, a middle state is evidenced by Machabees, by Josephus, by the present practice of the Jews, by the New Testament, by the excavations in the Roman catacombs, by the fathers, one and all, by church councils, by the Greek Church, by the Mahometans, borrowing the idea from the Christians, by a variety of non-Christian peoples holding the doctrine in a modified form, by confessions of Luther and Melancthon, by a respectable body of modern Protestants, by reason and common-sense, and last, but not least, by every individual member of the Roman Catholic Church.

THE MIDDLE STATE.

"Theodore" Reviews "Laicus."

To the Editor of THE EXAMINER:

SIR,—My last letter closed with the Christian Church two hundred years on her way and free, as Christ and His apostles left her, from the corruption of praying for the dead or a belief in purgatory.

Tertullian, full of the dreams of heresy, had just given utterance to the first word recorded in Christian literature concerning praying for the dead, and I resume the subject at that point.

Within the next two hundred years the notion spread, and the heretical practice of praying for both those in heaven and those in hell became common in the church.

During the same period it was felt that, the

WORK EFFECTUALLY TO RESIST HERESY,

there should be more uniformity in the practice and worship of the church. And to secure this, among other means adopted, Liturgies were framed and brought into use. Some of the Liturgies of that and the following age, and bearing the names of St. Basil, St. Cyril, Chrysotom, Gregory, &c., were collected by Renaudot, a Frenchman, and published in Paris in 1716. Those Liturgies contain forms of prayer for the dead—for "patriarchs, prophets, apostles, martyrs and even for the holy, glorious, god-bearing virgin—lady Mary—the mother of God." For centuries they were in use, and we can easily gather from them what the minds of the church was in reference to the question at issue. Can any one believe for a moment that those who composed those prayers, and those who uttered them from time to time, believed that those on whose behalf they were offered were

IN A STATE OF PUNISHMENT

—in other words, in purgatory? But if Roman contention is right, namely, that prayers offered for the souls of the dead imply that those souls are in purgatory—then patriarchs, prophets, apostles, martyrs, and even the blessed Virgin Mary, whom Rome has declared immaculate, and who, of all others, ought to have been spared the terrible degradation of going to purgatory, must have been in it for hundreds of years, and Rome, notwithstanding her boasted charity, is justly chargeable with the basest ingratitude, and the greatest cruelty, for thus leaving the very best of her saints, and above all, her virgin patroness and the queen of heaven, to such sorry quarters so long neglected and in suffering.

Judged by the Liturgies of the time, then, the prayers of the ancient Christians, offered for the dead, had no reference to souls in purgatory, but to souls in heaven. And the fact that Augustine prayed for Monica, or Ambrose for Theodosius, tells us no more, for both believed while they prayed that the souls of those for whom they prayed were with God in heaven.

But while those Christians prayed for souls believed to be in heaven, —if we can credit Augustine, Chrysotom and others, they also prayed for those believed to be in hell, —not in the hope of securing their deliverance, for that they believed could not be done, —but that, as their prayers might enhance the happiness of the blessed, so they might somewhat alleviate the suffering of the wicked. Thus, prayers were offered for all the dead- for saints blessed in heaven, and for the wicked suffering in woe. There was no middle class known or those kind hearts would have given them attention. Only two receptacles for souls had existence in the faith of the church -heaven and hell—and only in reference to souls in them were prayers offered. Purgatory was not yet opened. But if the reasoning of Rome is valid, then, in the faith of those early Christians there was neither a heaven nor a hell, for they prayed for both the righteous and the wicked, and all for whom they prayed must have been in purgatory.

IN MISTAKEN CHARITY,

Is "Laicus" prepared to receive this? Yet it is the legitimate and he can take his choice. He must either accept it or repudiate it. If he accept it, then, the faith of the early church—the faith of his own church and the records of the first four centuries are all against him, and he is in for penance. If he doesn't accept it, then it is true that the fact of prayer offered for the souls of the dead does not imply the existence of a purgatory.

Augustine in his own case confirms this. He believed in and practised prayer for the dead, and yet repudiated all belief in a purgatory. He rejects the idea as unscriptural, and tells us that, man "will appear in the last day of the world as he was in the last day of his life, and will be judged in the same state in which he had died."

Augustine could pray for the dead, but he did not know how to pray for them in connection with purgatory. And Dr. Pusey agreed with him when he said, "Since Rome has blended the with the primitive custom of praying for the dead, it is not in communion with her that any can seek comfort from that rite."

And Jeremy Taylor, too, whom "Laicus" has run out seemingly in his favor, is of the same opinion—he says that, "The spirits of those dying in Christ are after death blessed and happy souls. * * * This is the doctrine of the Greek Church unto this day, and was the opinion of the greatest part of the ancient church, both Latin and Greek; and by degrees was, in the west, eaten out by the doctrine of purgatory and the invocation of saints; and rejected a little above two hundred years ago in the Council of Florence."

Other testimonies from the fathers and from later times might easily be added to show that, for the first four hundred years there is nothing in the faith and experience of the church, and nothing in the fact of prayer for the dead, that will bear the weight of a Romish purgatory; but we forbear, and meanwhile leave Laicus to the task of bridging over those four centuries that he may, if he can, get the recognition of Christ and His apostles for his illicit refinery, and thus earn for himself the eternal gratitude of his beloved Rome. Whether from ignorance or design "Laicus" talks of the "limbus" of the Jews, the purgatory of Origen and his own Romish furnace as if they were all one and the same, only bearing different names. In this way he manages to make some of his readers believe that his palace of purification existed from the earliest Christian times, and is, therefore, part of the legitimate machinery of the Christian church.

NOTHING IN CHRISTIAN LITERATURE,

But so far is this from being the case that it was not till

THE TIME OF GREGORY THE GREAT,

in the end of the sixth century, that the Romish intermediate cabinet was opened, and not till up in the tenth did any one discover that exit from the place could be gained by pay.

The limbus of the Jews was in the time of Christ nothing essentially different from the representation given in the parable of the rich man and Lazarus, as recorded Luke xvi., and which has no resemblance to the Romish purgatory, and from which Rome evidently got no pattern. The purgatory of Origen was not to be opened till after the general resurrection, when the conflagration that was to follow would purge all men, good and bad. Even Satan himself would be sufficiently refined, so that there would be no devil and no hell left for any one, but one grand, glorious, universal heaven for all. It is this purgatory—the wild fancy of a hot-headed Greek—which got few adherents at best, and the notion of which soon died out—that is thought of by the Christian fathers of the third and fourth centuries, when such a place is spoken of at all.

ROME FINDS NO PATTERN HERE, yet she persists in mixing up her own with this that she may gain by the confusion, and give her own contrivance an appearance of age to which it is not entitled.

In the "limbus" of the Jews there was no purification for any one—only two classes there—the good in happiness and the bad in hell. With Origen, all men—good and bad—would, after the resurrection, be purged together in the same fire, and rise to heaven together to enjoy the same blessed eternity. But Rome's refining process goes on between death and the resurrection—is for a middling class of souls only, who, when sufficiently purged by the tremendous fire of the place, or helped by the well-paid-for-masses and prayers of priests on earth, will rise at last to heaven.

From all this it is clear that the Romish purgatory has no natural descent from, and no legitimate connection with, either the limbus of the Jews or the purgatory of Origen. Its essential feature is the while the body lies in the grave, and that again resting on the unscriptural distinction between "venial" and "mortal" sin.

Augustine was the first Christian father that hinted at such a thing. And when he did give expression to the conjecture he was candid enough to add that, "it was without proof and unsupported by any canonical authority." Thus the very first word in Christian literature to which Rome can trace her purgatory is declared by its author to be unscriptural. Born in sin, and taking its place in the church unbidden by God, what can we expect for it but the common end of all corruption.

Like a seed of evil, the doubtful word once spoken, the idea fell into the superstitious thought of the time and was gradually moulded into shape, tossed up and down for one hundred and sixty years or more, seeking a resting place, till about the beginning of the seventh century, Gregory took it under his protection, gave it a pagan dress, and by his own authority tacked it on to the faith of the church.

PETERBOROUGH, DEC. 11, 1884.

Tabernacle Sermons.

Discourse by Rev. T. DeWitt Talmage.

A DISCOURSE ON TOLERATION.

Before the sermon Dr. Talmage expounded the story of David and Jonathan. The subject of his discourse was Religious Intolerance, and the text was Judges xii., 6:—"Then said they unto him, 'Say, now, Shibboleth;' and he said Sibboleth, for he could not frame to pronounce it right. Then they took him and slew him at the passages of Jordan." Following is the sermon;—

Do you notice the difference in these pronunciations: Shibboleth and sibboleth? Very slight and unimportant difference, you say, but the difference of pronunciation was the difference between the life and death of many people. Two of the Lord's tribes, Gilead and Ephraim, got into a fight. The Ephraimites were worsted and in their retreat came to the fords of the Jordan to cross. Orders were given to destroy all the Ephraimites who attempted to cross, but how should it be known who were Ephraimites? They were detected by their pronunciation. Shibboleth was the word for "river." It seemed that the Ephraimites had a peculiar brogue, and that in pronouncing the word shibboleth they always left out the sound of the "h." As the troops on retreat came to the Jordan they were asked to pronounce the word Shibboleth, and if they said "Sibboleth" they were known immediately as Ephraimites and were destroyed. "Then said they unto him, 'say now, shibboleth,' and he said 'sibboleth,' for he could not frame to pronounce it right. Then they took him and slew him at the passages of Jordan."

What a small difference between these tribes of Gilead and Ephraim! And what intolerance with that small difference! But the difference between the tribes of the Lord in our time, that is between one denomination and another, is often of no more importance. The church of God is all divided up into a multitude of denominations and sects. Time would fail me to speak of the Calvinists and the Sabbatarians and the Armenians and the Swedenborgians and the Baxterians and the Dunkers and the Shakers and Parkerites, and the Methodists and the Baptists and Lutherans and Presbyterians and Spiritualists, and scores of other denominations of religionists. Some of these denominations were established by very good men, some by very egotistical men, some by very bad men. Between some of them there is only a difference in words; between others a difference as wide as between truth and error, between light and darkness, between heaven and hell. Some of these beliefs I could in no wise adopt, and yet so long as I demand liberty of conscience for myself, I must allow liberty of conscience to every other man; for I must remember that he does not differ more from me than I differ from him.

I shall this morning advocate the largest liberty in all religious belief and discussion. In art, in social life, in politics, in religion, let there be no moving of the "previous question," no intolerance, no thumbscrew, no gag law, no persecution. You all know that the air and the water are kept pure by constant circulation, and I believe there is a tendency in religious discussion to purification and moral health. Between the 4th century and the 16th century the church of God proposed to keep out error by prohibiting all religious discussion and by a strong censorship of the press and rack and gibbet, and hot lead poured down the throat to make people orthodox; but the world found out that you cannot change men's beliefs by twisting off their heads, or make them see things differently by putting an awl through their eyes. There is something in every man's conscience to upheave the mountain that you would throw upon it, and unsinged of the fire out of the flame to make red wings on which the martyr shall mount to glory.

In that very time of which I speak, between the 4th and 16th centurys, men went from the churches of God into the most appalling iniquity, and right by the altars of Christ flowed a tide of drunkenness and licentiousness that the world has never seen equalled, and the very sewers of perdition broke loose and deluged the church with filth of the human mind. There came a good many bad books, but right after them there came a great many healthful books, so that where there was one man to denounce the Christian religion there were twenty men to advocate it. So my friends I have no nervousness in regard to this great war going on between truth and error. Let error run if you only let truth run along with it. Urged on by skeptic's shout and transcendentalist's spur, let it run. God's angels of wrath are in hot pursuit and quicker than eagle's beak clutcheth out a hawk's heart God's vengeance shall tear it to pieces. Let error run if you only let truth run along with it.

In this great conflict between the right and the wrong the right will triumph just as certainly as that God is stronger than the devil. Let us have no fear, then, that the error of the world is going to overcome the truth of the church. God is ruling in the world and all shall be well. I am very glad that people do not all think alike in matters of religion. What a stupid world this would be if all people were alike. I will never see through your eyes, You will never hear through my ears. No man can lord it over our conscience.

I propose this morning to speak to you of sectarianism; its origin, its evils and its cures. There are those who would make us think that this monster with horns and hoofs is religion. I shall chase it to its hiding place and drag it out of the caverns of darkness and rip off its hide. But I want to make a distinction between bigotry and the lawful fondness for peculiar religious beliefs and forms of worship. I have no admiration for a nothingarian. In a world of such tremendous vicissitude and temptation, and with a soul that must after a while stand before a throne of insufferable brightness in a day when the rocking of the mountains and the flaming of the heavens and the upheaval of the sea shall be among the least of the excitements, to give account for every thought, word, action, preference and dislike—that man is mad who has no religious preference. But our early education, our physical temperament, our mental constitution, will very much decide our form of worship. A style of psalmody that may please me may displease you.

Some would like to have a minister in gown and bands and surplice, and others prefer to have a minister in plain citizen's apparel. Some are most impressed when a little child is presented at the altar and sprinkled of the waters of a holy benediction in the name of the Father and of the Son and of the Holy Ghost, and others are more impressed when the penitent comes up out of the river, his garments dripping with the waters of a baptism which signifies the washing away of sin. Either is right in my estimation, so either have his own way. One man likes no noise in prayer, not a word, not a whisper. Another man, just as good, prefers by gesticulation and exclamation to express his devotional aspirations. One is just as good as the other. "Every man is fully persuaded in his own mind." Now, in our neighborhood, on Oxford street, we have quiet. Every neighbor prefers his own to any other home, and yet he is in peace with all the neighborhood. I have no idea that I will promote the prosperity of my household by upsetting somebody else's home, nor has my neighbor any idea that he will benefit his home by injuring my home. Each one preferring his own home the better, yet a kind and good neighborhood. Now, so it ought to be in the Kingdom of Christ. Preferences for religious homes, but a large-hearted and Christian neighborhood. "Peace on earth, good will to men." George Whitfield was going over a Quaker rather roughly for some of his religious sentiments, and the Quaker said: "George, I am as thou art, I am for bringing all men to the hope of the Gospel; therefore if thou will not quarrel with me about my broad brim, I will not quarrel with thee about thy black gown. George, give me thy hand.

In tracing out the origin of sectarianism, or bigotry, I find that a great deal of it comes from wrong education in the home circle. There are parents who do not think it wrong to caricature and jeer the peculiar forms of religion in the world, and denounce other sects and other denominations. It is very often the case that that kind of education acts just opposite to what was expected, and the children grow up, and after a while go and see for themselves, and looking in those churches and finding that the people are good there, and they love God and keep His commandments, by natural reaction they go and join those very churches. I could mention the names of prominent ministers of the Gospel who spent their whole life bombarding other denominations, and who lived to see their children preach the Gospel in those very denominations. But it is very often the case that bigotry starts in a household, and that the subject of it never recovers. There are tens of thousands of bigots ten years old.

Bigotry is often the child of ignorance. You seldom find a man with large intellect who is a bigot. It is the man who thinks he knows a great deal but does not. That man is almost always a bigot. The whole tendency of education and civilization is to bring a man out of that kind of state of mind and heart. There was in the far East a great obelisk, and one side of the obelisk was white, another side of the obelisk was green, another side of the obelisk was blue. And travellers went and looked at the obelisk but they did not walk around it. One man looked at one side, another at another side, and they came home, each one having looked at only one side. And they happened to meet, the story says, they got into a rank quarrel about the color of that obelisk. One man said it was white, another man said it was green, another man said it was blue, and when they were in the very heat of the controversy a more intelligent traveller came and said: "Gentlemen, I have seen that obelisk and you are all right and you are all wrong. Why didn't you walk all round the obelisk?" Look out for the man who sees only one side of a religious truth. Look out for the man who never walks round about these great theories of God and eternity and the dead. He will be a bigot inevitably—the man who only sees one side. There is no man more to be pitied than he who has just one idea in his head; no more, no less. Better vacuity overthrowing the philosophical theory that an entire vacuum is an impossibility, than just one idea wandering around about in perpetual loneliness and bachelorhood, wading through the desert of the man's intellect. Better no idea at all than only one idea. Run up your schools and your colleges and your universities. More light, less sectarianism. There is nothing that will so soon kill bigotry as sunshine—God's sunshine.

Now having shown you the religion of bigotry, just look abroad in the church and see the damage bigotry has done. It cripples investigation. The different denominations of christians were intended by holy rivalry and honest competition to keep each other wide awake. Suppose one denomination of christians should garble the word of God, all the other denominations would fly out in righteous indignation. It was so intended to be. While each denomination of christians is to present all the truth of the Bible, it seems to me that God has given to each denomination an especial mission to give particular emphasis to some one doctrine; and so the calvinistic church must present the sovereignty of God, and the Armenian Churches must present man's free agency, and the Episcopal Churches must present the importance of order and solemn ceremony, and the Baptist Churches must present the necessity of ordinances, and the Congregational Church must present the responsibility of the individual member, and the Methodist Church must show what holy enthusiasm and hearty congregational singing can accomplish. While each denomination of Christians must set forth all the doctrines of the Bible, I feel it is especially incumbent upon each denomination to put particular emphasis on some one doctrine. But you see that a man is a bigot, who shuts his eyes to all the lessons he might learn from other denominations. You are wrong and I am right, and that ends it. No taste for exploration, for investigation. No disposition to reason the matter over. And from the realm of God's glorious truth, over which an archangel might fly from eternity to eternity and never reach the limit, the man shuts himself out—a blind mole under a corn stack.

Another great damage done by the sectarianism and bigotry of the church, is that it disgusts people with the Christian religion. Now, my friends, the Church of God was never intended for a war barrack. People are afraid of riot. You go down the street and you see an excitement and missiles flying through the air and you hear the shock of firearms. Do you, the peaceful and industrious citizens, go through that street? "Oh, no," you say; "I'll go round the block." Now, men, come and look upon this narrow path to Heaven and sometimes see the ecclesiastical brick-bats flying every where, and they say: "Well, I guess I'll take the broad road, for there is so much sharp shooting on the narrow road; I guess I'll take the broad road; I have more admiration for a Spanish bull fight; I think it more useful and honorable than the contest of carnivorous ecclesiastics Francis I so hated the Lutherans that he said if he thought there was one drop of Lutheran blood in his veins he would puncture them and let that drop out. Just as long as there is so much hostility between denomination and denomination or between one professed Christian and another, or between one church and another, just so long will men be disgusted with the Christian religion and say: No, if that is religion I want none of it.

Depend upon it intolerance never put down any denomination. What did it do against the Methodist church? That church was persecuted and nearly all the pulpits of Great Britain closed against her ministers. The very name of the church was given in derision. There are in the Astor library, New York, I am told, 707 books and pamphlets against Methodism, kept there merely as a curiosity. Did intolerance destroy the Methodist church? She stands either first or second, I know not which, now in numbers in all the earth, while she has her men not only in places of religious trust, but of secular trust. Intolerance against the Methodist church has lifted it up. What is the use of trying then that spirit of intolerance. Let us have division of work. Let us attend to Christian work and let Satan do all the work of intolerance. He is lively and he is active and he is industrious, and he understands ecclesiastical law. He will attend to that.

What did intolerance accomplish against the Baptist church? If laughing scorn, if tirade and denunciation could have destroyed that church it would not have a disciple to-day. Rev. Leonard Bernkop, a Baptist minister, burned at Salisbury because he was a Baptist, in his dying moments saying: "I am roasted enough on that side, turn me over now, the fire don't hurt compared with the eternal glory." Rev. Mr. James, a Baptist, because he was a Baptist, drawn on a hurdle from Newgate to Tyburn. His dead body lifted on the city gates. His head lifted on a pole and set up in front of the place where he used to preach. Rev. Obadiah Holmes, a Baptist minister, and because he was a Baptist, publicly whipped, and two men coming up and shaking hands with him, they got whipped, and the surgeon who dressed his wounds pursued as a criminal. One hundred Baptists were put to death in Flanders and Holland because they were Baptists. Even Richard Baxter lost his balance on the subject and he said that the Baptists were as bad as murderers because they put people under water and they caught their death of cold. He wrote these words: "The ordinary practice of baptising over head and in cold water, as necessary, is a plain breach of the 6th commandment. Therefore it is not an ordinance of God but a heinous sin; and, as Mr. Craddock shows in his book of Gospel liberty, the magistrate ought to restrain it to save the lives of his subjects. In a word, it is good for nothing but to despatch men out of the world that are burdensome and to ranken churchyards. I conclude, if murder be a sin, then dipping ordinarily overhead in England is a sin; and if those who make it men's religion to murder themselves, and urge it upon their conscience as their duty, are not to be suffered in a commonwealth any more than highway murderers, then judge how these Anabaptists that teach the necessity of such dipping are to be suffered." In New England the Baptists were persecuted. They were driven out of Boston, and when a petition was sent up asking leniency in their behalf, the men who signed the petition were fined; and it is a matter of church history that after a man has been baptised by immersion, weeks having gone by, and his death occurring, the officiating clergyman was thrown into prison and indicted for murder. How near did intolerance destroy the Baptist church? Well, the last statistics I saw of that church was they had 20,000 churches and about two million communicants.

But now, my friends, having shown you the origin of bigotry or sectarianism, and having shown you the damage it does, I want briefly to show you how we are to war against this terrible evil, and I think we ought to begin our war by realizing our own weakness and our imperfections. If we make so many mistakes in the common affairs of life, is it not possible that we may make mistakes in regard to our religious affairs? Shall we take a man by the throat or by the collar because he cannot see religious truths just as I do? In the light of eternity it will be found out, I think there was something wrong in all our creeds, and something right in all our creeds. But since we may make mistakes in regard to things of the world, do not let us be so egotistic and so puffed up as to have an idea that we cannot make any mistake in regard to religious theories. And then I think we shall do a great deal to overthrow the sectarianism from our hearts, and the sectarianism from the world by chiefly enlarging on those in which we agree rather than those on which things we differ. Now, here is a great Gospel platform. A man comes up on this side of the platform and says: "I don't believe in the perseverance of the Saints." Shall I shove him off? No. I will say: "Do you believe in the Lord Jesus as your Saviour, do you trust in Him for time and for eternity?" He says "Yes." I say: "Come on, brother; one in time and one in eternity; brother now, brother forever." Blessed be God for a Gospel platform so large that all who receive Christ may stand on it.

I think we may overthrow the severe sectarianism and bigotry in our hearts and in our church also by realizing that all the denominations of Christians have yielded noble institutions and noble men. There is nothing that so stirs my soul as this thought. One denomination yielded a Robert Hall and an Adoniram Judson; another yielded a Latimer and a Melville; another yielded John Wesley and the blessed Summerfield, while our denomination yielded John Knox and the Alexanders, men of whom the world was not worthy. Now, I say if we are honest and fair-minded men, when we come up in the presence of such churches and such denominations, although they may be different from our own we ought to love and honor them. The churches which can produce such men and such large-hearted charity and such magnificent martyrdom ought to win our affection—at any rate our respect. So come on ye 95,000 Episcopalians in this country, and ye 400,000 Presbyterians and ye 900,000 Baptists and ye 2,000,000 Methodists—come on; shoulder to shoulder we will march for the world's conquest; for all nations are to be saved, and God demands that you and I help to do it. Forward, the whole line!

Perhaps I might more forcibly illustrate this truth by calling your attention to an incident which took place a few years ago. One Monday morning at about 2 o'clock, while her 900 passengers were sound asleep in her berths, dreaming of home, the steamer Atlantic crashed into Mars' Head. Five hundred souls in ten minutes landed in eternity! Oh what a scene! Agonized men and women running up the gangways, and clutching for the rigging and the plunge of the helpless steamer, and the clapping of the hands of the merciless sea over the drowning and the dead, threw two continents into terror. But see this brave quartermaster pushing out with the life line until he gets to the rock; and see these fishermen gathering up the shipwrecked and taking them into the cabins and wrapping them in the flannels snug and warm, and see that minister of the Gospel with three other men getting into a life-boat and pushing out for the wreck, pulling away until they saved one more man, and then getting back with him to the shores, can those men ever forget that night, and can they ever forget their companionship in peril, companionship in struggle, companionship in awful catastrophe and rescue? Never! Never! In whatever part of the earth they meet they will be friends when they mention the story of that awful night when the Atlantic struck Mars' Head. Well, my friends, our world has gone into a worse shipwreck. Sin drove it on the rocks. The old ship has lurched and tossed in the tempests of 6,000 years. Out with the life line! I do not care what denomination carries it. Out with the life-boat! I do not care what denomination rows it. Side by side, in the memory of common hardships and common trials and common prayers and common tears, let us be brothers forever. We must be. We must be. God hasten the time when all denominations of Christians shall join hands around the cross of Christ and recite the creed: "I believe in God, the Father Almighty, Maker of Heaven and earth, and in Jesus Christ and in the communion of Saints and in the life everlasting.

"One army of the living God,
To whose command we bow;
Part of the host have crossed the flood,
And part are coming now."

A Homely Girl

was met by us a few weeks ago. Her complexion was as rough as the skin of a rhinoceros, and as mottled as sausage-meat, her eyes dull and heavy and her lips every color but red. Recently we saw the same young lady, but how different! Her complexion is as clear and delicate as porcelain, her lips twin cherries, her eyes bright as dew-drops. Yet all this difference lies in a rectified condition of the blood, to accomplish which she used Dr. Pierce's "Golden Medical Discovery."

Rest and Comfort to the Suffering.

"BROWN'S HOUSEHOLD PANACEA" has no equal for relieving pain, both internal and external. It cures Pain in the Side, Back or Bowels, Sore Throat, Rheumatism, Toothache, Lumbago and any kind of a Pain or Ache. "It will most surely quicken the Blood and Heal, as its acting power is wonderful." "Brown's Household Panacea," being acknowledged as the great Pain Reliever, and of double the strength of any other Elixir or Liniment in the world, should be in every family handy for use when wanted. "as it really is the best remedy in the world for Cramps in the Stomach, and Pains and Aches of all kinds," and is for sale by all Druggists at 25 cents a bottle.

THE REASON WHY!

—OUR—

Shoe Store is Always Crowded

With Customers is very apparent to those that have visited it and seen our Immense Stock and compared our prices with those asked elsewhere for the same goods. Never have we had such Bargains in Boots and Shoes as now. Never have we sold as many goods as now, and the more goods we sell the

GREATER BARGAINS

we have, as we are able to buy in larger quantities and at corresponding low prices. We retail as many Boots and Shoes as most jobbers sell at wholesale, consequently manufacturers make no difference in price to us than the wholesale trade, while smaller dealers are obliged to pay which is about the same as our regular retail price for the same quality of goods. It must be very evident then to any thinking person that there must be a good reason for our immense Shoe Business, and that our low prices, complete stock, and attention shown to our customers can be the only attraction powerful enough to draw such crowds to our store, and place us, with but two years' growth, as one of the largest retail Shoe Houses in Eastern Ontario.

JOBBERS' PRICES,

REMEMBER OUR SYSTEM OF BUSINESS IS SQUARE WITH ALL

Goods marked in Plain Figures and No Second or Third Prices Made.

A MARVELOUS STORY

TOLD IN TWO LETTERS.

FROM THE SON: "29 Cedar St., New York, Oct. 28, 1882.

"Gentlemen: My father resides at Glover, Vt. He has been a great sufferer from Scrofula, and the inclosed letter will tell you what a marvelous effect has had in his case. I think his blood must have contained the humor for at least ten years; but it did not show, except in the form of a scrofulous sore on the wrist, until about five years ago. From a few spots which appeared at that time, it gradually spread so as to cover his entire body. I assure you he was terribly afflicted, and an object of pity, when he began using your medicine. Now, there are few men of his age who enjoy as good health as he has. I could easily name fifty persons who would testify to the facts in his case.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla

Yours truly, W. M. PHILLIPS."

FROM THE FATHER: "It is both a pleasure and a duty for me to state to you the benefit I have derived from the use of

Ayer's Sarsaparilla.

Six months ago I was completely covered with a terrible humor and scrofulous sores. The humor caused an incessant and intolerable itching, and the skin cracked so as to cause the blood to flow in many places whenever I moved. My sufferings were great, and my life a burden. I commenced the use of the SARSAPARILLA in April last, and have used it regularly since that time. My condition began to improve at once. The sores have all healed, and I feel perfectly well in every respect—being now able to do a good day's work, although 78 years of age. Many inquire what has wrought such a cure in my case, and I tell them, as I have here tried to tell you, AYER'S SARSAPARILLA. Glover, Vt., Oct. 21, 1882. Yours gratefully, HIRAM PHILLIPS."

AYER'S SARSAPARILLA cures Scrofula and all Scrofulous Complaints, Erysipelas, Eczema, Ringworm, Blotches, Sores, Boils, Tumors, and Eruptions of the Skin. It clears the blood of all impurities, aids digestion, stimulates the action of the bowels, and thus restores vitality and strengthens the whole system.

TOWN COUNCIL.

Special Meeting.

A special meeting of the Council was held on Wednesday evening, December 3rd. There were present, His Worship Mayor Cox, Messrs. Cahill, Davidson, McNeil, Kelly, Green, Millar, Yelland, Rutherford, Menzies and Kendry. After routine a large number of communications and applications for remission of taxes were received and dealt with. Among others, one from the Town Trust Commissioners, showing that there had been realized on the sale of town property $11,222, and another from the Town Clerk, showing that the taxes paid by the ratepayers on George street, between Brock and Charlotte streets, and on Hunter and Simcoe streets, between Water and Aylmer streets, was $13,178 the total levy being $36,740; and a petition from Walter Paterson, jr., and others, asking for the electric light on Hunter street.

A large number of accounts were received and some ordered to be paid, while others were referred to proper committees.

FINANCE.

Mr. Davidson, chairman, presented the report of the Finance Committee, recommending the payment of the accounts of G. N. W. Telegraph Company, $3.81; County Treasurer, town's share of conveying prisoners, $10.53; Robt. White, $3.00, and Tierney Bros., $2.00. The report was adopted.

Mr. Rutherford, from the Fire, Water and Gas Committee, reported, recommending that, as requested by the C.P.R. Co., a gas lamp be placed on the railway crossing, George street.—Report adopted.

Mr. Green, chairman of the Charity Committee, reported that the amount expended on charity for the year was $420. There were given to indigent persons 45½ cords of wood.

BY-LAWS.

A number of by-laws were duly passed.

One was for the purpose of increasing the number of hydrants on George street to 19, including one for use as a fountain on the Market Square

One was to abate the noise nuisance caused by the blowing of railway whistles and the ringing of bells.

Another provided for a grant of $100 to the Mechanics' Institute.

Another appointed deputy returning officers and fixed the places for holding the municipal elections, as under:

No. 1 WARD, Mission School—J. Lundy, Deputy Returning Officer, and A. Williams, Poll Clerk.

No. 2 WARD, Council Chamber—Charles Cameron, Deputy Returning Officer, and J. Noble, Poll Clerk.

No. 3 WARD, A. Tully's store, corner of McDonnel and Aylmer streets—J. Irwin, Deputy Returning Officer, and J. G. Macdonald, Poll Clerk.

No. 4 WARD, W. Lee's shop—W. Lee, Deputy Returning Officer, and J. Sawers, Poll Clerk.

MISCELLANEOUS.

On motion of Mr. McNeil, seconded by Mr. Rutherford, the petitions, of Messrs. J. Z. Rogers and others, re building by-law, was referred to the Building and Health Committee, with a view to amending the by-law, and the Police Magistrate was requested to stay proceedings in cases now pending under the existing by-law, until the next meeting of the Council.

On motion of Mr Millar, seconded by Mr. Green, the petition of Walter Paterson and others was referred to the Fire, Water and Gas Committee, with power to grant the prayer thereof when the required number of signatures warrant the levy of a local tax.

On motion of Mr. Yellaud, seconded by Mr. Rutherford, the chairman of the Committee on Appointments was requested to report at the next meeting of the Council what are the duties of Mr. Beavis.

On the motion of Mr. Green, seconded by Mr. McNeil, to authorize Mr. Beavis to purchase thirty cords of charity wood, Mr. Yelland stated that there was a discrepancy of several cords. Other speakers defended the expenditure of the Charity Committee, and the motion was agreed to

SPAULDING'S BAY.

Mr. McNeil moved, seconded by Mr. Davidson, that the mover, seconder, and Messrs. Green, Rutherford, Kendry and Cahill be a special committee to take into consideration the best means of abating the nuisance at Spaulding's Bay, and also the letters submitted by the leading physicians of the town as to its sanitary condition, and to take into consideration the other sanitary improvements and report at the next meeting.

Mr. McNeil referred to correspondence he had with the Crown Lands Commissioner, showing that the 61½ acres in the south part of the town were deeded to the Town Trust absolutely—without any conditions as to drainage, etc. He also submitted letters of reply from the Secretary of the Provincial Board of Health, Dr. Bryce, and six leading physicians of the town, in reference to Spaulding's Bay and the general sanitary conditions of the town. We have not space for the letters entire in this issue, but will give extracts therefrom:

DR. BRYCE.—It (Spaulding's Bay) undoubtedly tends to cause fevers of an intermittent and malarial type.

DR. PIGEON—The well water is very unfit for drinking, and pure water is the most urgent sanitary necessity of the town. * * Diphtheria and typhoid fever are due in a great measure to the lack of it. * * The filling in of Spaulding's Bay has become urgent.

DR. HALLIDAY—I have no hesitation in saying that the sanitary condition of the town is bad * * * and so long as it exists typhoid and other fevers, measles, scarlet fever, diphtheria, croup, etc., etc., will prevail. * * * These diseases are preventible; * * * the town should have a thorough system of sewerage. * * * Among nuisances Spaulding's Bay may fairly be ranked first.

DR. KINCAID—The time has come when this important matter (drainage) should be attended to.

DR. KING—Thorough measures should be put into force to put the town in fair sanitary condition, which, owing to the absence of drains, sewers, etc., will require energetic action at the hands of the Council and Board of Health. Spaulding's Bay * * * working with the present water closet system, is a fruitful source of disease.

DR. BOUCHER—The sanitary condition of the whole town is in an exceedingly unsatisfactory state * * * giving rise to typhoid fever and diphtheria. A good system of sewerage is absolutely essential. It is high time that active steps were taken, especially in view of the fact that we will, ere another twelve months, probably have a visitation of cholera. * * * In regard to Spaulding's Bay, it is a fever-breeding peat hole.

DR. BELL—We are now having a large number of cases of typhoid fever and diphtheria. All these might be prevented, or decreased in number, if proper sanitary conditions were enforced. * * * Spaulding's Bay, that plague spot, I hesitate not to say, has cost many lives. * * * It's filling in first requires attention * * * next, sewerage.

DR. FITZ—It would be false economy to longer delay putting drains under the most populous streets. * * * Spaulding's Bay should be filled up.

Mr. McNeil strongly urged the necessity of prompt action in the premises. Mr. Cahill hoped something definite would be done, and the motion was agreed to.

On motion of Mr. Cahill, seconded by Mr. Davidson, the Clerk was instructed to issue his cheque for $125.25, for street and bridge work, the Council to indemnify him for the same.

Special Meeting.

A special meeting was held on Monday night. Present, his worship Mayor Cox, Messrs. Cahill, Davidson, McNeil, Kelly, Green, Millar, Yelland, Douglass, Rutherford, Menzies and Kendry.

After routine,

His worship stated that he had called the meeting to consider two or three communications, which, though not of the greatest importance, required immediate attention. One was a letter from Mr. Edwards, town solicitor, regarding the case of Kearney for damages. Another from Mr. D. W. Dumble, police magistrate, pointing out that the town as the time it passed the building by-law, had not power to make persons, in re-constructing a building, build it differently from the original structure, and suggesting that some competent person be appointed to examine buildings under construction.

From D. W. Dumble, police magistrate, calling attention to the bad condition of the town lock-up.—Property committee.

Several accounts were presented and referred to the Finance committee.

THE KEARNEY CASE.

In taking up the communication of Mr. Edwards, the latter said that the question of law had not been fully argued at the trial at the recent county court. The jury had only found as to the facts. He did not know what course Judge Dennistoun might take if the matter were referred to him. Mr. Edwards was not altogether clear that the town should bear the loss, and he thought that if the matter were brought before the judge, the town would have a fair chance of succeeding. The cost of an appeal would amount to about $30.

In talking over the matter it transpired that the case at its origin had been submitted to the Finance committee, which had not seen fit to report on the matter.

Mr. Rutherford thought it best to let the matter rest.

Mr. Menzies thought if the protecting railing put up by the town had been removed by other parties, the town should not submit, but had better appeal the case.

Mr. Menzies moved that in the case of Kearney re the town be appealed in term, and that the town solicitor be instructed to give notice of such appeal.

In answer to Mr. Kelly, Mr. Edwards said that the cost already amounted to an equivalent of $110 less the amount of damages. The matter, at the suggestion of Mr. Millar, was left to the discretion of the town solicitor.

VARIOUS MATTERS.

Mr. Menzies moved, seconded by Mr. Kendry, that the council give authority to the R. C. Bazaar committee to dispose of articles by raffle according to powers vested in the council.—Carried.

Mr. Douglass moved, seconded by Mr. Yelland, that the street inspector notify the contractors and engineer to remove the obstructions from the creek at Hunter street, and if they fail to do so, to himself have them removed.

Mr. Davidson moved, seconded by Mr. Cahill, that the sum of $25 be paid the widow of the late John McGee, in full of balance of arrears of salary.—Carried.

Mr. Douglass moved, seconded by Mr. Yelland, that the income tax paid by Mr. Babb for Mr. Trout, removed, be refunded. Referred to Court of Revision.

Mr. Yelland called attention to the deficiency of approach to the residence of Mr. Chisolm, Antrim street, and on motion of Mr. Kendry, seconded by Mr. Menzies, the matter was referred to the Street Committee with power to act,

The council adjourned for two weeks. Most of the councillors remaining, Mr. Kendry asked Mr. Cox why the Board of Underwriters had reduced the insurance rating on George street from C to D. Mr. Cox replied that the board had been informed that the contract for the hydrants on George street had not been removed, hence the change. But he had set the matter in a proper light, and the rating would be restored to C.

Arrived this week, a new lot of Men's Underclothing worth a dollar, sale price seventy-five cents, at Turnbull's.

Catarrh A New Treatment.

Perhaps the most extraordinary success that has been achieved in modern medicine has been attained by the Dixon treatment for Catarrh. Out of 2,000 patients treated during the past six months, fully ninety per cent. have been cured of this stubborn malady. This is none the less startling when it is remembered that not five per cent. of patients presenting themselves to the regular practitioner are benefitted, while the patent medicines and other advertised cures never record a cure at all. Starting with the claim now generally believed by the most scientific men that the disease is due to the presence of living parasites in the tissue, Mr. Dixon at once adapted his cure to their extermination—this accomplished, he claims the Catarrh is practically cured, and the permanency is unquestioned, as cures effected by him four years ago are cures still. No one else has ever attempted to cure Catarrh in this manner, and no other treatment has ever cured Catarrh. The application of the remedy is simple, and can be done at home, and the present season of the year is the most favourable for a speedy and permanent cure, the majority of cases being cured at one treatment. Sufferers should correspond with Messrs. A. H. DIXON & SON, 305 King street west, Toronto, Canada, and enclose stamp for their treatise on Catarrh.—Montreal Star, Nov. 17, 1882. 48-52t

THE TICHBORNE CLAIMANT.

As an element of agitation the Tichborne claimant is a confessed failure. He fails to attract the attention of the only people who could be of any use to him in reasserting his claim. Before his imprisonment he had a host of believers; but it is hard to revive faith in a ticket-of-leave man, who has undergone a lengthy imprisonment. He still draws as a curiosity and he has accepted his position and is filling his list, like a variety actor, for appearance at different theatres. He has just completed an engagement for one week, for which he received £300, at an Edinburgh music hall.

He Knows It.

Hiram D. Maxfield, formerly of Silver Springs, R. I., has no doubt about the wonderful curative powers of Kidney-Wort. He was so afflicted with Kidney complaint that he could not stand on his feet from pain and weakness. As soon as he commenced using Kidney-Wort he experienced immediate relief and at once began to grow strong and was relieved of all pain and unpleasantness. He says: "I Know I have been cured by Kidney-Wort."

ELECTRIC GATE OPENER.

An electric gate opener for highway crossings has been adopted by the French railroad companies. A catch connected with an electro-magnet keeps a gate closed. When a train approaches it closes the circuit, releases the catch, and the gate flies open. The last car on the train, as it passes through, opens the circuit, and the gate is again closed. The same device rings a bell violently on the approach of each train.

Peterborough Examiner.

PETERBOROUGH, DEC. 11, 1884.

Peterborough Post-Office.

Last Saturday the Conservatives met in convention in Peterborough, to make preparations for the grand taffy-pull to be held in Sir John's honor in Toronto on December the 18th. While our distinguished local politicians are breaking bread and buns with the Chieftain, in their intervals of adoration, we beg to suggest to them that they might be practical for once, and pump the Premier as to his intentions in reference to the Peterborough Post-Office. It is a matter of tradition, so long ago did it happen, that the Dominion Government promised to build a post-office and custom house for Peterboro', and that the sum of $15,000 was appropriated for the purchase of a site, and that a man was sent from Ottawa to inspect and decide upon the score of elegible corner lots—all owned by good, solid Tories. He made his report, and, whatever that was, the Government did not act upon it. The bare mention of a preference for a particular site, started up such a squad of sturdy "kickers," that the Government, losing sight of the public wants, in the way of public buildings, devoted their efforts to reconciling the dissatisfied among the faithful. It was plainly impracticable to select twenty sites, so a compromise was effected by selecting no site at all. But it is to be hoped that at the convention in town on Saturday, the matter was dealt with and settled—that the dog-in-the-manger attitude was dropped, and that it was decided to bring the requisite pressure to bear on the Government. If we are ever to have these public buildings it is time that the first step was taken. Some of the "faithful" will have to give way. But it seems that the matter is safe to be spun out till another election. The people, however, are beginning to rebel; even a faithful Tory, who, though a strong party man, safe to vote the straight ticket every time, makes the remark that Peterborough will "never get the Post-office till the party kicks." Will the leading members of the Conservative party in town, wake up to the fact that while they are playing into the hands of the Government by assisting to make the post-office question a political scheme to influence electors, they are playing the part of traitors to the best interests of the town. Their duty is first to the town they live in. When they secure its rights, they are welcome to take stock in the manufacture of political capital, which, by the way, is the only manufacturing industry which the N. P. has appreciably developed. Down with disloyalty to the town. Show the Government that if they cannot any longer purchase the support of Peterborough by promises. Nothing but performance will have the desired effect.

What They Forgot.

At the meeting of local Conservatives on Saturday they completely ignored the most important matters that would naturally have suggested themselves to persons really loyal to the interests of this town and district. If, instead of dealing out fulsome flattery—complimenting Sir John on his recently acquired right to wear a cocked hat and red bresches, and bandaging Mr. Right-about Meredith's weak knees with yards of lack-a-daisical laudation—the convention had hauled the Government over the coals for its flagrant and criminal neglect of the Postoffice buildings and the Trent Valley Canal, they might have done some good. The very thing the people most desire, they leave severely alone. The Reform party at the last election recorded their condemnation of the shifty policy of the Tory Administration on the above matters. If the Tories would loyally join hands with them on these issues alone, no Government could withstand the pressure. The Dominion Administration are the first to blame for making political traffic of these two great enterprises, and secondly their local representatives and supporters must shoulder the blame. The latter, instead of manfully protesting against the delay, submit to be snubbed and put off, like troublesome children, at the beck and will of their Tory leaders. Our local representative for the Commons, and the chief wire-pullers had enap and influence enough to force from the Government a re-consideration of the selection of a site, when a split in the local party ranks was threatened, but when our most vital material interests are neglected, there is not a voice raised in protest.

Don't miss the opportunity of obtaining Winter Underclothing 20 per cent below regular prices, at Andrew McNeil's Tailor and Clothier, George Street.

The Ottawa Sun says if you want to write to the Premier of Canada and make a deadsure thing of reaching the proper party, you should address your letter: The Right Honorable Sir John Alexander Macdonald, Q. C., M. P., K. C. B., K. G. C. B., B. A, C. I., D. C. L., L. L. D. Our Ottawa contemporary, says the Stratford Beacon, has not given him full credit for the distinctions he has won. He is entitled to add several more letters to the end of his name. For instance, P. A. C. I., F. I. C. S., C. A. N., D. A. L. Give him his due, give him his due, if the whole alphabet has to be used.

Look out for the Christmas edition of the Examiner, which will be issued on Friday next, and distributed on Saturday.

There is no end to the absurd claims of the Tory party on behalf of the N. P. Now it is asserted by them that the boom in the Canadian cheese trade is due to the duty. This is A 1 nonsense. How much cheese are Canadians, with six million dollars of a surplus of the article for export, likely to import from the United States? We don't wonder that the Tory journals are dishonest enough to make such a claim, but we do wonder if they think the people are fools enough to believe them.

The Failure Demonstrated.

That Protection taxes but does not protect—that it burdens but does not benefit the people, is becoming daily more evident. The following testimony adduced by the Ottawa Free Press is conclusive:

Before free trade, the price of corn in England was eighty shillings per quarter, and it is now forty shillings. This cheapening of food has made the mother land the cheapest manufacturing country, and about the highest as to the reward of skilled labor.

The price of tea in Britain to-day is less than the duty used to be, and sugar is not more than a third of its former cost.

The average weekly wages in Great Britain are double in nearly every calling what they were before free trade. Brick setters, formerly paid 4s. per day, now receive 7s. 6d.; a cabinet maker got 12s. per week, he now averages 28s. All over Great Britain in every branch of employment wages have doubled, while the price of food as well as the number of hours of work have decreased.

A protective tariff shuts out the protected merchants and manufacturers from foreign markets.

Protection is bearing its natural fruit in the United States.

On September 1st, out of eleven million cotton spindles in that country over five million were idle; of silent woolen looms the proportion idle of the whole was greater; of 450 furnaces, the Iron Age reported 280 out of blast, and the price of steel rails which commanded $90 per ton in February only fetched $26 in September.

Protection taxes but fails to protect in the United States as well as in Canada.

In the former country, in the prosperous year of '81, the woolen manufactures imported were $31,000,000; in the depressed year of 1883 they were $44,000,000; and in 1884, $41,000,000.

Note that there has been a shrinkage of values and the difference in quantity is greater than in values. The duties collected prove this beyond question. In 1881 the duty paid on woollen imports was $23,500,000, and in 1883, $32,000,000. The collapse of the protection on the woollen imports of the United States is a demonstrated fact.

The American tariff is simply a machine for plundering the masses to feed cormorant carpet-bag politicians, and which fails to protect effectually a single industry. The same is true of the Canadian tariff.

Thirty years ago the American flag was found upon every sea To-day the British ensign covers ninety per cent of the American commerce. Protection wrought this ruin to the American merchant navy.

Under a low revenue tariff the United States did eighty per cent of the world's export trade to Mexico, Central and South America. To-day, under a protective tariff they supply about 17 per cent. Great is the power of protection.

England exports annually to Brazil $8,000,000 worth of imported American butter! Why? Free trade has given England fifty per cent of the world's carrying trade.

To build up the United States merchant marine it is proposed to allow Americans to buy vessels where they can get them cheapest, and register them as American. They will be purchased in England and Scotland.

ASPHODEL.

RAPID THRESHING.

On December 4th, Messrs. Thompson & Cardwell of Asphodel, threshed at the barn of Mr. Richard Barnes, Otonabee, 750 bushels of wheat in eight hours. What makes this performance more remarkable, is the fact that the straw was large, and the yield of grain only average.

AGRICULTURAL SOCIETY.

Special Meeting—The South Side Site Selected The Bargain with Mr. Morrow to be Implemented.

A special meeting of the directors of the West Peterborough Agricultural Society was held in the Council Chamber on Saturday afternoon last. There were present: Messrs. James Campbell, president, in the chair, John Carnegie, secretary, and Messrs. Young, Davidson, Walton, Bell, Elliott, Riddell, Rutherford, Garbutt, McClelland and Collins.

After routine, the draft of the lease between the directors and Mr. Morrow was read. The conditions embraced an annual payment for rental of $100, for four years, with the privilege of purchase of the 12 acres at any time within the nine years, at $500 per acre. The agreement stipulated that any debts incurred in the erection of the buildings should not become a charge upon the lands, but that the Society should become responsible for the same, and that, in the event of the Society becoming insolvent, any buildings erected should revert to Mr. Morrow.

Mr. McClelland moved, seconded by Mr. Walton, that the draft submitted be approved and that the president and secretary be authorized to have the same executed.

Mr. T. E. Bell said he wished, before the resolution was put, to ask if the minutes of the last meeting had been confirmed. On being told that they had been, he asked the secretary, as one likely to know, if the directors had the power to make any expenditure they liked without consulting the public. The secretary replied that he thought they had, whereupon Mr. Bell moved, that the lease be not executed, but left over till after the annual meeting in January. He protested against the directors signing any such document, and he moved his motion in order that the public might have a chance of protesting against such extravagance. He objected to the directors putting their heads into a halter. Some, equally as much interested in the welfare of the Society, might be opposed to the matter, and these should have a chance of protesting. He saw no reason why the matter should be forced upon the people without the latter having a chance to express their approval or objection. He was aware that he was in the minority, but he believed he was right and he would stay in the minority if only T. E. Bell was in it. He proceeded to contrast the eligibility and cost of the respective sites, and pointed out that by selecting the Cox site, the Society would, in nine years, pay in interest only $100 more than was paid in rent for the present site, and there would be only required to pay $2,000 more—not counting the $1,000 guaranteed—to purchase the property, while, under the arrangement favored by the directors, there would have to be paid $4,000 in addition to whatever rent might be paid, and for three acres less land. He also showed that the facilities of approach to the Cox site were equally as good as the other. Under the circumstances he contended that the matter, as there was no urgency, should be laid over till the annual meeting, so that the members of the Society might express an opinion on the subject. He also pointed out objectionable features in the lease. The directors were petting their necks in a halter.

Mr. Young, of Smith, seconded the motion.

Mr. McClelland defended the action of the directors and deprecated the sectional feeling which, he asserted, was at the bottom of the objections. He said if the matter were deferred till January Mr. Bell might pack a meeting with parties favorable to his views. Referring to the vote at the last meeting, he said the conditions of the lease were in accordance with that resolution.

Mr. Bell said if the motion to adopt the lease passed he would step aside as a director. The responsibility would fall upon the successors of the present board. Referring again to the north site, he said the bargain was a good one and commended itself to himself as a private individual. If Mr. McClelland was acting for himself personally, it would also so commend itself to him.

The motion was put and lost on the following division:

YEAS—Messrs. Bell, Young and Elliott—3.

NAYS—Messrs. Davidson, Walton, Riddell, Rutherford, Collins, McClelland and Garbutt—7.

The original motion was put and carried on the same division, reversed.

Mr. Collins moved, seconded by Mr. Mr. McClelland, that the offer of the Driving Park Association to the Society be executed and embodied in the legal agreement.—Carried.

Mr. Bell moved, seconded by Mr. Young, that no building material be laid down on the grounds before the annual meeting.

In reply to Mr. Riddell, Mr. Bell said the object of the motion was to keep the matter in abeyance till after the annual meeting.

The motion was agreed to.

Mr. Bell resigned his position as a director, and the meeting adjourned.

Consumption Cured.

An old physician, retired from practice, having had placed in his hands by an East India missionary the formula of a simple vegetable remedy for the speedy and permanent cure of Consumption, Bronchitis, Catarrh, Asthma, and all throat and Lung affections, also a positive and radical cure for Nervous debility and all Nervous Complaints, after having tested its wonderful curative powers in thousands of cases, has felt it his duty to make it known to his suffering fellows. Actuated by this motive and a desire to relieve human suffering, I will send free of charge, to all who desire it, this receipt, in German, French or English, with full directions for preparing and using. Sent by mail by addressing with stamp, naming this paper, W. A. Noyes, 149 Power's Block, Rochester, N. Y. 45-26-eow.

F. Burrows, of Wilkesport, writes that he was cured of a very dangerous case of inflammation of the lungs, solely by the use of five bottles of Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil. Feels great pleasure in recommending it to the public, as he had proved it (for many of the diseases it mentions to cure) through his friends, and in nearly every instance it was effectual. Do not be deceived by any imitations of Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil. Be sure you get the genuine.

KEENE.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

CORRECTION.

The article in Keene notes of a fortnight ago, headed a "new venture," was not quite as bad as reported at the time. We are sorry that any one should have been so sensitive as to be annoyed by it, and we promise to be more careful in the future. Before we drop this subject we would like to inform the writer of the letter in last week's Examiner, that he is quite astray in his suspicion of who the correspondent is, as we never found fault with the Lang boys either directly or otherwise.

GRAND CONCERT.

We understand that a grand concert and hop will be held before long in the Hall, Keene, in aid of the Keene Brass Band.

TEMPERANCE.

Mr. T. W. Casey, Grand Secretary I.O.G.T., gave addresses at Keene and Mather's Corners last week on the above question. There was a very good attendance, but the interest was not as largely in favour of a lodge in Keene as it ought to have been at the Keene meeting.

MISCELLANEOUS.

We are pleased to know that Mr. M. Kenneally is recovering, under the attendance of Dr. Shaw.

CHEESE MEETING.

An adjourned meeting of the patrons of the Lakefield cheese factory was held on Friday evening last at their factory, to settle up the business for the year, which they did satisfactorily. They have had a successful year, and expect to have a larger number of patrons next year than this, as the new factory will be more central. The discrepancy reported in the treasurer's accounts proved to be all right so far as the funds were concerned.

CHURCH RE-OPENING.

The re-opening services were held in the Methodist church on Sunday last. Rev. Dr. Carman, General Superintendent, preached in the morning and evening; the Rev. Mr. Galbraith, president of the Montreal conference, and formerly of this place preached in the afternoon. Though the weather was rather unfavorable, there was a fair attendance. On Monday evening there was a full house to hear the lecture of Rev. Dr. Carman on the "Worth and Work of Woman." The first part of the evening was taken up in trying to raise funds to defray the debt incurred in the improvements, which amounted to about $2,000. Rev. Mr. Tovell of Peterborough took charge of this part of the proceedings, and during his appeals for funds created a good deal of merriment, and pleasantry. Seven hundred and forty dollars was subscribed, leaving $250 still to be raised. The lecture occupied one hour, after which a vote of thanks was moved by Rev. Mr. Clark, to Dr. Carman. Mr. Hull occupied the chair.

VILLAGE COUNCIL.

The council met on Monday evening. After routine a resolution was passed deferring action on the petition of D. Smith, T. J. Nelson and others, till the petitioners provided the council with a legal opinion as to the power of the council to make the exchange of street asked for. Permission was granted to Mr. Griffin to remove the old cheese factor and placing it opposite Mr. Strickland's office. Several accounts were paid, and tenders invited for furnishing a council hall, including lighting and heating. A communication from Mr. Poussette informed the council that Mr. Garbutt, being security for the collector, could not take the declaration of office as councillor. A by-law was passed prohibiting interment of the dead in the village, to take effect Dec. 15th. Half of the taxes paid by James Smith on the B. C. church was refunded.

SCHOOL BOARD.

A meeting was held on Tuesday evening. After routine Mr. Dench reported respecting an incorrigible boy. Mr. Casement was appointed returning officer for the trustee elections. S. Henderson's account, $75.13, was paid, and the janitor re-engaged. Average attendance for November was 173, on roll 237. [Honor roll next issue.

APSLEY.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

The members and adherents of the Methodist church will furnish a public dinner in the Temperance Hall at Apsley on Christmas day, dinner to be served from 2 to 4 p m., after which an entertainment will be given. Several ministers are expected from a distance who will address the audience. A most cordial invitation is given to all. Admission fee for dinner and entertainment, 25 cents.

Best genuine French Grape Brandy, distilled Extract of Water Pepper or Smart-Weed, and Jamaica Ginger, with Camphor Essence, as combined in Dr. Pierce's Compound Extract of Smart-Weed, are the best possible remedies for colic, cholera morbus, diarrhœa, dysentry or bloody-flux, or to break up colds, fevers and inflammatory attacks.

DOURO.

A few days ago Thomas Shannon had his left arm broken by a horse falling on him. Dr. O'Sullivan supplied the necessary surgical skill, and he is recovering rapidly.

Harper's Bazar

ILLUSTRATED.

HARPER'S BAZAR is the only paper in the world that combines the choicest literature and the finest art illustrations with the latest fashions and methods of household adornment. Its weekly illustrations and descriptions of the newest Paris and New York styles, with its useful pattern-sheet supplement and cut patterns, by enabling ladies to be their own dressmakers, save many times the cost of subscription. Its papers on cooking, the management of servants, and house-keeping in its various details are eminently practical. Much attention is given to the interesting topic of social etiquette, and its illustrations of art needlework are acknowledged to be unequalled. Its literary merit is of the highest excellence, and the unique character of its humorous pictures has won for it the name of the American Punch.

A REASONABLE
INVITATION

And a very hearty one too, is hereby extended to you, to visit our Stores, whether you want to buy or not, you'll not be pressed to do so, nor your freedom of action in any way interfered with. On the other hand you're at perfect liberty to inspect our goods, compare our prices, view our facilities, ask questions in regard to our system of business, and in short make yourself

THOROUGHLY AT HOME,

As though our Stores were to you, as they are to thousands, an old, familiar and pleasant resort. You'll find our Sale-room among the largest and handsomest in Town, and therefore, that there's no undue crowding of goods, no lack of facilities for their display, no need to make allowance for poor light or poor surroundings. In short, that there's nothing to be excused. You'll also find, if an evening be selected for your visit, that we've turned night into day, and that under the brilliant Electric Light, goods can be chosen, colours matched, and qualities compared with the same ease, as at any time during the day. Now, we don't want you to think that the above is altogether an invitation to come and buy, for it is'nt. We don't even ask you to come to us before going elsewhere, we merely advise you in a friendly way, to come and see us if you do not want to buy, and especially before buying at all.

LOVE FOR A DAY!

"If you feel tired," she said, "do not join us for a little while; come later on. And, Miss Chester, make yourself look nice. We must not let Lady Severne think herself the handsomest woman in the world. Bring some of your best songs. Lord Severne is very fond of music."

I knew that. Had I not sung to him a hundred times by the river and in the woods?

That evening it seemed to me that I was about to rival Mark's wife. Was it foolish or wicked that I went to my wardrobe for the long, plain, blue silk dress that Mark liked, and that I made the most of my golden hair, that I found some white roses for it, and that I tried to look bright and happy while my heart was dead?

I need not speak of the other guests. My story deals only with Mark and Mark's wife. Lady Yorke introduced me to all her visitors. I had gone to the drawing-room before the gentlemen had left the dining-room. I could not have entered with Mark looking at me. I remember no names, no faces; my whole soul seemed waiting until we reached Mark's wife.

"Lady Severne," said the clear voice by my side; and, raising my eyes, I saw Mark's wife—the most beautiful, brilliant, dazzling woman I had ever beheld.

She had the vivid bloom of a carnation, a face of exquisite Grecian type, a wide low brow, straight dark eyebrows, lovely mouth, though the lines and curves were rather proud than tender, a beautiful chin with a delicious dimple. As I thought of Mark kissing those lovely lips, the pain in my heart was more bitter than death. A superb woman, with dark blue eyes and dark hair, she was dressed in white velvet, relieved by a rich bordering of purple heart's-ease; a diamond necklace clasped the white, firm throat, a diamond cross lay on her white breast; and the very moment I stood before her I noticed the sweet odor of violets.

Mark's wife! She looked at me with a kindly smile; and then I noticed that there was something peculiar in her face. I did not like it, beautiful, brilliant as it was. There was a vague inexplicable something—a metallic brightness in the eyes, a hard, peculiar color on her cheeks. Love for Mark, interest quickened by affection, made me wonder, and, as I looked at her, so beautiful, so brilliant, I asked myself, "What was his sorrow? What was the secret that clouded his life? What was the mystery that sapped all the pleasure and happiness of his existence? What could it be?"

Lady Severne drew aside the folds of her velvet dress, and asked me to take a seat by her side.

"Lady Yorke tells me that you have a beautiful voice, Miss Chester," she said. "I hope you will sing for us. Lord Severne is fond of music."

Long before her fair face had wiled Mark from me I knew that. What would she say if she knew that I was Mark's first love, that——? Ah, what nonsense! Was I mad? Mark was no longer for me. She talked to me kindly enough for a few minutes. I felt, rather than knew, that there was something strange about her, but I could not define it.

"The nightingales made music
Juno's palace paved with gold;
I watched the rose you gave me
Its warm red heart unfold,
But sight of rose and song of bird
Were fraught with wild regret—
'Tis madness to remember;
'Twere wisdom to forget.

"I stood among the gold corn—
Alas, no more I knew!—
To gather gleaner's measure
Of the love that fell from you—
For me no gracious harvest—
Would God we ne'er had met!
For, cruel as remembrance is,
'Tis harder to forget.

"The streamlet now is frozen,
The nightingales are fled,
The corn-fields are deserted,
And ev'ry rose is dead.
I sit beside my lonely fire,
And pray for wisdom yet,
For calmness to remember, or
For courage to forget."

The gentlemen came in. My only hope lay in not looking at Mark. I was keenly, painfully conscious of his presence. I knew where he went; when he spoke, I heard no other sound. But my eyes never sought him. Even when Lady Yorke introduced me to him, I never saw him; but five minutes afterwards, when I went to the piano, the music fell from my nerveless hands. Ah, woe was me! The first song I found was this—"Remember and Forget."

"I sat beside the streamlet:
I watched the waters flow,
As we together watched it
One little year ago.
The soft rain pattered on the leaves,
The April grass was wet—
Ah, folly to remember!
'Tis wiser to forget.

There was no sound in the room as the last notes died away. I knew they had gone straight to Mark's heart, for he left the group of ladies with whom he had been talking, and went to one of the great bay windows. The May sun had set, and the light was dead in the sky.

Lady Yorke's voice broke the spell. She was asking for her favorite, and the words came readily to me—Virginia Gabriel's beautiful song "Ruby."

"I opened the leaves of a book last night—
The dust on its cover lay dusk and brown;
As I held it towards the waning light
A withered flow'ret fell rustling down.
'Twas only the wraith of a woodland weed,
Which a dear dead hand in the days of old
Had placed 'twixt the pages she loved to read
At the time when my vows of love was told;
And memory sweet, but as sad as sweet,
Swift flooded mine eyes with regretful tears
As the dry dim harebell skimmed past my feet,
Recalling an hour from the vanished years.

"Once more I was watching her deep-fringed eyes,
Bent over the Tasso upon her knee,
And the fair face blushing with sweet surprise
At the passionate pleading that broke from me.
Ah, Ruby, my darling, the small white hand
That gathered the harebell was never my own,
But faded and passed to the far-off land,
And I dreamt by the flickering flame alone.
I gathered the flower and I closed the leaves,
And folded my hands in silent prayer
That the reaper Death, as he seeks his sheaves, Might hasten the hour of our meeting there."

Was I dreaming, or did my own voice die away in a wail of pain—die in a long-drawn bitter sob?

Lady Yorke was near me, and I saw tears in her eyes.

"One more, Miss Chester," she said. "Your songs are so sad and so sweet, they take me out of this world. One more, if you are not too tired."

I had forgiven Mark not very long since; but the longing was upon me to make him feel, to pierce his heart with some little of the anguish which had pierced mine. Never mind what I suffered, if I could send my words flying like barbed arrows across the room.

I looked at him. The handsome profile stood out clearly and distinctly. He stood gazing though the long window at the night-sky. Ah, yes, I would sting him into feeling. And this was my song—

A DEAD LOVE.

"Down deep in my heart, in its last calm sleep,
A dear dead love lies buried deep;
I clasped it once in a long embrace,
And closed the eyes and veiled the face
I never again might see.
I breathed no word and I shed no tear,
But the onward years looked dark and drear,
And I knew, by the throbs of mortal pain,
That a sweetness had fled which never again
Would in life come back to me.

"And dreams of the past, like roses, still shed
Their fragrance around my cherished dead;
While tears that ever are falling unseen,
Like soft summer rain, keep its memory green
As the turf of its sacred bed.
And, weeping and waiting, I pray and wait
That an angel may open the golden gate:
For I think that the Eyes of long ago,
Though cold and dead to me here below,
Will be mine in the rest of God."

There was a little stir in the room when my song was finished. The last words rang through my brain—"Will be mine in the rest of God." I had touched him. All those other men and women were nothing to me—only shadows. They had no identity. I saw moving figures, I heard voices, but to me Mark was there alone.

I saw a quiver of pain pass over his face. I had made him feel. Then, so true, so weak a woman was I that I longed to cross the room and kiss the pain away. The odor of violets came to me; Lady Severne was standing by my side.

"How exquisitely your sing, Miss Chester! You make me long for things that I have quite forgotten. How differently we should all live if we could lead our lives over again."

The brilliant face softened; the hard metallic light had died from her eyes. I liked her better in that moment than I had before. Then I heard Lady Yorke asking Mark to sing. I remembered the rich cheery voice that had trolled out many love songs.

"You never refused to sing for me in Italy," said Lady Yorke; "why refuse here?"

"Lord Severne has a beautiful voice and a perfect ear," Lady Severne remarked, turning to me.

It comforted me just a little to remember that I had known that long before she did. An uncontrollable trembling came over me, for Mark stood by my side.

"Will you play Lord Severne's accompaniment?" said Lady Yorke.

"I would rather not," I replied.

"I will," said Lady Severne; "I like to play for him."

Was he thinking of her or thinking of me? Not of me. He could not sing such words to me now; for the song he had chosen was Sullivan's beautiful "My Dearest Heart."

"All the dreaming is broken through;
Both what is done and undone I rue,
Nothing is steadfast, nothing is true,
But your love for me, and my love for you,
My dearest, dearest heart!

"When the winds are loud, when the winds are low,
When the roses come, when the roses go,
One thought, one feeling, is all I know,
My dearest, dearest heart!
The time is weary, the year is old,
And the light of the lily burns close to the mold;
The grave is cruel, the grave is cold,
But the other side is the city of gold,
My dearest heart, my dearest heart!"

The lights and the flowers, the fair faces and jewels, swam before me. It seemed to me that I was faint and ill from the odor of violets. I went from the piano to the other end of the room. I could sing no more that night. A tall jardinière, filled with exquisite white orchids, which stood near afforded me shelter, and from behind the white fragrant flowers I could see and hear all that passed. Lady Yorke came to me there and said that I must rest.

"You musical people take so much out of yourselves," she said. "You throw your whole souls into your songs. Look at Lord Severne. Who is his 'dearest heart,' I wonder?"

"Lady Severne," I replied, quickly.

But Lady Yorke shook her head.

"That is a marriage I cannot believe stand," she said, slowly; "but I begin to see what Lord Severne's secret is."

I would have given worlds for courage to ask her to explain her words, but I did not dare to do so.

She left me, and I watched husband and wife. There was something between them—some shadow. She seemed to me half afraid of him. He regarded her closely. He was ill at ease if she said much, if she laughed or attracted much attention. He reminded me of some one who had the care of a forward child always on the point of breaking out into mischief. They never looked at each other with eyes of trust or love. I had not watched them one half hour before I felt and saw that Mark was wretched.

What could it be? Lady Severne was beautiful, graceful, elegant, and well-bred. What could be wrong with her? There was something. I felt sure.

Later on that evening, when I sat with aching heart and tired eyes, longing for the hour of dismissal, Lady Yorke came to me again.

"You look so tired, Miss Chester," she said; "I will not ask you to sing."

We both glanced across the room to where Lady Severne, in her white velvet and diamonds, was the centre of a laughing group.

"How beautiful she is!" I said. The words seemed wrung from me in very bitterness of heart.

"Yes," said Lady Yorke. "It is a strange thing that the canker always eats the heart of the fairest rose;" and then, seeming vexed at her own words, she hastened to change the subject.

When she had gone, I looked long and earnestly at Mark's wife. What could be wrong with this beautiful woman? Nothing with her moral character, or she would not be here at Westwood. With all her nonchalance and indifference, there was no prouder woman living than Lady Yorke. She would not have associated with a duchess who had a blot on her character. There could be nothing of that kind. I saw no blemish in Lady Severne's manner. She was lively, animated, but not "fast;" she was witty and clever, but not "loud." I lost myself in conjecture. One thing only was quite plain to me—there was something wrong with Mark's wife, and between them there was no love.

The days that followed were busy ones. The month of May was bright and warm. Lady Yorke enjoyed picnics, and several were organized.—Whatever flirtations were going on had no interest for me: I saw only Mark and Mark's wife. He and I never spoke, we never exchanged even a look; we were as perfect strangers. The only time we broke through our rule of silence was when he told me that he hoped I would forgive the intrusion of his presence, but that he could not leave Westwood so soon as he had intended; Lady Severne was not willing.

I did not go to any of the picnics.—Lady Yorke seemed to understand that I was neither well nor happy just then, and she was very kind to me. I noticed that once or twice Lady Severne was absent. She remained at home while the others went, and, on those days I saw uneasiness on Lady Yorke's face, and misery in Mark's eyes. On these occasions Lady Severne remained secluded in her own room, and her maid in strict attendance upon her.

That maid, Martha Glyde by name, was a puzzle to me. Prim, reticent, never using two words where one would suffice; kind, but with never a smile upon her face; gentle, yet with a certain grim manner—to me she soon became a mystery. I thought it so strange that a young and beautiful woman like Lady Severne should prefer a grim, old-fashioned, elderly person like Martha Glyde to a young and pretty maid with a fresh face and quick, tripping footsteps. Moreover, I was not sure in my own mind that Lady Severne did like her. The woman always assumed a tone of authority that I thought most unbecoming.

As yet I suspected nothing. I had no tangible reason for any of the shadowy fears that surrounded me. I had watched Lady Severne with eyes and instincts sharpened by love and by jealousy, but I saw nothing wrong.

One morning—it was almost the last in May, and the June roses were beginning to bloom—a picnic was arranged. Most of the county families had been invited. Lady Yorke had resolved upon giving an entertainment that should not soon be forgotten. A first-rate military band was one of the chief attractions, and every one looked forward to the day with delight. It had been decided to visit the old Abbey of St. Ninian—a magnificent ruin only a few miles from Woodheaton, and a favorite place of resort.

I was with Lady Yorke in her boudoir half an hour before the time for starting; she was telling me about her letters, when Lord Severne came to the door. Seeing me there, he did not enter. Lady Yorke went to him, and he spoke in a low tone of voice to her. I could see that they were both angry and amazed. Then Lady Yorke spoke in a soothing voice, as if she were trying to comfort him. Shortly afterwards he went away, and she returned to the writing-table, with a crimson flush on her face, and an angry gleam in her eyes. I saw that her hands trembled so that she could not hold her pen. She flung it impatiently upon the table.

"You must write this for me, Miss Chester," she said, quickly: "I am vexed and grieved;" and she walked to the window, and stood for some minutes looking out.

I knew that it must be something about Mark's wife—my instinct told me so—but I could not solve the mystery. On the previous night she had been unusually gay and animated. Indeed, Lord Severne had hovered near her, as though he feared her high spirits might "carry her away." What then could be wrong this morning? His voice, when he spoke to Lady Yorke, was full of pain.

I was right; for, when the long line of carriages started with their loads of gay pleasure-seekers, Lady Severne was not there, and her husband's dark, handsome face was clouded and distressed. I was weak enough, as I watched him from afar off, to stretch out my hands to him with a longing cry—

"Oh, Mark, my dear, lost love, what has gone wrong with you?"

CHAPTER XIII.

Lady Yorke had left me very busy. I had many letters to write; I had several gifts of food and clothing to send away, some music and books to select, and I promised, if possible, to visit a poor woman who lay ill in one of the cottages outside Woodheaton. More work was before me, I feared, than I could get through, but I began with a good will. I tried hard to keep my thoughts from wandering, but they would stray to Lady Severne. Why had she not made one of the picnic party? She had so often talked about St. Ninian's Abbey, and wished to see it. Why had she remained at home? She could not be ill, or we should have heard of it; and I remembered that Lord Severne and Lady Yorke had spoken in anger rather than in sorrow. It was perfectly clear that there was a mystery, but what the nature of it was I could not imagine.

I remember how calm the day was. The sunshine was delightfully warm; and, as the drowsy, musical hum of the bees as they worked busily fell upon my ears, I thought of that beautiful line—

"The bee is betrothed to the broom,"

The birds were silent; there was but a faint murmur of the wind; the house was strangely still. Many of the servants had gone to the Abbey to be in attendance. I could hear quite plainly the rush of the river in the distance, and the tapping of leaves against the window-glass. Once or twice I fancied that I heard a most unusual sound—whether it was a laugh, a scream, or a moan, I could not tell, for it was gone almost as soon as heard. I went down to the library in search of something that I needed for my writing. On the grand staircase I met Lady Severne's maid, Martha Glyde, and I felt sure that she had the key of a bed-room in her hand. She was taking some beef-tea, I thought, up-stairs, for she was carrying a covered basin. Martha had always a grim smile for me. I was one of her favorites. I stopped impulsively.

"How is Lady Severne?" I asked; and the smile died in a moment. A hard, cold, impenetrable look came into the honest face. "I am sorry she is ill," I continued.

"She is not"—"ill," the woman was going to say. I am sure; but she checked herself and substituted "well."

"I am sorry," I said; "for I know she wanted to see St. Ninian's. What is it—cold or headache?"

"I must make haste," replied Martha, ignoring my question; "her ladyship is waiting;" and she brushed past me with far less ceremony than usual. "Good morning, miss," she added, hastily, as though she knew she had been abrupt.

An hour afterwards I had finished my writing and begun to pack the parcels of clothes that Lady Yorke had wished me to send away. My rooms were in the part of the house called the "Queen's wing;" Lady Yorke's suite of apartments was in the centre of the building; while the rooms set apart for the guests were in the western tower. Some of the clothes I wanted were in one of the wardrobes in a spare room. Crossing the broad corridors that led to the western tower, I was struck by the unusual silence. There was no sound of visitors or servants, but profound stillness—no hurry of footsteps—no voices.

I went to the cedar-room, opened the wardrobe, found what I required, and was on the point of re-closing it, when I heard a sound that almost froze the blood in my veins.

Was it a cry, a shriek? I could not tell—only that it was unearthly in its horror. I knew by the sound that it must have come from Lady Severne's apartments.

Half frantic with fear, the next minute I was rapping at her door.

"What is the matter, Lady Severne?" I cried. "Are you ill? Are you hurt?"

There was a moment of deathly silence. I turned the handle of the door, and found that it was securely bolted.

"Who is there?" Martha Glyde called out.

"It is I—Miss Chester. What is the matter?" I replied.

"Nothing," was the curt reply.

"But, Martha, I heard Lady Severne scream. I am sure she is ill. Do let me in."

The next moment Martha had half opened the door, and I saw her face; it was white and angry—yes, and alarmed.

"Miss Chester," she said—and the effort to speak calmly was a great one—"Do not try to come in. You will only make things worse. Believe me, there is nothing the matter. Lady Severne is often hysterical. She is not ill; but she would be annoyed if she knew you were here."

Every observer who walks the streets of a great city, and scans with intelligent eye the colorless faces of more than 50 per cent of the people he meets, can easily agree with us in the statement, that this age, which makes such drafts upon the working energies of the greater part of men in the intense pursuit of business, has destroyed in a proportionate degree the animal health and robust constitution. Nature, in this stage of exhaustion, cannot be restored of itself, but requires some stimulating tonic to strengthen and keep the system in regular order, and in Northrop & Lyman's Quinine Wine we have the exact remedy required. The peculiar operation of this medicine, in cases of general debility and nervous prostration, has undergone long and close observation, and it is believed it will never fail, if properly and judiciously administered. Prepared by Northrop & Lyman, Toronto, and sold by all druggists.

Jas. Shannon, Leaskdale, writes: For many years my wife was troubled with chilblains, and could get no relief until about two years ago; she was then not able to walk, and the pain was then so excruciating that she could not sleep at night. Your agent was then on his regular trip, and she asked him if he could cure her. He told her Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil was a sure cure. She tried it, and judge of her astonishment when in a few days, the pain was all allayed and the foot restored to its natural condition. It is also the best remedy for burns and bruises I ever used.

County Treasurer's Sale of Lands for Taxes.

COUNTY OF PETERBOROUGH } TO WIT:

BY VIRTUE OF A WARRANT, under the hand of the Warden and Seal of the County of Peterborough, and to me directed, bearing date the Tenth Day of October, in the year of our Lord One Thousand Eight Hundred and Eighty-four, I am commanded, under authority of the Statutes in that behalf, to levy on the lands hereinafter mentioned and described, for the Arrears of Taxes due thereon, with the Costs, as hereinafter specified, as directed by the said Act. These are therefore to give notice, that unless the said Arrears and Costs are sooner paid, I will proceed to sell by Public Auction, at the Court House in the Town of Peterborough, on TUESDAY, the TWENTIETH DAY of JANUARY, A.D. 1885, at the hour of Ten o'clock in the forenoon, the said Lands, or so much thereof as may be necessary for the Taxes, and all lawful charges incurred in and about such sale, and the collection of the Taxes:

VARIETIES.

Seventeen million dollars are required to pay U. S. pensions during the present quarter.

Don't suffer with indigestion, use Baxter's Mandrake Bitters. 49-4t

The Mudir of Dongola has just received the news that El Mahdi, the false prophet, is dead and that his followers are dying fast.

GOOD THE YEAR ROUND.—National Pills are a good blood Purifier, liver regulator, and mild purgative for all seasons. 48-4t

The public librarian of Toronto is instructing large meetings of mechanics in the use of the valuable works bearing on their respective trades.

THE SIGNS OF WORMS are well known, but the remedy is not always so well determined. Worm Powders will destroy them. 48-4t

J. T. Cooper a Hamilton man who was ill, was given a chloroform bottle to smell, when he swallowed its contents. He will recover in the future—state, perhaps.

FOR THE COMPLEXION.—For Tan, Pimples, Blotches, and all itching tumors of the skin, use Prof. Low's Magic Sulphur Soap. 48-4t

Prime Minister Ferry has given the powers officially information of the complete cessation of cholera in France, and has requested them to abolish their quarantine against France.

WORMS often cause serious illness. The cure is Dr. Low's Worm Syrup. It destroys and expels Worms effectually. 48-4t

A Vienna correspondent of the Mail gives an agonising account of the fearful atrocities perpetrated by the Turks upon the Bulgarians in Macedonia.

The reason why Arnica & Oil Liniment is so popular with the ladies is because it not only is very healing and soothing but its odor is not at all offensive. 49-4t

Mr. Moody, the evangelist, commenced his series of services last week in the Metropolitan church, Toronto, the building being densely packed on each occasion, and hundreds being turned away from the doors.

☞ All ladies should know that hoods, scarfs, ribbons and all fancy articles can be made any color wanted with Diamond Dyes. All the popular colors. 10c. at druggists. None can equal them. Wells, Richardson & Co., Burlington, Vt.

The date of the spontaneous reception to Sir John has been changed, at the request of Sir John, till some time in January. This will serve to make it more spontaneous, but scarcely less "national."

Prof. Barrett, of St. Lawrence county, N.Y., speaking of pulmonary diseases, says not one death occurs now where twenty died before Downs' Elixir was known. Over fifty years of constant success places Downs' Elixir at the head of the long list of cough remedies. 49-4t

In the parish of Ste. Scholastique, P. Q., twenty children have died from diptheria lately, and there are seventy cases reported now existing in the parish. This is even a worse visitation than Montreal is at present suffering by the epidemic.

Forty years' experience in every clime on earth, has proved Ayer's Cherry Pectoral to be the most reliable remedy for colds, coughs, and all lung diseases. Neglected colds often become incurable ailments. Deal with them in time, and prevent their becoming deep-seated in the system.

Thirty-seven valuable Durham cattle and seventhorses were burned to death Wednesday morning by a fire which destroyed the barn and outbuildings on the farm of Mr. Alfred Pipe, Guelph.

Neglected Colds, Pain in the Chest, and all diseases of the Lungs, are cured by using Allen's Lung Balsam. See adv.

"Hallo!" said a policeman, "what are you sitting out here in the cold for? Why don't you go in to the house? Have you lost the key?" "No," responded the disconsolate citizen; "I—hic—haven't lost the key, I've—hic—lost the keyhole."

Fever and Ague.

Do not throw money away on worthless remedies, when a Norman's Electric Belts will cure you. Use one and you will find immediate benefit. Every one is guaranteed genuine. Circular and consultation free. A. Norman, 4 Queen street East, Toronto. J. D. Tully, druggist, Peterborough. 48-4t

The Jacksonian doctrine, "To the victors belong the spoils," is being vigorously advocated by the Democratic press of the United States. It is growing quite evident that many Republican office-holders will have to march forth after March 4th.

A dilapidated Physique may be built up and fortified against disease by that incomparable promoter of digestion and fertiliser of the blood, Northrop & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery and Dyspeptic Cure. It counteracts Biliousness and Kidney complaints, overcomes bodily ailments special with the feebler sex, causes the bowels to act like clockwork, and is a safeguard against malaria and rheumatism.

A little child of seven or eight said that when the Bible speaks of "children's children," it must mean dolls.

A Double Purpose.

The popular remedy, Hagyard's Yellow Oil, is used both internally and externally, for aches, pains, colds, croup, rheumatism, deafness, and disease of an inflammatory nature. 50-2t.

The Italian Government has prepared a bill devoting $30,000,000 to sanitary works at Naples.

Well to Remember.

A stitch in time saves nine. Serious results oft follow a neglect of comparatively trifling bowel and blood disorders. Burdock Blood Bitters regulate and purify the stomach, bowels, liver, kidneys and the blood. Take it in time. 50-2t.

At the General Sessions, Toronto, the grand jury brought in a true bill against Rev. Father Egan, of Thornhill, for assaulting the old man McCague in church.

Easily Caught.

It is very easy to catch cold, but not so easy to cure it unless you use Hagyard's Pectoral Balsam, the best remedy for all throat, bronchial and lung troubles, coughs, colds and consumptive tendencies. 50-2t.

A pamphlet entitled "How to Live on a Shilling a Week," is being extensively sold in England. We don't see that there is any great mystery in that. It is very simple. Spend "tuppence" each week-day and nothing on Sunday.

The Best Combination.

The best combination of blood cleansing, regulating, health giving herbs, roots and bark enter into Burdock Blood Bitters—a purely vegetable remedy that cures diseases of the blood, liver and kidneys. 50-2t.

At Youngstown, Ohio, the jury in the case of Engineer John Fitzsimmons against the Pennsylvania Railway, in which he asked $50,000 damages for injuries received on the railroad making him a cripple for life, returned a verdict for Fitzsimmons for $37,500.

The History of Hundreds.

Mr. John Morrison, of St. Anna, N. S., was so seriously afflicted with a disease of the kidneys that dropsy was developing and his life was despaired of. Two bottles of Burdock Blood Bitters cured him after physicians had failed. 50-2t.

The hog cholera is making serious inroads in swine herds near Wheeling, West Virginia. Over 500 hogs have died, and thousands are affected. The loss is estimated at $70,000, and will be very much more unless the disease is checked. The Health Board is trying to enforce quarantine.

Scott's Emulsion of Pure

COD LIVER OIL, WITH HYPOPHOSPHITES,

For Bronchial Affections and Lung Troubles.

Dr. A. B. MOORE, Cedar Rapids, Mich., says: "I have used your Emulsion for several years, in my practice and have always found it thoroughly reliable, pleasant to to take, and most valuable for throat and lung troubles."

MAY LEAD TO TROUBLE.

There has been a fresh collision between Spanish and British authority. A Spanish cruiser captured a vessel in British waters, which was supposed to be a smuggler. The British thereupon sent an armed launch in pursuit. The vessel was re-captured and with its captor was towed into harbor. What the final result will be is not clear.

Woman's Suffering and Relief.

Those languid, tiresome sensations, causing you to feel scarcely able to be on your feet; that constant drain that is taking from your system all its former elasticity; driving the bloom from your cheeks; that continual strain upon your vital forces, rendering you irritable and fretful, can easily be removed by the use of that marvelous remedy, Hop Bitters. Irregularities and obstructions of your system are relieved at once, while the special cause of periodical pain are permanently removed. None receive so much benefit, and none are so profoundly grateful, and show such an interest in recommending Hop Bitters as women.

A Postal Card Story.

I was affected with kidney and urinary Trouble—

"For twelve years!"

After trying all the doctors and patent medicines I could hear of, I used two bottles of Hop

"Bitters;"

And I am perfectly cured. I keep it

"All the time!" respectfully, B. F. Booth, Saulsbury, Tenn.—May 4, 1883.

BRADFORD, PA., May 8, 1875.

It has cured me of several diseases, such as nervousness, sickness at the stomach, monthly troubles, etc. I have not seen a sick day in a year, since I took Hop Bitters. All my neighbors use them. MRS. FANNIE GREEN.

"A tour to Europe that cost me $3,000, done "me less good than one bottle of Hop Bitters; "they also cured my wife of fifteen years' nervous weakness, sleeplessness and dyspepsia," R. M., Auburn, N.Y.

SO. BLOOMINGVILLE, O., May 1, '79.

SIRS.—I have been suffering ten years, and I tried your Hop Bitters, and it done me more good than all the doctors.

Miss S. S. BOONE.

Baby Saved.

We are so thankful to say that our nursing baby was permanently cured of a dangerous and protracted constipation and irregularity of the bowels by the use of Hop Bitters by its mother, which at the same time restored her to perfect health and strength.

HOW IT IS DONE.

The Toronto Mail, in its padded cablograms, says of the Tralee dynamitard's outrage that "Mr. Hussey is agent for Lord Lansdowne, and immediately on hearing of the affair His Excellency cabled his sympathy and congratulations on the wonderful escape of Mr. Hussey and family."

We have the highest possible authority for saying that there is not one word of truth in the statement quoted. Our contemporary will only find the practise of inventing cablegrams safe so long as it leaves alone the names of those at present residing in Canada. No journal was ever so clevarly caught in the manufacture of false news as the Mail is in this case.

Saved from a Horrible Death.

Up to May last I had spent at least five hundred dollars for treatment by many of the best medical men without any benefit. My mouth and throat became badly ulcerated, sores breaking out on my neck and legs. I also suffered excruciatingly with Rheumatism, grew very despondent, and my best friends advised me that the icy hand of death was fast approaching. I caught at Shaker Blood Syrup like a drowning man at a straw. After taking two bottles I could feel a change for the better. The sores began to discharge freely, and Rheumatism to abate. When I had taken six bottles every sore had healed and my skin began to assume a natural appearance. I persisted until I had taken twelve bottles, and there is not a symptom of the disease remaining, and I feel as well as I ever did. I have gained twenty-one pounds in flesh, and my friends wonder at my improved condition. I have recommended it to many, and in every instance with complete success. I believe that Shaker Blood Syrup has saved me from a horrible death.

T. S. Cannon, South Boston, Mas.

In 1878 I was the victim of a terrible blood poison, and after being treated by three physicians was confined to my bed, not able to raise my hand to my head, spitting up clots of blood, and reduced in weight from one hundred to eighty-five to one hundred and thirty pounds. I then began the use of Shaker Blood Syrup, and in less than three months I was entirely well, weighed one hundred and ninty-six pounds and have never had a symptom of the disease since. If it had not been for Shaker Blood Syrup I believe I would have been in my grave.

Chas. Berger, Hoboken, N. J.

ENGLAND AND FRANCE.

A marked coolness has arisen between France and England, arising out of the Egyptian question. A special to the Mail says Right Hon. George J. Goschen, the envoy sent Paris, Berlin and Vienna with England's proposals on the Egyptian financial difficulty, was treated with discourtesy by Premier Ferry, who told him that he had no time to discuss the subject, and that England would hear from France through her Ambassador in London. As a consequence, Earl Granville has broken off his negotiations towards a settlement of the Chinese difficulty.

Wheeler's Tissue Phosphates.

In the modern keen race of business competition the dyspeptic is heavily handicapped, and is like a man fighting with one hand tied. The brain is disabled from insufficient phosphorized fat to carry on the mental processes, and the feeling of intellectual paralysis is very distressing, and a serious drawback to mental workers. There is poisoning from the products of indigestion getting into the blood, fogging the brain, exciting headaches, neuralgic pains and a general sense of discomfort, wretchedness and inability of consecutive thought. In Wheeler's Phosphates and Callaaya we have a remedy for stomach troubles as nearly a specific as quinine in ague.

SHOT BY MISTAKE.

Three men, while out deer-hunting in the township of Enniskillen, near Petrolia, Wednesday, got separated, and while struggling through the woods, one of them, John Millar, seeing something moving about one hundred yards off, drew his rifle on it and fired. It proved to be his missing companion, Joseph Woodhouse, whom Millar mistook for a deer. Medical aid was immediately summoned from Petrolia, but too late to be of any use, as Woodhouse expired shortly afterwards. The parties all belonged to Sarnia.

Childhood's Memories

Come back laden with the joys and pleasures of that dream time of life when sweet anticipation garnished with brightest hues the future as it stretched out before us. Only the pleasures hoped for us entered the heart then. But as we grow older, to one and other comes the awakening. If you should be troubled, not in heart, but in feet, with corns, and they make life miserable, go to the nearest drug store and buy a bottle of Putnam's Corn Extractor, the "sure, safe, and painless corn cure," and you will be quickly relieved, and happiness will ever after brighten your path. N. C. Polson & Co., Kingston, proprietors.

SUSSESS OF THE FRANCHISE BILL.

The Freeman's Journal (Irish) considers the Redistribution Bill an equitable measure, and says that Mr. Gladstone has fulfilled his pledge to Ireland. It also states that the Nationalists will now probably be able to carry some seats in England. The Irish Times rejoices that the leaders of both parties were wise enough to create no new Irish grievance, and says their plan was consistent. The Irish party has decided to support the Redistribution Bill.

An End to Bone Scraping.

Edward Shepherd, of Harriburg, Ill., says: "Having received so much benefit from Electric Bitters, I feel it my duty to let suffering humanity know it. Have had a running sore on my leg for eight years; my doctors told me I would have to have the bone scraped or leg amputated. I used, instead, three bottles of Electric Bitters and seven boxes Bucklen's Arnica Salve, and my leg is now sound and well."

Electric Bitters are sold at fifty cents a bottle, and Bucklen's Arnica Salve at 25c. per box by Taylor & McDonald.

Do not Forget it.

It is a fact that Nerviline cannot be surpassed by any combination for the relief of pain. The reason is a good one. Nerviline contains the best, most powerful, and the latest discovered remedies. It is a magic pain cure Rheumatism, stiff neck, cramps, neuralgia, colic, in fact all pain, internal, external, and local, are subdued in a few minutes. Go at once to any drug store and get a trial bottle. It will only cost you 10 cents, and you can at a small cost test the great pain cure, Polson's Nerviline. Large bottles only 25 cents.

ROBBING THE LABORER.

Sir Richard Cartwright, speaking at Montreal, said:—"I wish the people could get to know the fact that not a cent finds its way into the treasury at Ottawa, which is not taken, in some shape or other, out of the wages of the people; that for every dollar wasted at Ottawa, some laborer must lose the fruit of his day's toil; that for every million of dollars added to the annual expenditure, one day's labor is lost for every wage-earner throughout the Dominion."

RELIGIOUS RIOTS IN NEWFOUNDLAND.

The Orangemen at Conception Bay are developing new troubles. The house of the Catholic Redemptorist Father was assaulted with stones, and arches bearing Orange banners and symbols were erected near the Roman Catholic church, and the Catholic procession compelled to pass under them.

An Important Discovery.

The most important Discovery is that which brings the most good to the greatest number. Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, Coughs, and Colds, will preserve the health and save life, and is a priceless boon to the afflicted. Not only does it positively cure Consumption, but Coughs, Colds, Bronchitis, Asthma, Hoarseness, and all affections of the Throat Chest and Lungs, yield at once to its wonderful curative powers. If you doubt this, get a Trial Bottle Free, at Taylor & McDonald's Drug Store.

BRIGHT'S OPINION.

Hon. John Bright, in a letter, says:—"The recent contest in the United States has overthrown the party of protection and monopoly. It may prove a great blessing to the English nation on the American continent. When England and America shall have embraced the policy of free industry the whole fabric of monopoly the world over will totter to its fall." Every word of this enunciates an indisputable truth.

Butter Buyers

everywhere are refusing to take white, lardy-looking butter except at "grease" prices. Consumers want nothing but 'gilt-edged butter, and buyers therefore recommend their patrons to keep a uniform color throughout the year by using the Improved Butter Color made by Wells, Richardson & Co., Burlington, Vt. It is the only color that can be relied on to never injure the butter, and to always give the perfect color. Sold by druggists and merchants.

ONTARIO AND QUEBEC RAILWAY.

The prospectus for £1,970,000 five per cent. perpetual debenture stock of the Ontario and Quebec railway was issued to-day by Messrs. Morton, Rose & Co., at the minimum price of 92½ per cent. The prospectus states that the issue is secured upon the line, and has the guarantee of the Canada Pacific Railway Company.

Miss Mary Campbell, Elm, writes: "After taking four bottles of Northrop & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery and Dyspeptic Cure, I feel as if I were a new person. I had been troubled with Dyspepsia for a number of years, and tried many remedies, but of no avail, until I used this celebrated Dyspepsia Cure." For all impurities of the blood, sick headache, liver and kidney complaints, costiveness, etc., it is the best medicine known.

HOW THEY FIGHT THE FRENCH.

The Chinese tactics appear to be to retire and allow the French to follow them into the deadly passes of Tonquin, thus weakening their lengthened line. Too native princes is certain that China will re-conquer Tonquin.

Advice to Mothers.

Are you disturbed at night and broken of your rest by a sick child suffering and crying with pain of cutting teeth? If so, send at once and get a bottle of MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP FOR CHILDREN TEETHING. Its value is incalculable. It will relieve the poor little sufferer immediately. Depend upon it, mothers, there is no mistake about it. It cures dysentry and diarrhœa, regulates the stomach and bowels, cures wind colic, softens the gums, reduces inflammation, and gives tone and energy to the whole system. MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP FOR CHILDREN TEETHING is pleasant to the taste, and is the prescription of one of the oldest and best female nurses and physicians in the United States, and is for sale by all druggists throughout the world. Price 25 cents a bottle.

AYER'S Cherry Pectoral.

No other complaints are so insidious in their attack as those affecting the throat and lungs: none so trifled with by the majority of sufferers. The ordinary cough or cold, resulting perhaps from a trifling or unconscious exposure, is often but the beginning of a fatal sickness. AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL has well proven its efficacy in a forty years' fight with throat and lung diseases, and should be taken in all cases without delay.

A Terrible Cough Cured.

"In 1857 I took a severe cold, which affected my lungs. I had a terrible cough, and passed nights almost without sleep. The doctors gave me up. I tried AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, which relieved my lungs, induced sleep, and afforded me the rest necessary for the recovery of my strength. By the continued use of the PECTORAL a permanent cure was effected. I am now 62 years old, hale and hearty, and am satisfied your CHERRY PECTORAL saved me.

HORACE H. HERBROTHER."

Rockingham, Vt., July 15, 1882.

Croup.—A Mother's Tribute.

"While in the country last winter my little boy, three years old, was taken ill with croup; it seemed as if he would die from strangulation. One of the family suggested the use of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, a bottle of which was always kept in the house. This was tried in small and frequent doses, and to our delight in less than half an hour the little patient was breathing easily. The doctor said that the CHERRY PECTORAL had saved my darling's life. Can you wonder at our gratitude? Sincerely yours,

MRS. EMMA GEDNEY."

159 West 128th St., New York, May 16, 1882.

"I have used AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL in my family for several years, and do not hesitate to pronounce it the most effectual remedy for coughs and colds we have ever tried. A. J. CRANE."

Lake Crystal, Minn., March 15, 1882.

"I suffered for eight years from Bronchitis, and after trying many remedies with no success, I was cured by the use of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL. JOSEPH WALDEN."

Byhalia, Miss., April 5, 1882.

"I cannot say enough in praise of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, believing as I do that but for its use I should long since have died from lung troubles. E. BRAGDON."

Palestine, Texas, April 22, 1882.

No case of an affection of the throat or lungs exists which cannot be greatly relieved by the use of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, and it will always cure when the disease is not already beyond the control of medicine.

A Big Boiler.

The William Hamilton Manufacturing Company is turning out an enormous boiler for the Georgian Bay Lumber Company, for the steamer Mangenetewan. The boiler is 9 feet in diameter, 12 feet in length, and will weigh, when completed, about eleven tons. Though a "buster" in size, there is no danger of its giving away, for it will stand a pressure of 100 lbs to the square inch. It is creditable to the company that it receives the preference for such contracts, and creditable to the town that contains such an establishment.

The Mills' Burglary.

On Friday morning, at the Police Court, John Ferguson was put on trial for the Mills' burglary. Jos. Mills identified the goods produced. The chief evidence was that of Ritchie, a prisoner in jail for resisting a constable. He took notes of conversations in which Ferguson told him where the furs were concealed, and Chief Johnston completed the chain of evidence by swearing that he had acted on the information thus supplied by Ferguson and found the goods at the place indicated. Mr. Weller appeared for the Crown. Judgment was reserved for a week.

Andrew McNeil, to clear out his large stock of Winter Underclothing is offering it at a reduction of 20 per cent.

Y. M. C. A. Bible Class.

This class has just finished a very interesting course of lessons on the Exodus; the law—moral, civil and ceremonial—and winding up with the transfer of leadership from Moses to Joshua. The class seems to grow more interesting as the time goes on. The number of young men attending it is increasing rapidly. A course of lessons will now be taken from the Acts of the Apostles, which will be studied more in detail than the subjects treated heretofore. The leader of the class, Rev. A. H. Munro, and the officers of the association will be pleased to have any young men attend the class, which is held on Tuesday evening at 8 o'clock. The lessons now to be taken up will be specially valuable to Sunday school teachers, as the international series of lessons will be from the Acts of the Apostles, at the beginning of the year.

The Tavernier Dramatic Company announce the beginning of a season at the Opera House on Monday, December 15th, at the popular price of ten cents admission. The appearance here of an ordinary ten cent company would furnish no occasion for this notice. But the advent, at such a price, of a company of such reputation and talent, numbering twelve first class people, and playing the very best dramas, is a sign of the times, deserving more than passing mention. Further particulars of this interesting dramatic event will appear shortly.

THE CATHEDRAL BAZAAR.

A Fine Display and Excellent Success.

The long-announced and much-looked for bazaar in aid of the building fund of St. Peter's Cathedral, opened in the Opera House on Monday. The seating was removed and the hall transformed into a busy mart of beautiful wares of infinite variety. The decoration of the hall was beautifully accomplished, and the display of bright-hued goods of the most costly description reminded the spectator of the traditional splendours of an oriental bazaar. The splendid success of the display is due to the efforts almost entirely of the lady committees of the different wards, and from the business aptitude, administrative and executive ability displayed, no one can doubt that the gentler sex is in every way qualified to hold its own with the "lords of creation" in business circles or government aldepartments.

ONLY A VISIT

will give an adequate idea of the endless extent and beauty of the goods offered for sale. We can give a faint idea by submitting an imperfect schedule of the chief articles. If any omissions are made it is neither the fault of the ladies giving or the party receiving the information. While our reporter was taking his notes the tables were being re-arranged for the evening, and the shifting of articles must account for any omission.

The following is a list of the tables and the contributors to their principal contents In the following list the first mentioned is the article, next the donor, and lastly the value.

NO. 1 WARD TABLE.

The "Noble Ward," as it is called by Bishop Jamot, makes the following excellent showing the table being in charge of the following ladies: Mesdames Coughlin, Dunn, Hurley, Laplante, Carveth, Guerin, the two Misses Hurley and Miss Laplante: Farmer's plough, Mr. Peter Hamilton, $25; cistern pump, Messrs. Bishop Jamot, $24; silver dinner set, Mrs. George Goodwin, Ottawa, $40, besides, as the auctioneers say, "other articles too numerous to mention," making an additional value of between six and seven hundred dollars.

ASHBURNHAM.

The table for the village was in charge of Mesdames Peter Clancy, Geo. Buck, N. Mercier, P. Begley, Geroux and Sullivan, and contained: Fifty dollars in gold, festival fund; silver sugar and spoon bolder, Mrs. J. C. Sullivan, $9; silver water pitcher, Miss Hayes, Otonabee contributors, $12; silver cake basket, Miss Kate Egan, $8; cruet stand, Mrs. C. Young, $10; wax cross, Miss Ella Buck, $8; brocaded silk velvet wrapper, Miss Mercier, $12; bedroom set, Ashburnham ladies, $30; quilt, Miss Fanny Daly, $10; spread, Miss Kate Daly, $5; steel engraving, Mr. H. LeBrun, $8; blankets, Mr. E. B. Wilson, $5; carving knife and fork, Mr. M. Millar, $3; doll's bed, Mrs. Begley, $3; child's silk dress and pillow shams, Mrs. Robert Thorne, $6, and a fine variety of small articles of use and vertu

The value of the articles offered for sale amounted to $4,000. To use a business phrase, since the opening of the bazaar

"TRADE HAS BEEN BRISK," and the receipts at the several treasuries have been very gratifying. In addition to the established business stands, "transient traders"—persuasive young ladies armed with pass books and soliciting "chances" and "throws," of course, drove a thriving trade, and to those financial aids may be added the which was in the room adjoining the hall. There were three town tables, beautifully laid and decorated, presided over by Mesdames Phelan, Cavanagh, Carney, McCarty and Mc Glynn.

CULINARY BUREAU,

Mesdames Joseph Redmond and James Galvin, of Otonabee, opened four very fine tables. All the tables were well patronized, large numbers taking meals.

On Tuesday evening the bazaar was specially honored by DISTINGUISHED VISITORS.

—His Lordship the Bishop of Pembroke, His Lordship Bishop Jamot, Rev. Fathers Laurent, Lindsay, Keilty, Enniscrone and McEvoy, Fenelon Falls, were present. On Wednesday morning the clerical party took the morning train for Toronto, to attend the jubilee in honor of Ven. Archbishop Lynch.

During the evenings the City and Fire Brigade Band orchestras furnish music.

The bazaar will be open day and night till Saturday, inclusive.

The Christmas "Post."

We have received the Christmas edition of the Lindsay Post for 1884. It is a very fine one. In printing and make-up it might well serve as a model. It is an exceedingly creditable issue, and the business men of Lindsay will find their numerous advertisements therein a profitable investment, for it will be widely distributed and, we are sure, eagerly sought for.

St. Paul's Church.

An entertainment will be held at the opening of St. Paul's Sabbath School Rooms, on Wednesday, 17th December, at 8 o'clock p.m. The programme will consist of music and recitations. Admission, afternoon 10cts. evening 15cts.

Christmas Festival.

St. Luke's Church Sunday School will hold its annual Christmas festival in the Town Hall, Ashburnham, on Thursday next, December 18th. Tea will be served to the children of the school from 4.30 p.m. From half-past five until 7.30, there will be a tea-meeting for parents and friends of the School, including the congregation and strangers generally. Afterwards there will be a concert; singing of carols and distribution of prizes to the successful scholars. Tickets of admission to tea-meeting and concert only 25 cents.

Obituary.

On Wednesday morning Mr. Thomas Buck, one of the pioneer settlers of Otonabee, died (from injuries resulting from an accident met some time since) at the residence of his daughter, Mrs. Coughlin, Rubidge street. The deceased gentleman was 78 years of age, and came to Canada from Ireland in 1825—with the Peter Robinson party. After spending two years in Peterborough he removed to Otonabee, where he passed the remainder of his life, except during the latter part. Deceased was a highly respected resident of the township, in which he filled the office of assessor for fourteen consecutive years. He also took the census of the township in 1871. In politics he was a Conservative. His funeral will take place on Friday next at 1 o'clock p. m.

JUDICIAL SALE

OF VALUABLE

FARM PROPERTY.

BARRY vs. ALLEN.

Pursuant to a Judgment of the High Court of Justice, Chancery Division, made in the above action on the 13th day of October, 1884, there will be sold, with the approbation of C. A. Weller, Esquire, Master of the said Court at Peterborough, at his chambers in the Town of Peterborough, on Monday the 12th day of January

1885, at the hour of 2 o'clock p.m.,

The East Half of Lot Number 3, in the Seventh Concession of the Township of Douro, containing one hundred acres more or less.

The soil is well adapted for agricultural purposes. The land contains 8 or 9 acres of good hardwood, near the South West corner of said farm, pumps of hard water convenient to house and stables, and a never failing spring on the North West side, a log House and a summer kitchen, a barn 55 feet long by 24 feet wide with bayloft and shed attached, and a log stable capable of holding 3 or 4 spans of horses.

The farm is well fenced throughout with cedar rails. About 8 acres is seeded down with clover and timothy, and about 13 acres of fall wheat has been sown. The fall ploughing to the extent of some 24 acres has been done. The farm is situated about 7 miles from the Town of Peterborough, is well stoned and stumped and altogether is in good condition.

The property will be sold subject to a reserved bid. The purchaser will pay 10 per cent of the purchase money at the time of sale and the balance in two months without interest.

The other conditions of sale will be the standing conditions of the said Court.

Further information can be obtained gratis from John O'Meara, Vendor's Solicitor, Peterborough, W. H. Moore, Esq., Solicitor, Peterboro'. H. D. Hall, Esq., Solicitor, Peterborough.

Dated this 24th day of November, 1884.

THE POPULAR CARRIAGE BUILDERS.

While thanking the public for the liberal patronage extended to us since commencing business, we beg to inform the inhabitants of Peterborough and vicinity that we have now on hand for the winter season the most superb stock of elegant Sleighs and Cutters ever turned out in the Midland District. In excellence of material and workmanship, tasty upholstering and beauty of finish, they cannot be surpassed, and hardly equalled, in any city or town in Canada. None but the best and well-seasoned material is used, first-class workmen are only employed, and in purchasing our Sleighs or Cutters the customer will not only secure a thoroughly first-class article, but will find the prices most reasonable.

CARRIAGE TOPS.

To make our establishment complete, which was before the best equipped in the Midland District, we have added to it the manufacture of Carriage Tops, and for this purpose have associated with the present firm, in this department, MR A. GIBSON, who has especially fitted himself for the business by his experience in the leading top factories of the Dominion, and all work will be turned out under his personal supervision. Our premises have been specially fitted up for this business, and we make it a principle to use only the very best material. For Bows only Second-Growth White Ash is used, the Rails and Joints are made of the Best Wrought and Swede Iron, while only the very best American Rubber is used for the covers. These Tops combine the latest improvements, and will be found equal to the best, either for strength or durability, style or finish.

OUR HORSE-SHOEING, JOBBING, REPAIRING AND BLACKSMITHING DEPARTMENT

is especially complete. In prompt fulfilment of orders, and Good, Strong, Neat Work, perfect satisfaction is guaranteed. Our Horse-shoer has had a large experience in the best shops, and Tender-Footed Horses will be carefully treated and ultimately cured by having them shod with us.

Good and Stylish Work, at Right Prices, and Square Dealing is our motto.

Our work is its own praise and reward. We have turned out this season over 160 Wheeled Rigs, and all are giving the best of satisfaction and speak for themselves.

It will be to your own interest to visit our shops when you want to buy anything in our line.

Wishing all our customers and friends "A Merry 'Xmas and a Happy New Year."

FITZGERALD & STANGER beg to inform the public that they are still in the van, and have for public inspection, and in course of manufacture, for the Winter Season, a Splendid Stock of Sleighs and Cutters!

Of all Styles, which for Material, Workmanship, Style, Fashion and Finish, cannot be beaten.

Repairing and General Jobbing!

Now is the time to have everything made snug for the Winter. Call at FITZGERALD & STANGER'S, and get the necessary repairs to your Sleighs, Cutters, etc., for the Winter's work and driving. Special Attention to Repairs, and General Blacksmithing Well and Promptly Done.

LOOKING AHEAD to the coming season, Fitzgerald & Stanger are arranging to build during the winter, a Superb Stock of Stylish Buggies and Phaetons, and Solid and Substantial Waggons. If you are thinking of buying a new Buggy next season, call and see our stock and styles before you risk your money and your reputation for making a good bargain by going elsewhere.

FITZGERALD & STANGER thank the public for their liberal patronage in the past, and the excellent work they turn out explains why they do the carriage building for the Midland District. Their work speaks for itself, and they do not seek newspaper puffs for every wheelbarrow and push cart they turn out, they only get into print on account of something worth noticing.

With the Most Cordial "Compliments of the Season" to our Customers, we Remain, etc.,

THE MIDDLE STATE.

"Laicus" Reviews "Theodore."

To The Editor of THE EXAMINER.

At the present writing the controversy in hand is reduced to this compass: if there be a middle state, that is not purgatory; hence no purgatory. But we think it not unfair to submit that the reality of a middle state has been already satisfactorily demonstrated. Whence it remains now to prove that purgatory and a middle state are one and the same abode, and in every respect identical. Conceded it must needs be that no one may, of right, charge to the account of a Catholic, as such, over and above the essentials of his faith. What then is a Catholic obligated to believe in the regard of purgatory?

SIMPLY THAT THERE IS A PURGATORY

in which some souls suffer for a time ere they enter heaven. The nature and extent of the punishment being undefined, he may totally reject, if he chooses, the notion of fire as a penitory factor, and that whether material or immaterial. He may legitimately infer sense of pain arising from an enhanced knowledge of past ingratitude to God, mental anguish resulting from temporary separation from the supreme good, or any other like factor calculated to try and purify the soul. Here it may be contended that the middle state is a paradise of divine pleasantness; and, in that event, the time-out-of-mind custom of praying for the speedy relief of the souls therein detained, is truly inexpedient and uncalled for; since we have always with us in plentiful abundance, so to speak, very deserving objects of compassion, in whose behalf—on the foregoing hypothesis—our charitable inclinations and exertions might be more becomingly and exclusively applied. But, as a matter of sober fact, cleansed must be the soul from stain of sin, and, to accomplish which, the means required must correspond with the end proposed. Affliction we plainly perceive to be

THE INFALLIBLE PENALTY OF SIN ON EARTH.

Mental pain, even in this life, often obtains a degree of intensity than be better imagined than described. Will the rule respecting sin be changed for a debt carried over to the middle state? When, therefore, the only object of a middle state is to cleanse the soul from defilement, will not some species of suffering be absolutely requisite? And how is the necessary purification to be accomplished? By sitting quietly down and staring each the other out of countenance? By idly musing, looking on good naturedly and killing time until the anticipated happy moment arrives? By holding high carnival until such time as the celestial gates may chance to be ajar? would such a condition of things be characteristic of or creditable to a God of infinite wisdom and intelligence? Would that, moreover, serve the end proposed? Confessedly not. The essential

PURGATION, MUST BE MORE THAN FANCIFUL;

it must be actual and effective. Here then are presented the logical requirements of a middle state, and such and no more are the essentials of purgatory. Call it limbus, purgatory, middle state, intermediate abode, it matters not, the purpose and locality are precisely at one. The origin, the necessity of this temporary prison is based on solid reason. No well-intentioned person of ordinary intelligence will find fault with it. It suits the Creator, it must be acquiesced in by the creature. Designing sensationalists may magnify, vilify the intermediate state of purgation, but they know not what they do. Inconsiderately the fool hath said in his heart, there is no God. So also has he vauntingly affirmed that he is absolutely without spot or stain, so the end that he may be ready and properly fitted at any moment, to go direct to Heaven and enjoy the beatific vision of Almighty God. But he has not been believed by sensible people. It is considered that he will do exceedingly well to stop half way for a time, until his dross and nonsense are washed and purged away. Then it is thought that it will be quite time enough for him to intrude his among hosts angelical, and into realms of infinite bliss and holiness.

SAINTLY SELF-SUFFICIENCY

The remainder of the article will be devoted to the review, point by point, of a few recent specious fallacies, on a par with their charming predecessors respecting fact and reason. And, first, we turn our attention to Tertullian. Living in the age next succeeding the apostles, he pointedly testifies that, in his day a public practice prevailed among Christains of praying for the faithful departed, and adds that this custom was handed down by the fathers as an injunction of the apostles. And positively before Tertullian relapsed into heretical vagaries, did he give evidence of that general custom, a custom uninterruptedly continuing from the transition of the old law to the introduction of the new, and from the introduction of the new law down through a period of eighteen centuries. Now Tertullian's statement of the fact of that public practice passed unchallenged, despite the assurance which we have from his contemporaries, Irenæus and St. Justine that the early church was or change of doctrine, and prompt to expel any heretic from its immediate communion. Did Tertullian then, in thus publicly broaching the matter of praying for the dead, introduce any new doctrine? When he denied the legality of second marriages, refused to certain sinners grace of repentance, was he not forthwith condemned? Yet no word was spoken against his open avowal as to prayers for the dead. For this he was never, at any time, reprehended, although a man of marked ability and prominence. Genuine writings, moreover, are extant from Irenæus' disciple of Polycarp—who was in turn the disciple of St. John—from St. Justin, from St. Clement, all of whom were living during the lifetime of Tertullian; still no word of reproof is uttered against the same Tertullian for the distinct recital of this public custom. St. Clement expressed the fact more emphatically than Tertullian; Cyprian next voiced the same sentiment, and the like of Origen, Jerome, Chrysostom, Augustine, and so on in regular succession. Time and again yet public prayer for the dead continued, meanwhile, to flourish without shadow of opposition. And why, but that Tertullian had stated concerning this practice precisely what his forefathers were taught by the apostles. Not in all ecclesiastical history is there a fact better substantiated than the ancient and truly Christian habit of praying for the souls of the faithful departed.

EXTREMELY JEALOUS OF ANY INNOVATION

HERESIES WERE PUT FORTH AND SILENCED;

Were prayers composed and offered up for the martyrs and the mother of Christ? Never! The statement is unqualifiedly fals. Any man with a particle of sense ought to know better—and especially this of a man who affects to expound Catholic doctrine, presumably for his own amazement. St. Cyril, of Jerusalem, gives no uncertain testimony. He says (Catech. 110 n., p. 328, ed. Ben.) that the Christians named the martyrs to commend themselves to their prayers, then mentioned the faithful departed to pray for them. And thus teaches that writes upon the subject. Moreover, sarcastic allusions to the Virgin Mary are gratuitous, wholly uncalled for, and highly discreditable to any man, be he pagan or Christian. Greatly privileged, as she is, Catholics value her intercession above that of any other saint; and her merits are invariably referred to our Saviour, as the one necessary source of all power, sanctity and happiness. In this light do Catholics regard her, and no otherwise. But how can one, who does not show becoming respect for the mother of Christ, religiously and consistently esteem himself a true servant of her divine Son?

Now, behold, Augustine and his fellow-fathers are made to pray alike for souls in hell and heaven. After this, what? Imagine, for a moment, the great St. Augustine piteously supplicating God in behalf of the souls forever confirmed in glory. On the other hand, picture him interceding to the Deity for the mortal and eternal enemies of Almighty God. All this may be greedily swallowed down at a gulp, and with apparent zest, if only a middle state may thereby be avoided. Here we are furnished with of straining at a gnat and swallowing a camel. Now we are informed that "limbus was left empty when the Messiah came." Again we are reminded that the intermediate abode is a "huge imposture." Now a middle state bobs up serenely. Again it is magically annihilated. Sometimes limbus is vigorously assaulted; at other times a middle state is violently assailed; and, again, a fiercer onslaught is directed against unoffending purgatory. Ovid, himself, could not keep track of the metamorphoses presented for our consideration. Compassion is kindly had, however, for the deluded Augustine—he acted through "mistaken charity." A "fossil," a "musty record of the past," he yet intended better than he performed. Alas! unhappy Augustine. Could you have had the benefit of timely acquaintance with the equivalent of a certain type of so-called modern refinement and civilization, then were you, indeed, inestimably blessed; then were you no longer a pitiable victim of superstition and imposture. But suffer Augustine, for a moment,

TO SPEAK FOR HIMSELF.

"Before the most severe and last judgment," says he, "some undergo temporal punishments in this life; some after death; and others both now and then. But not all that suffer after death are condemned to eternal flames. What is not expiated in this life to some, is remitted in the life to come, so that they may escape punishment." And, again, "if they had built," etc., they would be secured from both fires; not only from that fire in which the wicked shall be punished, but likewise from that fire which will purify those who shall be saved by fire." Has not Augustine more than "hinted at the Romish purgatory"? Has he not expressly and unequivocally affirmed the doctrine in all its length, breadth and dimensions? Did he not pray for his saintly and deceased mother? Did he not specially request the prayers of his friends for the repose of his soul, after he should be numbered with his fathers? Is there a particle of doubt that Augustine did view purgatory and prayer for the dead in exact conformance—save that he put the case even stronger than now required—with Catholic doctrine of to-day? Most emphatically, no!

THE NOISY BOYS ARE COMING OUT.

"THE LANG BOYS."

To the Editor of THE EXAMINER:

DEAR SIR,—What does your Keene correspondent mean when he says in your last issue, that "the article in Keene notes of a fortnight ago, headed "a new venture," was not quite as bad as reported at the time?" Does he mean his article was not as bad, or that the venture was not as bad? He says the "article," but I suppose he means the "venture." He must be a green one to write after that fashion. He also says that I am quite astray in my suspicion of who the correspondent is. I am not aware that I said anything in my letter about who he is, or my suspicions. He is surely not answering mere town talk; he cannot be so verdant as that.

But in the last part of his item we find these words: "we never found fault with the Lang boys either directly or otherwise." Now Mr. Editor, if your correspondent and your readers will turn to his effusion in your issue of Nov. 20th, he and they will find these sentences: "The Lang boys were out in full force and acted in as disorderly a manner as possible. It is time a stop was put to such doings." In my letter, when referring to gossip mongers, I said, "and these creatures are always hypocrites," and here from his own pen we have a proof of it. How can you believe a man in anything, who, after this fashion, will deliberately pen a falsehood?

One thing more I would notice before closing this, and that is, that your correspondent in each of his letters gives Dr. Shaw a nine, dear bit of a puff. I think my friend Dr. Harrison and myself will have to get a correspondent too, or else be correspondents for ourselves; it is such a neat, cheap, little way of advertising, even if it is somewhat unprofessional.

Yours, etc.,
JOHN MARSH, M. D.

AN ENQUIRY.

To the Editor of THE EXAMINER:

DEAR SIR,—Apropos of the religious discussion raging in your columns, might I ask of some learned Roman Catholic the unequivocal meaning of this, copied from the Catholic Record, and headed "Bothwell Bazaar":—"Every person sending $1 will be entitled to 168 chances to win prizes worth from $5 to $48 in gold, and will also receive the benefit of 100 masses. Address, Rev. A. McKeon, Bothwell, Ont.

Could an escaped unrepentant drunkard receive the benefit aforesaid, if he planked down his glittering gold, of which metal the key of salvation appears to be made?

Yours truly, COMMON SENSE.

THE MIDDLE STATE.

"Theodore" Reviews "Laicus."

To the Editor of THE EXAMINER:

SIR,—To me it seems time that this question should be narrowed down somewhat, and that "Laicus" would show himself inclined to come to something more definite and to the point than he has hitherto advanced.

The wild, rambling confusion in which he writes might go on till doom-day without any good result. His groundless assertions and his jumbling together of things which differ, are evidently not without design. If he can mystify and palm off one thing for another, his point is gained. Otherwise he has no case, and he knows it. A gap of two or three hundred years in a "title deed" is nothing to him. He can clear it as a hound and leave us to admire his agility.

He made choice of his own ground and supporting his position by certain proofs. Those proofs have been examined one by one, and on sound, incontrovertible Roman Catholic grounds, have been shown to be fallacious and unless he has something new to advance—instead of clinging to his old, rotten, sinking craft, shouting for help and pleading the names and distorted sayings of men who have long since repudiated both him and his purgatory—it would be more becoming to him, either at once to forsake the wreck, or, if resolved to perish, to go down with it in silence.

That I may help him to a decision, I ask his attention to three points which might decide the issue, and beg that he will give them a careful and candid consideration. The first is in reference to the canonicity of the apocrypha, which is his sheet anchor for purgatory. It is claimed by him that so early as the third Council of Carthage the apocryphal books were received into the canon, and that, from that time on to the Council of Trent, they had in the church with the admitted divinely inspired books. This is his contention.

In opposition I put in two facts, which he may get rid of as best he can. And first—The Eastern or Greek church never received the apocryphal books into their canon, and they repudiate them still. This is the united testimony of all their records and of history. Second,—The Romish church did not receive the apocryphal books as canonical up to the Council of Trent in 1545, and the the proof of the fact is this: the preface and canon of Jerome, which excluded the apocrypha, and which warned the reader carefully to distinguish between it and the canonical books, invariably, and by the "unanimous consent" of popes, and fathers, and councils, appeared on the front pages of every Bible, whether written or printed, from the time of Augustine and Jerome, in the beginning of the 5th century on to Council of Trent—a space of upwards of eleven hundred years. What could be the meaning of Jerome's preface and canon in the front of those Bibles, if not to tell us that Rome, in her infallibility, agreed with him in his distinction between canonical and apocryphal books.

These two facts, which cannot be denied, speak for themselves. They at once on the subject, and silence the contention of "Laicus" for ever.

PUT AN END TO ALL SPECULATION

And it may impress this noble champion of the hot bath,—with the importance and value of Jerome and his "preface and canon" to Rome—to turn to his "Breviary" and there see that, in the prayer which every priest in Roman obedience is bound to repeat on the 30th day of September in each year, God is thanked for "having raised up to the church the blessed and illustrious doctor, Jerome, for the expounding of Scripture." What apology has "Laicus" now to offer for the unequalled presumption of that "caucus" of his church—fifty-three members in all—which met at Trent on the 8th of April, 1545, and declared that the writings of a few unknown men were equal in authority to the Word of God, and that every man who would doubt their verdict was accursed?

The next point regards purgatory proper. It has already been shown from the practice of the early Christians that prayer for the dead that only two receptacles for souls after death were known to them—one of happiness for the good, and one of torment for the bad. There was no knowledge of a place for the reformation or cleansing of any soul while the body lay in the grave, and there is no trace of prayer having been offered on behalf of souls in any such condition. And will "Laicus" tell us when and by whose authority the third place—his purgatory—the intermediate cabinet claimed to be in possession of Rome—was fitted up and opened for the reception of souls? And, further, by whose authority souls were doomed to go there at all? and on whose authority works the prayers and payments of the living and the sufferings of the disembodied soul—are, in purgatory, made available for what the Scriptures say

DID NOT IMPLY A PURGATORY;

GRACE ONLY CAN SECURE?

And as the sin is against God, and measured only by God's law, and God only has the right to say how the sinner is to be freed from both guilt and defilement, let "Laicus" understand that nothing but the Word of God shall be accepted as authority in the case. The conjectures, and thoughts, and practices, and superstitions of men will not be received, and any effort in that direction, unless resting on the plain Word of God, will be rejected as apocryphal.

The third point to which I ask attention is the Romish distinction between "venial" and "mortal" sin; and, I ask, on what authority the distinction is made? Where—in the law which discovers and condemns sin, or in the remedy which God has provided in Christ—is there room left or sanction given for the distinction?

I read in God's Word, "The soul that sinneth it shall die"; "The wages of sin is death"; and again, "the free gift of God is eternal life through Jesus Christ our Lord"—"in whom we have redemption through His blood, the forgiveness of sins according to the riches of his grace"; "For by one offering He hath perfected forever them that are sanctified." Thus the law is on the one hand the one complete and undivided power which condemns and exacts the penalty, and the atonement of Jesus is, on the other,

THE ONE COMPLETE AND ALL-EFFECTUAL REMEDY.

I can discover nothing in God's Word that comes in between these two. The law from beginning to end demands the penalty, "death," and Jesus, our substitute from beginning to end, must satisfy, and so it is written, "Believe on the Lord Jesus Christ and thou shalt be saved"; "The blood of Jesus cleanseth from all sin."

"Laicus" has now a clear issue before him, and if he is worthy of being the champion of such a noble cause he can in a few sentences dispose of the whole matter. But let him give names, dates, book, chapter, verse or page, when he cites his authorities, that they can be fairly examined, and that there may be no room left for forgeries or humbug. Any evasion of the questions noted will at once be interpreted as failure and proclaimed accordingly.

When "Laicus" has disposed of this I may have something further to say.

THE SANITARY CRAZE.

To the Editor of THE EXAMINER:

DEAR SIR,—This continual clamour, kept up by a few individuals, about the sewerage of Peterborough and about Spaulding's Bay, is becoming monotonous. And just now, on the eve of another municipal election, it might be well for the ratepayers to take a general view of both sides of the questions at issue. It will be admitted on all hands that the wisest course for Peterborough to pursue, in the matter of public works, will be to keep down all unnecessary expenditure, and to nip in the bud everything which has the appearance of a Tammany ring about it. Now, it can be easily remembered that in the early part of last summer a few interested individuals, in this town, got up a hole-and-corner meeting, and, by a fluke, appointed a Medical Health Officer, at a salary of two hundred dollars a year. They did this without in any way consulting the ratepayers who, in the long run must foot the bill. And everybody knows that in Peterborough this office is a useless sinecure. And the evil of this appointment is only in its infancy; for it is only a few days ago that another physician advised to appoint a number of medical men on the Board of Health. Does he, too, want to get his finger in the corporation pie, at a salary of two hundred dollors a year for doing nothing? But it is the same old story, that whenever a door for pecuniation is opened, in money matters, there will be no end to the number of applicants for admission.

Fellow-citizens, arouse from your indifference, and at the approaching election let us vote for no Councillor who will not pledge himself to use all his influence against the appointment of a Medical Health Officer, as such appointment already shows signs of wire-pulling and unnecessary waste of the people's money. Let any one read the report made out by the Medical Health Officer a short time ago, and he will find some ideas in that report which are rather suggestive. For instance, we are told that more than one hundred wells had been analysed, and that in many of these wells the water was impure. Well, what then? Was any remedy pointed out by the Medical Health Officer? No, not one. But, don't you see that some prominent members of the Board of Health are also interested in the water works, and if the citizens can be scared, through the Medical Health Officer, about "bright sparkling" water filled with germs of disease, they might by this means be driven at once to apply for the water works. This part of the report, to say the least has rather a suspicious appearance. We have not one word to say against the Medical Health Officer personally, but it does appear to many people that he may have been used in favor of the water works. Now the only safe course is to abolish the office at once, before it becomes a dangerous and expensive bureaucracy.

In another part of his report the Medical Health Officer intimates that he will write on sanitary subjects next summer, and that the citizens shall have this literature placed within their reach. Now, with all due respect to that gentleman, we beg of him not to write. We can put up with a mild epidemic of measles, or scarletina, or even with the Chairman of the Board of Health, or with any other reasonable scourge, but please don't inflict any more writing on us. It is to be hoped that the good sense of the town of Peterborough will put a stop to such tomfoolery. It is amusing to see with what amazing coolness Mr. Andrew McNeil, merchant tailor, on George street, tries to run the town of Peterborough on sanitary matters. This gentleman is not assessed as a treasholder, and yet he has more to say about the construction of public works and the expenditure of vast sums of money than all the property owners in Peterborough.

Of course, if the town should be swamped with enormous debt and heavy taxes, Mr. McNeil could at any time pick up his goose and leave, without much trouble to himself or to any body else. But property holders are not so well situated. They must stand their ground and face the difficulty; and hence the unwillingness of wealthy men to mortgage the town of Peterborough at the bidding of every irresponsible cock-a-doodle who may take a notion to air his opinions at others people's expense. It appears that Mr. McNeil, a short time ago, invited the medical gentlemen in town to write a short essay on the sewerage of Peterborough, and also in reference to Spaulding's Bay, and it turned out that six out of sixteen responded to the invitation, and here are their opinions of Spaulding's Bay: "A fever-breeding pest hole." "A great nuisance." "A hot-bed of disease." "A plague spot." "The worst fever bed in Canada." Now, with all respect for these gentlemen, is it not a strange commentary on their learned opinions, that all the inhabitants who live immediately around Spaulding's Bay are just as healthy and as free from malarial diseases and all other diseases as the people in any other part of Peterborough. Now, if the Bay is as dangerous to health as it is said to be, how can we account for such a wide discrepancy between the learned opinions of the medical gentlemen who wrote to Mr. McNeil on this subject, and the actual facts of the case? The people around the Bay tell us that it is as healthy there as any other part of the town, and if the statement of these people be correct, then it follows that the six medical gentlemen who favored Mr. McNeil with their views on the matter must be all mistaken, or the people around Spaulding's Bay don't know when they are sick.

Indeed, one of the medical writers admits the healthy condition of the inhabitants by assuming that the west wind has something to do with it. Here is his statement:—"The residents of the town should thank a kind Providence for the fair exemption they have had from continued disease in providing that, as a rule, westerly winds prevail during the summer, and carry the malaria and offensive effluvia generated from the decaying matter about the bay across the lake, instead of into their homes."

Now, I would ask your readers, is it fair, is it reasonable, is it good common sense, to suppose that a kind Providence would start a west wind and keep it blowing every summer, to accommodate a few people about Spaulding's Bay and leave a far greater number exposed across the lake, where the malaria is said to be wafted? Try it again, gentlemen; perhaps there was a screw loose in your theoretical machines, or perhaps you have got Spaulding's Bay on the brain, or, thirdly, perhaps, you are affected with the sanitary craze, by forming too close an alliance with the gallant knight of the thimble and scissors. Whatever may be the cause of your medical aberrations, the facts in this instance are clearly against your theories, and you know, a fact is stronger than a theory and can down it every time.

Hoping we may have a Council next year which will reorganize the Board of Health and abolish all unnecessary offices,

I remain, etc.,

"He who is taken to present duty," says Henry Ward Beecher, "breaks a thread in the loom, and will find the flaw when he may have forgotten its cause." A case in point occurs to us. Mr. Wm. Ryder, of 87 Jefferson street, Buffalo, N. Y., recently told a reporter that, "I had a large abscess on each leg, that kept continually discharging for twenty years. Nothing did me any good except Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery. It cured me. Here is a volume expressed in a few words. Mr. Ryder's experience is entitled to our readers' careful consideration.—The Sun.

Discourse by Rev. T. DeWitt Talmage.

Thanksgiving Day, 1884.

"Another door towards the south." Ezekiel xli-ii.

"On the south three gates." Rev. xxi-13

King George of England at the close of the revolutionary war in which he had lost the 13 colonies, set apart a day of national thanksgiving for the return of peace. A chaplain of the King asked him: "Are you going to give thanks for the loss of the 13 brightest jewels of your crown?" "No, not for that," answered the King. "Because so many millions have been added to the national debt?" "No, not for that," answered the King. "Because so many thousands have been slain, though belonging to the same race and religion?" "No, not for that," answered the King. "For what then," insisted the chaplain, "does your majesty want us to give thanks?" "Thank God," vehemently cried the King, "thank God that it is not any worse." And if the year now past has been to any of you misfortune or calamity or bereavement, you have so many mercies left that you ought to thank God that things are no worse with you than they are.

But to vast throngs of us it has been a year of overwhelming mercy, and as individuals, as a church, as a nation, we keep jubilee, and would to God that our habit of gratitude might become as fixed as that of St. Felix, the monk of Cantalice, who, on all occasions, whether stopping a fight or soliciting alms for the monastery, cried out, "Deo Gratias," thanks be to God, until the church called him Brother Deo Gratias, and the children along the streets hailed him as Father Deo Gratias. After a year in which other nations have felt the scourge of epidemic but this land has been spared, after emerging unhurt from a presidential contest in which the blind Samson of partisanship threatened to pull down the pillars of state and to leave the temple flat in the dust, and after 365 more days of kindness from our God, we are here. In the graceful and splendid decoration of this church to-day, with the grains and fruits of all sections, we have an American congress of national products. Delegations from North, South, East and West. Here are delegations with white hair from the cotton fields of the South. Here are those with auburn beard and locks from the golden wheat fields of the North. Here are fruits that in their round cheeks have the blush of the setting sun from the West. Behold this moss from Southern woods, the bridal veil of the forest. Behold these plumes of pampas from the far West. Behold this rice from the Carolinas, and the grapes and pears from California. Behold these apples from Connecticut, the land of steady habits. Behold these great banana trees, standing sentinel at either end of the platform, by last steamer from Florida, but the fruit this moment growing, and one of them in blossom of resplendent orb. Behold this coal from Pennsylvania, and this Iron ore from Idaho, and this silver from Nevada, and this lead from Colorado, and this copper from Lake Superior, and these great blossoms of New York and New Jersey and Long Island cereal luxuriance. Harvests of 1884 looking down upon all their predecessors. The wave of temporal blessings has dashed to the top of the nation's corn bin.

Aye, aye, the prosperity of this nation has rolled up until the crest of the wave has broken and recoiled upon itself. More corn and wheat and cotton and rice than we can find profitable markets for. More manufactured goods than we can dispose of. The grain markets are glutted, and the factories by the hundred stopped or run with only half the spindles harnessed, and wages are cut down because the supply has swamped the demand. Nothing is the matter to-day with this country but over-production and under consumption. Where there is work for ten there are twenty who offer their services, and the hundred thousand wheels of American industry are slowing up, not because there is too little, but because there is too much. God has snowed upon the track of the nation such an accumulation of prosperity that the engine which draws the train cannot plough any further through. The American nation is being chocked to death with surplus of production and manufactures. Too much wheat, too much corn, too much cotton, too much fruit, too much coal and iron, too much hardware, too many dry goods, too many shoes, too many carpets, too many philosophical instruments, too many cattle, too many sheep, too many artisans, too many merchants, too many lawyers, too many doctors, and, from the large numbers of excellent men in my own profession without settlements, some might think too many ministers.

The deluge of supply rises 15 cubics high above the mountains of demand. The load of national wealth is greater than the team can draw. The man who dies for lack of a crust of bread is no worse off than the man who is smothered to death in a wheat bin. The nation suffers to-day not of marasmus, but from plethora, not from consumption, but from apoplexy. What shall we do?

"Well," some say, "let us pack our trunks and move East, North or West." Going east to Europe would be exodus into starvation. The avalanche of population from Europe assures us that that country is already overcrowded. We all know that this is the best country to live in. I have eight hundred and fifty thousand reasons for saying so—eight hundred and fifty thousand people coming in one year from the other side of the sea to our country. If this had not been the best country to live in there would have been 850,000 Americans going to the other side of the Atlantic. Shall we go north, already the busiest hives of competition are along the St. Lawrence and the Androscoggin and the Penobscot and the woods of Maine and the waters of the lake chain answer "no thoroughfare."

Shall we move West? There is no West. The emigrants passed it years ago. Across the Mississippi, across the Missouri, Fremont's exploring expedition put their spurs into their horses' flanks and chased the West from the Rocky Mountains to the Sierra Nevadas, while the forty miners from California landing from their ships on the Pacific beach took the West in the rear. And the workmen of the Union Pacific and Northern Pacific and Southern Pacific came upon it with their spades, and the giant West has ceased. And though many might suppose that it might be said of it as of Moses: "No man knoweth of his sepulchre to this day," I think that the Yosemite Valley is its sarcophagus with El Capitan for the headstone and Cathedra Rock at the foot. The millions of foreign population that are yet to cross the sea for America will soon fill all the area between the Atlantic and the Pacific beaches.

But in the words of my text I now declare "Another door toward the South." And, when I say south, I do not mean the Southern States of the nation, but I mean a magnificent infinity of opportunity beyond Portuguese America, the fifteen Spanish American republics and the islands of the South Pacific. Through that door will come the complete and glorious relief for all this oversupply. It will come within ten years, within five, within three. On the 16th of next month at the New Orleans exposition, that door will begin to swing open. And if the Government of the United States fully appreciate the opportunity, and the people will help, the highest water mark that the wave of our national prosperity has ever reached, will be a hundred feet under what shall speedily be the full tide of commercial, agricultural, manufacturing, literary and moral success. In the name of God I proclaim Revolution. Not by sword or dynamite or nitroglycerine or giant powder, but by plough and saw and yard-stick and factory hands and new lines of steamers and whole nations rising up to greet our nation in commercial amity. Our people, or the most part, sit in appalling ignorance of an opportunity such as we never spread out before any nation since the morning stars sang together. "On the south three gates." Yes, three thousand gates, and all of them wide open.

I have had facts put before me enough to keep a man awake nights because of their startling significance, and statistics so loaded with meaning that they move with the splendor and power of the Iron Duke's army at Waterloo—Scotch Greys and the Life Guards and Pack's infantry and the Batallions of Ponsoby and Ryland and the Dutch, Belgians and Highlanders sounding their bagpipes. Aye! Aye! It is a bloodless Waterloo which will decide the commercial destiny of North and South America. The simple fact is that the vast realms of population in the tropics are buying from trans-Atlantic nations almost everything, and from us almost nothing, and the tide ought to turn, and the tide will turn, and I preach this sermon to help it to turn. Your ears will tingle with the intensity of this recital. In 1880 five billion and three hundred and sixty-nine million dollars worth of goods manufactured in the United States and only two per cent taken by foreign markets. It is a marvel that American manufactories are not as dead as the proverbial door-nail.

On the south of us are regions nearly three times as large as the United States, which are without manufactures, without woolen goods, without agricultural implements, without telegraphs, without telephones, without shoes, without sewing machines, without ten thousand things that we have and they must have. Where shall they get them? They are getting them from three thousand miles away, and we at the next door from them are buried under a surplus of these very things. They are able to trade with us, for their sugars and coffees and spices and fruits and valuable woods we need as much as they need our products. But look and then hang your heads at the statement that, while our next door neighbors, the southern republics and Brazil and neighboring colonies import six hundred and seventy-five million dollars worth of goods in a year, only one hundred and twenty-six million are from the United States. Only one-fifth of the trade is ours, European nations taking the four fingers and leaving us the poor thumb. The sister republics on the American continent have a foreign commerce amounting to four hundred and twenty eight million dollars, of which we have only the feeble and paltry sum of sixty-three millions. There is nothing but a comparative ferry between this country and the West Indies, while there are racing seas of long voyage between them and other continents. Yet they import one hundred and sixteen million dollars worth of goods a year, and only thirty-one millions come from us.

This Southern door will be fastened open the more firmly by the tides of travel diverted from Europe to the land of the Aztecs. Much of the one hundred and six million dollars yearly expended by Americans in Europe will be expended in southern exploration, in looking at some of the ruins of the 47 cities that Stevens, the traveller, found a little way apart, and walking through the corridors and under the arches and in the great doorways and over the miracles of Mosaic and along by the monumental glories of civilization, and ancient America will with cold lips of stone kiss the warm lips of modern America, and to have seen the Andes and the Popocatepetl will be deemed as important as to have seen the Pyrenean and Balkan ranges. So there will be fewer people spoilt by foreign travel, and in our midst less poor imitation of the French shrug, and the intentional hesitancy of the brainless swell. The fact is, that there are more people made fools of by European travel than any other way, and though sensible when they embark, they return with a collar, and a cravat, and a shoe, and a coat, and a pronunciation and a contempt for American institutions, and a bend in the elbow that makes one believe in evolution backward from man to ape. Of the thirty thousand Americans who now cross the sea annually, there will be thousands, who on pleasure and business, visit the tropics, and so tourist, and merchant, and scientist, and capitalist will all help in this national development.

I wish that somehow our next Congress might take the one hundred million dollars of surplus in the United States Treasury, which the republicans did not steal, and before the democrats get a chance to steal it, and in some way expend it in establishing new lines of shipping between the ports of North and South America, and in dredging their harbors, and in building telegraphic wires and in quickening all that glorious consummation which is sure to come. Go on, gentlemen, discussing your high tariff, and low tariff, and horizontal tariff, and no tariff at all, until the question is as malodorous as the mess bunkers that the Long Island fisher men throw on the fields to enrich the farms. But meanwhile God is going to prepare for the rescue of the millions of hard-working men and women of this country, who have been hungry and cold long enough, and this door of the South open is going to let in on them a summer of bright warm prosperity. In anticipation I nail on the front door of this nation an advertisement:

Wanted—One hundred thousand men to build South American railways, long as from here to San Francisco.

Wanted—5000 telegraph opererators.

Wanted—Twenty million dollars worth of dry goods and hardware from New York.

Wanted—All the clocks you can make at New Haven, and all the shoes you can manufacture at Natick, and all the brains you can spare from Boston, and all the bells you can mould at Troy, and all the McCormick reaping machines you can fashion at Chicago, and all the hams you can furnish from Cincinnati, the railroad iron you can send from Boorlton and Pittsburg.

Wanted!

Wanted right away!

Wanted by express, wanted by rail train, wanted by steamer!

Wanted—Lawyers to plead our cases!

Wanted—Doctors to cure our sick!

Wanted—Ministers to evangelise our population!

Wanted—Professors to establish universities!

"Another door toward the south. On the south three gates!" Lift up your heads ye depressed souls and let the north come south and the south come south! Correct all for ever the geographical blunder of the centurion which says there are five continents when there are only four—Europe, Asia, Africa and America. Our Artic and Antarctic are only the crystal latches on front and back gate of the one palace yard. Aye, the continent is one living queen of beauty and power. Though the continent be narrow at the waist, if you girdle it at Aspinwall it is still one living Queen upon whom God hath put the richest diadem of all the world. On this Thanksgiving day I thought I would tell you of your inheritance. Henceforth put this in your prayers, tune it into your doxologies, and let capitalists and statesmen lift it into their place. What is the use of gathering a whole fleet of laden steamers at the mouth of a small river, trying to pile them in, jostling and stack fast, when there is the great, wide Southern sea with room for the largest merchantman to spread sail or drop anchor?

Without this opening prospect this day would be very dark for those of us who are interested in the laboring classes. To-day one million people in the country are out of work. Ten per cent of the laboring classes with nothing to do but suffer, and another twenty per cent toiling on half wages. I shall not take my seat at the Thanksgiving table to-day until I look at the bare plates of these multitudes, and their empty wardrobes, and invoke upon the mercy of God and the generous consideration of those in comfortable circumstances. Congress assembles next week, and let it waste no time on abstractions, but, by some swift enactment, open this door south and all the other legitimate doors for the relief of men who can not get work and who stand in this November cold wringing their numb fingers, with their helpless families at their back. Hungry men and women never have been quiet and never will be quiet and never ought to be quiet. Bread they ought to have and bread they must have and bread they will have. With this, the fifth plentiful harvest, if there be any one man, women or child, without food and without comfortable apparel and without shelter, there must be something awfully wrong. May the suffering Christ, who once had nowhere to lay his head, champion the cause of the helpless, and smash the great monopolies that are built out of the bones and cemented with the blood of poor workmen, and send a supply this day from every full pantry to every destitute home, and so change the condition of those hardly bestead, that when another Thanksgiving day arrives, the poorest man in America shall have upon his table a twenty-pound turkey, royally browned and basted and stuffed, put upon his plate, dashed with cranberry, and emptied only to make way for pumpkin pies, such as New England matrons bake, or the more classic and juicy mince pie, such as our dear old mother made with her own hands before those hands were folded in the last sleep, just before they entered upon the long Thanksgiving day of Heaven, where we shall throw our arms around them and the other departed ones who used to be with us on these holidays, and give them a rapturous kiss and hug, all the heartier for the present painful separation. I believe no more in the Fatherhood of God than I do in the brotherhood of man. Amen and amen! Amen and amen.

Woman's Suffering and Relief.

Those languid, tiresome sensations, causing you to feel scarcely able to be on your feet; that constant drain that is taking from your system all its former elasticity; driving the bloom from your cheeks; that continual strain upon your vital forces, rendering you irritable and fretful, can easily be removed by the use of that marvelous remedy, Hop Bitters. Irregularities and obstructions of your system are relieved at once, while the special cause of periodical pain are permanently removed. None receive so much benefit, and none are so profoundly grateful, and show such an interest in recommending Hop Bitters as women.

A Postal Card Story.

I was affected with kidney and urinary Trouble—
"For twelve years!"
After trying all the doctors and patent medicines I could hear of, I used two bottles of Hop
"Bitters;"
And I am perfectly cured. I keep it
"All the time!" respectfully, B. F. Booth, Saulsbury, Tenn.—May 4, 1883.

BRADFORD, PA., May 8, 1875.

It has cured me of several diseases, such as nervousness, sickness at the stomach, monthly troubles, etc. I have not seen a sick day in a year, since I took Hop Bitters. All my neighbors use them. MRS. FANNIE GREEN.

"A tour to Europe that cost me $3,000, done "me less good than one bottle of Hop Bitters; "they also cured my wife of fifteen years' nervous weakness, sleeplessness and dyspepsia." R. M., Auburn, N.Y.

So. BLOOMINGVILLE, O., May 1, '79.

SIRS,—I have been suffering ten years, and I tried your Hop Bitters, and it done me more good than all the doctors. Miss S. S. BOONE.

Baby Saved.

We are so thankful to say that our nursing baby was permanently cured of a dangerous and protracted constipation and irregularity of the bowels by the use of Hop Bitters by its mother, which at the same time restored her to perfect health and strength.

Catarrh A New Treatment.

Perhaps the most extraordinary success that has been achieved in modern medicine has been attained by the Dixon treatment for Catarrh. Out of 2,000 patients treated during the past six months, fully ninety per cent. have been cured of this stubborn malady. This is none the less startling when it is remembered that not five per cent. of patients presenting themselves to the regular practitioner are benefitted, while the patent medicines and other advertised cures never record a cure at all. Starting with the claim now generally believed by the most scientific men that the disease is due to the presence of living parasites in the tissue, Mr. Dixon at once adapted his cure to their extermination—this accomplished, he claims the Catarrh is practically cured, and the permanency is unquestioned, as cures effected by him four years ago are cures still. No one else has ever attempted to cure Catarrh in this manner, and no other treatment has ever cured Catarrh. The application of the remedy is simple, and can be done at home, and the present season of the year is the most favourable for a speedy and permanent cure, the majority of cases being cured at one treatment. Sufferers should correspond with Messrs. A. H. DIXON & SON, 305 King street west, Toronto, Canada, and enclose stamp for their treatise on Catarrh.—Montreal Star, Nov. 17, 1883. 48-52t

Consumption Cured.

An old physician, retired from practice, having had placed in his hands by an East India missionary the formula of a simple vegetable remedy for the speedy and permanent cure of Consumption, Bronchitis, Catarrh, Asthma, and all throat and Lung affections, also a positive and radical cure for Nervous debility and all Nervous Complaints, after having tested its wonderful curative powers in thousands of cases, has felt it his duty to make it known to his suffering fellows. Actuated by this motive and a desire to relieve human suffering, I will send free of charge, to all who desire it, this receipt, in German, French or English, with full directions for preparing and using. Sent by mail by addressing with stamp, naming this paper, W. A. Noyes, 149 Power's Block, Rochester, N. Y. 45-26-eow.

Rest and Comfort to the Suffering.

"Rogers's Hercuvegan Balsam" has no equal for relieving pain, both internal and external. Cures Rheumatism, Neuralgia, Sciatica, Lumbago, Backache, Pleurisy, Sprains, Bruises, Stiff Joints, Sore Throat, Coughs, Colds, Influenza, Asthma, Bronchitis, Hoarseness, Sudden Colds, Chills, Aches, &c. It will almost instantly quicken the Blood and Heal, as its healing power is wonderful." "Brown's Household Panacea," being acknowledged as the great Pain Reliever, and of double the strength of any other Elixir or Liniment in the world, should be in every family handy for use when wanted. "As it really is the best remedy in the world for Cramps in the Stomach, and Pains and Aches of all kinds," and is for sale by all Druggists at 25 cents a bottle.

THE REASON WHY!

—OUR—

Shoe Store is Always Crowded

With Customers is very apparent to those that have visited it and seen our Immense Stock and compared our prices with those asked elsewhere for the same goods. Never have we had such Bargains in Boots and Shoes as now. Never have we sold as many goods as now, and the more goods we sell the

GREATER BARGAINS

we have, as we are able to buy in larger quantities and at corresponding low prices. We retail as many Boots and Shoes as most jobbers sell at wholesale, consequently manufacturers make no difference in price to us than the wholesale trade, while smaller dealers are obliged to pay which is about the same as our regular retail price for the same quality of goods. It must be very evident then to any thinking person that there must be a good reason for our immense Shoe Business, and that our low prices, complete stock, and attention shown to our customers can be the only attraction powerful enough to draw such crowds to our store, and place us, with but two years' growth, as one of the largest retail Shoe Houses in Eastern Ontario.

JOBBERS' PRICES,

REMEMBER OUR SYSTEM OF BUSINESS IS SQUARE WITH ALL

Goods marked in Plain Figures and No Second or Third Prices Made.

Our Words.

Our Saviour says in Matt.; xii. 36-37.

As day succeeds day,
And time speeds away,
Bearing its record of what we have said
All our words, great and small,
Gone beyond our recall,
Indelibly leaving impressions they made.

For good or for ill,
They are ling'ring still
In minds all retentive, and ever will prove,
For pain or for pleasure
A source, just in measure
As their true import bore aversion or love.

How little we deem,
Of words that but seem
Quite trifling, and uttered to while time away,
May swell to such size,
As will greatly surprise
The unguarded speaker at some future day.

Sometimes for the sake
Of mere gossip, we make
Too free with an absent one's name, and transgress
The rule golden; we should Do to men as we would
They would act toward us, which would be but to bless.

Words aptly portray,
As streamlets display,
The kind of the fountain from whence they aprise,
The true state of man's heart,
Quite deficient of art,
That speciously studies its guile to disguise.

Be our rule each day,
Like David to pray,
"My tongue keep from evil, my lips from deceit;
Set a watch on the door
Of my mouth, that no more
My lips may words bearing aught sinful repeat."

Good were it we should Have this truth imbued
Deep down in our hearts, what our Saviour did say, —
That a record of all
Idle words, great or small,
Rendered must be upon the great Judgment day.

Words fitly expressed,
In mission are blest,
And pleasant words are as the honeycomb sweet;
That to new life inspire,
Be this our true desire, —
To speak words with good inspirations replete.

ELECTRIC LIGHTING.

It has already been shown in these columns what the means are by which electric energy is turned into light, in the production of the brilliant illuminant known as the Electric Light. It ought, perhaps, to have been explained that the part played by steam power in the matter of electric lighting is only that it serves as a motive power to revolve the dynamo, and that horse-power, hand-power or water power would do as well. It is the revolution of the dynamo machine which produces the intense electric current. That machine consists of electric magnets of iron surrounded by helices or rings of wire insulated, i.e.; covered with rubber or silk. Electro magnets are used because they have proved so much more powerful than permanent ones. Any motion of these magnets, surrounded as they are, produces a current which can be drawn off from the machine by what are called "collectors" and can be conducted along a wire to any distance. The rule is that "any "rapid movement or revolution of magnets "in proximity to copper conductors or of cop- "per conductors near to magnets is obtained "by means of dynamo electric machines, and "electric currents are produced and distrib- "uted by means of them."

For street lighting and the illumination of public buildings, squares, work shops, shipyards and such places, the electric lighting system has made great progress. In France and other European countries, in England, in the United States, scarcely a prominent city but has its system of electric lighting. For house lighting, however, it has not made the same degree of progress, partly because it is as yet too complicated and expensive for common people to indulge in or handle, partly because (in this country at least) a proper mode of directing the current and an economical system of distribution have not yet been reached. Edison and others are, however, working away, and the time will come when the light will be general in household use. Edison says, for example, that he will give himself five years in which to discover a method of producing the electric light direct from coal, without the intervention of the steam engine to drive the dynamo.

There are other things to be considered besides the money cost, in looking at the question of the desirability of the electric light. There is the fire risk, the health question, the effect on the eye-sight. It is important to the health of all who do much sedentary work at night or by artificial light that the conditions under which they work should be otherwise favorable. That is, that if they are under the disadvantage of being obliged to work at night or in dark offices where some sort of artificial illuminant is necessary they should at least have the best sort of light, the purest of air and the least additional disadvantage.

Now, as to the healthfulness of the electric light. A scientific table shows that to produce a given amount of light (equal to that of twelve candles) by means of tallow candles, twelve (12) feet of oxygen will be consumed. Eight and three-quarter (8¾) pounds of poisonous carbonic acid produced and (933) nine hundred and thirty-three cubic feet of breathing air will be vitiated.

In the case of sperm candles, these figures are much reduced, in that of paraffine oil or benzole, they are still further reduced, and in the case of common gas the figures stand: To give light equal to twelve sperm candles:

BY GAS.

Cubic feet of oxygen consumed	5·45 feet.
" " carbonic acid produced	3·21 "
" " breathing air vitiated	342·25 "
Heat produced and pounds of water raised 10 F	278·06

To give the same illumination by means of incandescent electric light there would be:

Cubic feet of oxygen consumed	None
Carbonic acid produced	"
Breathing air vitiated	"
Heat produced	13·8

So that the air of a room lighted by gas becomes heated more than twenty times as much as that of one lighted by electricity. The air near the ceiling of a gas-lighted house or room often becomes heated to 120° and even 130°, as any one will soon find if he needs to climb up to fasten pictures or anything. In one test made at an English musical festival in 1882, experiments were tried to show the effect of electric lighting and gas lighting respectively. While it was found that the candle-power given out by the electric light was about fifty per cent. in excess of that given by the gas light, the temperature of the room was only raised two degrees in a seven hours' trial by the electric light, where it was raised forty degrees by the gas lights. The vitiation of the air in this case by carbonic acid was equal to the breathing of more than double (in the proportion of 3,000 to 1,900) the number of the audience present. The freedom from oppressiveness noticed by the audience was consequently very great.

Then, as to eyesight, oculists say that nine-tenths of the diseases of the eye proceed from using the eyesight long hours with insufficient light and from the unsteadiness of most artificial lights. This unsteadiness, which has been largely overcome in the case of the incandescent electric light is still a fault of the arc light, which is the one most used in Canada. Still, it is true that in such buildings as various British post-offices, the eyesight of the letter-sorters, a class of men whose eyes are sadly tried in the course of their daily occupation, has been improved by the introduction of the electric light. Some of the sorters in Glasgow who had begun to use spectacles while burning gas, have abandoned them under the electric light regime.

So satisfied was the British Board of Trade that electric lighting ought to be made general, because it was a public benefit, that an Act of Parliament was framed and introduced, intended on the one hand to protect from extortion the public, and on the other the companies who should provide the light. But from the unfortunate way in which the Act was framed it became a discouragor of the new illuminant, and new people are calling out to have the Act amended or abolished. A still greater discouragement than even the Act appears to be the heavy cost of providing electric light installations in comparison with the limited number of people who will as yet use the light. Many of the companies formed within three years past in that country came to grief partly because they were begun in an extravagant way, and upon a disproportionate scale. Economy is just as necessary here, and the relation of means to the end in view, as necessary as in any other business.

It may well be argued, indeed it can hardly be denied, that while electricity has done wonders, still where its production depends on steam-power it is not a complete financial success. The telegraph and the telephone derive their electricity from the galvanic battery, and are now established upon a permanent and satisfactory basis. But the dynamo, whether used for the supply of arc or incandescent lights, or for any other purpose, is at present mostly operated by steam, itself a costly mode of obtaining power. The steam engine is as yet far from perfect. It is calculated that the very best result obtained does not exceed 17 per cent. of the force contained in the coal consumed. This working force of seventeen (17) per cent. is used in the generation of electricity by means of a dynamo; and of the current thus obtained by far the larger part is lostin transmission. So that it may be doubted whether the force or energy actually utilised amounts to two (2) per cent. of that contained in the coal consumed, in the furnace of the driving engine. By the use of water as a motive power in the generation of electricity the latter can certainly be economically employed for lighting and transmission of power. But so long as steam is used the electric light and electric motor will be employed only where expense is no object or steam power is running to waste.—Monetary Times.

COUNCIL MEETING.

Council met at Centerville, December 3rd. Members present, the reeve, Mr. Riddell, councillors Baxter, Byers, Perrin, Nurse.

COMMITTEE REPORTS.

From David Baxter, committee on west boundary, on Muney's bill, reported the job as done, and recommended payment of the contract price. Also report on 6th concession line, grading and building culvert to the amount of $30.—Reports adopted.

From the Board of health in reference to minute book and necessary blanks with bill of expenditures amounting to $2.60.—Received.

Two or three accounts were adjusted and ordered to be paid.

Mr. Byers introduced a by-law to appoint deputy returning officers, places for holding municipal elections. By-law duly passed as follows:—W. G. Walkey, returning officer poll sub division No. 1; W. E. Ball, returning officer poll sub division No. 2. Elections to be held, No. 1, Ballieboro, in Orange Hall. No. 2, Centerville, in council chamber. Nomination to be held on 29th of December, in council chamber, Centerville.

ACCOUNTS.

A large number of accounts were considered and ordered to be paid.

On application of Alex. Brown, Mr. Baxter was named a committee along with any person appointed by North Monaghan to inspect the boundary line, and let any necessary improvements, and to report at next council.

The time for collection of taxes was extended to December 31st, 1884.

Moved by Mr Perrin, seconded by Mr. Nurse, that this council be adjourned subject to call of the Reeve.

Arrived this week, a new lot of Men's Underclothing worth a dollar, sale price seventy-five cents, at Turnbull's.

NOTES ON THE WEATHER.

November, now gone, has been a fine month of almost uniform temperature, the highest at sunrise only being 42 degrees on the morning of the 12th, and the lowest on the mornings of the 18th and 19th. Although the weather was fine throughout, there has been fully up to the avverage both of snow and rain. Snow fell on thirteen days—although some only slightly—to the depth of ten inches; the corresponding month of '83 having eleven inches. On the 5th and 6th, with a cold wind, we had some drifting, but a considerable amount of work was done during the short time our sleighing lasted. Rain fell on ten days, to the depth of 2 inches and 7-100 of an inch. The heaviest storm being on the 5th, falling 1 inch and 5-100 of an inch; but it must be borne in mind, although we have thirteen days for snow and ten for rain we actually had not that twenty-three days of down-fall, because often both rain and snow fell on the same day and must be counted one for snow and one for rain, so it was only one day. The average temperature of the month was was 32 degrees. We ought to be thankful for one of the finest Novembers ever seen in Canada.

A Great Discovery.

Mr. Wm. Thomas, of Newton, Ia., says: "My wife has been seriously affected with a cough for twenty-five years, and this spring more severely than ever before. She had used many remedies without relief, and being urged to try Dr. King's New Discovery, did so, with most gratifying results. The first bottle relieved her very much, and the second bottle has absolutely cured her. She has not had so good health for thirty years."

Peterborough Examiner.

PETERBOROUGH, DEC. 18, 1884.

The Second Settlement.

It is reported among the faithful that the Government has definitely selected the lot, corner Hunter and Water streets as the site of the new post-office. If this is so, the taking of action is largely due to the vigorous stirring-up of the subject by THE EXAMINER. Without our public exposure of the tricks and delay being practised, the matter would probably be yet unsettled. But it is perhaps too early to congratulate the town. The rumor may have been put afloat for the purpose of making the Government temporarily more popular, and thus arousing, in reference to the Sir John demonstration, a local enthusiasm which the party claquers and wire pullers have not been able to evoke. No one would be surprised to see a deputation of the disappointed owners of Tory corner lots go to Toronto and interview Sir John on the subject. Of course, especially under the beneficient stimulus of the red breeches, he will promise anything, the matter may be re-opened, and the second Order-in-Council selecting the site for the Peterborough post-office may be cancelled as the first one was, and the third campaign of the war of the wire pullers be opened. If past experience guaranteed any confidence in the Government, we might consider the matter as now settled, but with a Government that places the promotion of party interests before those of the town of Peterborough, there is no telling what to depend on till the post-office matter, as a policical lemon, is squeezed thoroughly dry.

It is to be seriously hoped that we are at the end of all vacillation and delay. Our information, which we consider reliable, says that the parties owning the lot have been notified of its selection, and that Messrs. Smith & Peck have been instructed to take steps to legally conclude the purchase. Now that we have worked so hard to get the Government to come to a decision in the interests of the town, on the same ground we demand that no false economy or mere perfunctory fulfilment of the promise of new public buildings will mar their plan and execution. No less than the whole lot will be required for their foundations. Peterborough has arrived at such an advanced position of commercial importance, that a large post-office and customs building are necessary for the requirements of the public. Port Hope, a comparatively "one horse town," has fine buildings, but those for Peterborough must, to meet our necessities, be on a considerably larger scale. There is no reason why active work shall not be begun early in the spring. The contract should be let at once so that the builder may use the winter to lay a portion of the materials on the ground. We have waited long for justice in the matter of public buildings, and now we hope it will be of a quality becoming the commercial importance of the town of Peterborough.

Don't miss the opportunity of obtaining Winter Underclothing 20 per cent below regular prices, at Andrew McNeil's Tailor and Clothier, George Street.

Flies on the Wheel.

The "National Policy" journals are continually vaunting the benefits of the N. P. in the face of the hard times that are depressing the country. Sir John, in a recent speech, also spoke boastingly of its benefits to Canada. But a practical answer to all this buncome is the actual condition of the country. All over the Dominion manufacturing establishments are closing down or working on short time. Want of work and reduction of wages was not what the N. P. promised us. We were insured by it advocates against a recurrence of depression, but the facts are all against the fulfillment of this promise. In the United States, even more intensely protected than Canada, the commercial outlook is acknowledged to be bad. The Great Northwestern Telegraph Company, owing to "the present depression," announces that it will reduce the salaries of its operators, and all over the Union wages are being cut down, factories closed down and workmen thrown out of employment. If protection cannot avert these things in a country like the United States, the extent and variety of whose resources should make her, if any country, a correct gauge of the powers of protection, how can it be expected to do so in Canada? The truth is, nobody expected or expects that it would do so. It was only a scheme used by designing politicians to make fools of the people and get an excuse for grinding taxes out of them. The N. P. deceivers, themselves, have long affected to believe their own doctrine, but they are beginning to waver. The London Free Press "gives the thing away," when, in advising the public to make the "money fly" at Christmas time, it says:

"The unloading of the merchants' shelves means the starting of the mills, and that means employment, wages, and spending again by the working classes."

But where are those of the "working classes" who are idle, going to get the money to "make it fly." Are they to knock down and rob some farmer going home from market? With wheat at 70 cents per bushel and other grains in proportion, which the N. P. was to keep at high prices, they are not likely to make very much by such a course. No, the confession in the above extract is a most abject one of the failure of the N. P. to bring and retain prosperity. Why should the "mills" be idle or the workmen unemployed? The N. P. demagogues promised that they would bring everlasting prosperity by taxing the people, and denounced as "flies on the wheel," Reformers because they were not willing to delude the people. Who are the flies on the wheel" now?

Andrew McNeil, Tailor and Clothier, is now selling his choice new Stock of Winter Underclothing at a reduction of 20 per cent on regular prices.

Editorial Notes.

The date of the Lennox election has been fixed as follows: nomination, Jan. 1st; polling, Jan. 8th, 1885.

If any of our merchants attend the Sir John glorification they might corner Sir Leonard Tilley and ask him now to explain why he has allowed times and trade to become so dull?

In 1877-8 a local Tory politician of most decided views, when he was paying only a dollar for skins, roundly abused "that dashed Mackenzie Administration," which was keeping the farmers out of better prices for their skins. Now that the N. P. only gives sixty cents for the same kinds of pelts, after skinning the farmer with high taxes, there is not a word of complaint—though there must be a mighty thinking respecting the manner in which the people have been gulled.

The Editor of the Mail may not insist that the farmers who may attend the demonstration in honor of Sir John in Toronto, are "sadly in need of a bath," but it would not be very wide of the truth, if it hinted that the "honored guest" was sadly in need of a Bath. He must have thought so himself when he went all the way to England for it, and Her majesty must have thought so too, for it was not till after the Times had credited the hero of the Pacific scandal with a "huge blot," that she conferred the "Bath" on Sir John—placed it, as it were, where it would do the most good.

The Mail after soundly berating for years, those journals, which in their condemnation of the mismanagement of North-West interests, simply told the truth respecting, it has come to the conclusion that "the truth and the whole truth probably pays best," in speaking of the North-West. If a Reform journal had said half as much the Mail would raise a terrible howl about disloyalty and treason. A Tory journal may talk double-distilled disloyalty—such as the Mail did, at British connection, and it's all right, but if a Reform journal tells the truth about the country it is disloyal and treasonous. The Tory party seems to think it has a proprietary right to all the loyalty or British connection extant, and is justified in using either as it likes.

THE NOISY BOYS ARE COMING OUT.

CHEESE BUSINESS FOR 1884

RESULT OF OPERATIONS IN THIS COUNTY.

To the Editor of THE EXAMINER:

DEAR SIR,—I herewith send you a summary of the business done on the Peterborough Cheese Board during the season now past. I give you the name of factory with number of boxes sold on board, average weight about 60 lbs., average price about 10 cents per pound:

	Number of boxes for season.
Keene	1,885.
Warminster, (North Dummer)	1,585.
South Dummer	1,768.
Trewerne (township Smith)	1,933.
South Douro	767.
Otonabee Union	456.
Selwyn (Smith)	975.
Normanhurst (Smith)	546.
Glenthorn (West Douro)	344.
Myrtle (township Ennismore)	961.
Lakefield	980.
Lakehurst (Harvey)	232.
Lilly Lake (North Monaghan)	569.
Cherry Grove (Smith)	567.
	13,712.

Thus a total of 13,712 boxes at an average of 60 lbs to the box, and at an average price of 10c. per pound, makes a total of $82,272 distributed in the county through the cheese industry. This does not include 6 factories in Victoria county which sold part of the season's make on our Board; the total would be about half of our's. There are also Norwood and Westwood factories which I have no account of, as they did not sell with us—perhaps about 1,000 boxes each.

I shall try to offer a few hints upon the dairying interest in this section as soon as I can make it ready. Yours, etc.,

WARREN TAYLOR,
Warsaw, Dec. 16th, 1884. Sec. Cheese Board.

The Season has again arrived at Turnbull's, when you can yet your choice of a huge pile of Remnants, at sweeping reductions.

ARCHBISHOP LYNCH.

QUARTER OF A CENTURY A BISHOP.

The twenty-fifth anniversary of the episcopate of Archbishop Lynch was celebrated in Toronto last week. On the occasion the distinguished prelate was greeted with a demonstration, which was a high tribute not only to his personal worth, but also to the manner in which he has discharged the duties of his high and holy office. There was an immense gathering of the prelates and clergy of Canada, including the Bishop of Peterborough, and also of distinguished prelates from the United States, who united with immense numbers of the laity, among whom was Dr. O'Sullivan of this town, and in which Protestants were well represented, in doing him signal honor. Dr. Lynch was made a bishop in 1859, and since that time has founded fifteen ecclesiastical institutions, has ordained 140 priests, and been instrumental in the erection of 140 parish churches and 20 presbyteries. Rt. Rev. Bishop Jamot was consecrated Bishop of Peterborough by the Archbishop. Not only has he been a warm and earnest worker for his church, but also a zealous advocate of social reform, especially in the temperance cause.

THE DAM.

On Saturday night last the water rose unexpectedly about a foot. The brackets on the old dam gave way, allowing the water to rush on the new work. The result was that the coffer-dam was washed away, with a quantity of timber, causing considerable damage. In addition to the loss, this will cause some delay in the progress of the work.

STILL ON CRUTCHES.

Our friend, Harry Garbutt, has still to get about on crutches, as the result of his capsize.

ELECTIONS.

Various rumors of candidates for Reeve and Councillors are afloat. Nothing definite so far.

WOOLLEN AND CARDING MILL.

Mr. Peter Baptie has the new woollen and carding mill well under way. Will be roofed in a few days.

Ladies' and Children's Seamless Wool Hosiery, and Ladies' and Children's Kid Mitts, in good variety at Turnbull's.

PERSONAL.

Mr. Wm. M. Wood, of Peterborough, has received a position with the New York Life Assurance Company, with headquarters at Toronto. Mr. Wood has been lately connected with the San Life, with headquarters at Cobourg.

We are glad to be able to announce that Dr. Harvey has decided to remain in Peterborough and practice his profession as usual. The rumors that he purposes returning to North-West are not correct. Dr. Harvey's many old patients will be glad to know this.

Mr. W. A. Lawrence, general agent of the Elliott Manufacturing Co'y, of London, Ont., was in town on Saturday. Mr. Lawrence is a pushing agent, and the business of this firm will no doubt be increased in this section through his efforts on this visit. Mr. Might is the local agent.

We have much pleasure in calling attention to the card of Ald. Thomas Hanley, of Belleville, which appears in this issue. Mr. Hanley is now engaged in superintending the erection of the finest residence in Peterboro, for Mr. Geo. A. Cox, and combining the experience of a practical builder with that of an architect, he is sure to give the utmost satisfaction to all who may favor him with an order. Mr. Hanley contemplates visiting Peterboro once a week, and any one wishing to secure his services may address Belleville P. O., or leave their order at the Grand Central Hotel.

Eighty Cents will buy a Dollar Undershirt at Andrew McNeil's.

CAVAN.

RAPID THRESHING.

A few days ago Mr. Andrew Boyd threshed for Mr. E. M. Sanderson, lot 15, 12th concession of Cavan, 500 bushels of oats and barley in 4½ hours—beginning at half past seven and ending at 12 o'clock. This is explained by stating that the machine used was one of Peter Hamilton's Improved threshers. This shows that our threshers need not go abroad to get the best threshing machine made. A few days after the same machine threshed barley at the rate of two bushels to the minute, and did first-class work.

Among Turnbull's pile of Remnants, will be found choice ends of Dress Goods, Black and Colored Silks, etc., at decided bargains.

Reports indicate an alarming revival of outrages at Tralee, Ireland. Armed men have brutally maltreated the caretaker of Sir Edward Denny's estate. His condition is precarious. The man had evicted a tenant.

The popular vote polled at the recent Presidential election was 10,046,073. Of this vote Cleveland received 4 9 3,901 and Blaine 4,847,659. From this it would seem that Cleveland's vote exceeded Blaine's by 63,242.

of the wonderful powers and virtues of that best of all medicines, Kidney-Wort. It has been tried and proved. Its cures are numberless and the record of (supposed) incurable cases that have yielded to its influence is astounding. If you have trouble with your Kidneys, Liver or Bowels, if you suffer from constipation and piles, if you are a victim of Rheumatism or Malaria, take Kidney-Wort. You will find it the remedy you need.

INVITATION

And a very hearty one too, is hereby extended to you, to visit our Stores, whether you want to buy or not, you'll not be pressed to do so, nor your freedom of action in any way interfered with. On the other hand you're at perfect liberty to inspect our goods, compare our prices, view our facilities, ask questions in regard to our system of business, and in short make yourself

THOROUGHLY AT HOME,

As though our Stores were to you, as they are to thousands, an old, familiar and pleasant resort. You'll find our Sale-room among the largest and handsomest in Town, and therefore, that there's no undue crowding of goods, no lack of facilities for their display, no need to make allowance for poor light or poor surroundings. In short, that there's nothing to be excused. You'll also find, if an evening be selected for your visit, that we've turned night into day, and that under the brilliant Electric Light, goods can be chosen, colours matched, and qualities compared with the same ease, as at any time during the day. Now, we don't want you to think that the above is altogether an invitation to come and buy, for it is'nt. We don't even ask you to come to us before going elsewhere, we merely advise you in a friendly way, to come and see us if you do not want to buy, and especially before buying at all.

NORWOOD.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

A DEER CASE.

On Saturday last Magistrates Drain, Stephenson and Breakenridge held a court upon a deer case. It was a very interesting one, and attracted all the mighty nimrods of this community for miles around. The plaintiff was Wilson Gleason, of Haldimand, and charged John Little, of Dummer, with forestalling a deer he had shot in Dummer. The case was dismissed, Gleason to pay costs, amounting to $3.

A WAGES CASE.

Before the same magistrates, George Reynolds arraigned M. McGregor for balance of wages. The magistrates decided that they would allow plaintiff $4, with the $11 obtained from the "boss," making up his month's wages. Costs of court, $3, paid by defendant.

THE TELEPHONE.

Not to be behind other large commercial centres, Messrs. Roxburgh & Rork have placed telephone communication between their elevator and Mr. Roxburg's office in his building on the corner of Peterborough and Colborne streets. This is a step which will redound creditably to the go-a-head activeness of this enterprising firm.

OBITUARY.

On Sunday the 6th inst., Abraham Wigmore, second eldest son of the late William Wigmore, of Dummer, died after a prolonged illness of about 29 years. The life of the deceased was a remarkably eventful one, and but for the fact that he possessed a constitution of rare quality, he must have long since succumbed to the trying incidents and accidents through which he passed. In early life, about the year 1855 or 1856, he was employed with the Messrs. Fowlds, of Hastings, in cutting square timber and rafting it down to Quebec, where he was almost fatally wounded in the head in defending the life of the foreman of his gang, against some mutinous Frenchmen. About this time, too, while working for the firm, he met with the unfortunate accident which laid him upon a bed of extreme suffering for the 29 years of his illness. He, with his brothers, were getting out timber on the farm now owned by Mr. Spiers in the township of Dummer, and was in the act of making some material for rafting when one of his comrade workmen, a Frenchman, engaged him in conversation, and while the former was in a stooping position, the latter took up an axe and deliberately struck poor Wigmore a terrible blow across the small of the back, driving the axe in his body about six inches in depth, and severely injuring his spine. He was shortly afterwards found prostrate and almost dead from the loss of blood. He had to be carried home, a distance of about eight miles, his bearers being his two brothers, Mr. Thos. Rork, Mr. Jas. Harper and Mr. Sandy Kemp, of Norwood. Medical attendance was immediately procured, but availed nothing. His left side, from his hip downwards, soon after became powerless, and since that time has never used his left leg. Since, too, he has suffered extreme pain almost without cessation, but during those long years he endured all with Christian fortitude, daily looking for a peaceful end, when death would release him from his sufferings. During the 29 years he seldom left his bed, and then had to be lifted with care and attention. He was constantly attended by a kind and loving mother and sisters, who did all in their power to alleviate his sufferings, and to cheer and comfort him in hours of severe affliction. His funeral took place on Tuesday the 9th inst., and was attended by a large body of sorrowing relations and sympathizing friends, the funeral obsequies being performed by the Rev. Mr. McLeary, of Hastings.

All Lovers

of a really good cup of Tea or Coffee should call and see the choice varieties offered by Wallace of Lakefield. A special line of Uncoloured Japan Tea to be sold at 4 lbs for $1, New Raisins, Currants, Candied Peel, Spices, Syrups, Sugars, Biscuits and Cheese, at rock bottom prices. 49-4t

MOST EXCRUCIATING are the twinges which rack the muscles and joints of the rheumatic. Northrop & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery and Dyspepsia Cure, by promoting increased action of the kidneys, by which the blood is more effectually departed, removes through the natural channels certain acrid elements in the circulation which produce rheumatism and gout. The medicine is also a fine laxative antibilious medicine and general corrective.

BENSFORT.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

The following is the result of the promotion examinations in the Bensfort School for the half year ending 'Xmas, as made by the Inspector of the Public Schools. The names are in the order of merit: Senior Third.—Jane Pimmet, Mina Robinson, Sarah O'Hair, Wilson Dodds, Mary Whittington. Junior Third to Senior Third.—Stanley Robinson, Jemima Pinmet, Thos. McClelland, Sophia Finnic, Robert Thorn. Second to Third.—Theresa Thompson, Mary L. Pue, Maggie Whittington, John Montgomery. First to Second.—John Stinton, Wm. Crebs, Malcolm Morrison, Mary Stinton. These promotions, I understand, have been conditional on regular attendance.

TRUSTEES' REPORT.

The trustees visited the school during the past week and expressed themselves well-pleased with the discipline, the general proficiency, and the neatness and tidiness of the children of the school, and the room.

Mr. Robert Fisher and Miss Jane Finnie, both of South Monaghan, were married on Thursday evening, the 11th instant, by the Rev. Mr. Cameron, of Millbrook. We tender the young couple our best wishes for their future happiness and prosperity.

A new Sunday School has been commenced in the "Lake School." The principal promotor of this school is Miss Hamilton, of Peterborough. She is taking a great interest in the progress of the youth of this section, and we trust that her efforts will be appreciated by the residents and children.

A DEER CASE.

On Saturday last Magistrates Drain, Stephenson and Breakenridge held a court upon a deer case. It was a very interesting one, and attracted all the mighty nimrods of this community for miles around. The plaintiff was Wilson Gleason, of Haldimand, and charged John Little, of Dummer, with forestalling a deer he had shot in Dummer. The case was dismissed, Gleason to pay costs, amounting to $3.

A WAGES CASE.

Before the same magistrates, George Reynolds arraigned M. McGregor for balance of wages. The magistrates decided that they would allow plaintiff $4, with the $11 obtained from the "boss," making up his mouth's wages. Costs of court, $3, paid by defendant.

THE TELEPHONE.

Not to be behind other large commercial centres, Messrs. Roxburgh & Rork have placed telephone communication between their elevator and Mr. Roxburg's office in his building on the corner of Peterborough and Colborne streets. This is a step which will redound creditably to the go-a-head activeness of this enterprising firm.

OBITUARY.

On Sunday the 6th inst., Abraham Wigmore, second eldest son of the late William Wigmore, of Dummer, died after a prolonged illness of about 29 years. The life of the deceased was a remarkably eventful one, and but for the fact that he possessed a constitution of rare quality, he must have long since succumbed to the trying incidents and accidents through which he passed. In early life, about the year 1855 or 1856, he was employed with the Messrs. Fowlds, of Hastings, in cutting square timber and rafting it down to Quebec, where he was almost fatally wounded in the head in defending the life of the foreman of his gang, against some mutinous Frenchmen. About this time, too, while working for the firm, he met with the unfortunate accident which laid him upon a bed of extreme suffering for the 29 years of his illness. He, with his brothers, were getting out timber on the farm now owned by Mr. Spiers in the township of Dummer, and was in the act of making some material for rafting when one of his comrade workmen, a Frenchman, engaged him in conversation, and while the former was in a stooping position, the latter took up an axe and deliberately struck poor Wigmore a terrible blow across the small of the back, driving the axe in his body about six inches in depth, and severely injuring his spine. He was shortly afterwards found prostrate and almost dead from the loss of blood. He had to be carried home, a distance of about eight miles, his bearers being his two brothers, Mr. Thos. Rork, Mr. Jas. Harper and Mr. Sandy Kemp, of Norwood. Medical attendance was immediately procured, but availed nothing. His left side, from his hip downwards, soon after became powerless, and since that time has never used his left leg. Since, too, he has suffered extreme pain almost without cessation, but during those long years he endured all with Christian fortitude, daily looking for a peaceful end, when death would release him from his sufferings. During the 29 years he seldom left his bed, and then had to be lifted with care and attention. He was constantly attended by a kind and loving mother and sisters, who did all in their power to alleviate his sufferings, and to cheer and comfort him in hours of severe affliction. His funeral took place on Tuesday the 9th inst., and was attended by a large body of sorrowing relations and sympathizing friends, the funeral obsequies being performed by the Rev. Mr. McLeary, of Hastings.

of a really good cup of Tea or Coffee should call and see the choice varieties offered by Wallace of Lakefield. A special line of Uncoloured Japan Tea to be sold at 4 lbs for $1, New Raisins, Currants, Candied Peel, Spices, Syrups, Sugars, Biscuits and Cheese, at rock bottom prices. 49-4t

MOST EXCRUCIATING are the twinges which rack the muscles and joints of the rheumatic. Northrop & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery and Dyspeptic Cure, by promoting increased action of the kidneys, by which the blood is more effectually depurated, removes through the natural channels certain acrid elements in the circulation which produce rheumatism and gout. The medicine is also a fine laxative antibilious medicine and general corrective.

BENSFORT.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

The following is the result of the promotion examinations in the Bensfort School for the half year ending Xmas, as made by the Inspector of the Public Schools. The names are in the order of merit: Senior Third.—Jane Pimmet, Mina Robinson, Sarah O'Hair, Wilson Dodda, Mary Whittington. Junior Third to Senior Third.—Stanley Robinson, Jemima Pimmet, Thos. McClelland, Sophia Finnie, Robert Thorn. Second to Third.—Theresa Thompson, Mary L. Pue, Maggie Whittington, John Montgomery. First to Second.—John Stinton, Wm. Creba, Malcolm Morrison, Mary Stinton. These promotions, I understand, have been conditional on regular attendance.

TRUSTEES' REPORT.

The trustees visited the school during the past week and expressed themselves well-pleased with the discipline, the general proficiency, and the neatness and tidiness of the children of the school, and the room.

Mr. Robert Fisher and Miss Jane Finnie, both of South Monaghan, were married on Thursday evening, the 11th instant, by the Rev. Mr. Camerou, of Millbrook. We tender the young couple our best wishes for their future happiness and prosperity.

A new Sunday School has been commenced in the "Lake School." The principal promotor of this school is Miss Hamilton, of Peterborough. She is taking a great interest in the progress of the youth of this section, and we trust that her efforts will be appreciated by the residents and children.

COUNCIL MEETING.

Council met December 1st, members all present, minutes of last meeting read and confirmed.

Moved by Mr. Fitzgerald, seconded by Mr. Middleton, that Messrs. McConnaghy and Garbutt be appointed a committee to examine the timber on the 6th township line between lots 18, with power to call the same.—Carried.

Application was made by Mr. McFarlane for refund of license money, as two months of the time covered by his license had expired before the license was issued. The deputy reeve and Clerk were appointed to interview the inspector regarding the matter, with power to take such action as they think justifiable under the circumstances.

A by-law to fix the place for holding the next nomination for Reeve, Deputy Reeve and Councillors, and to appoint deputy returning officers and fix polling places, received its several readings and was passed and sealed.

Moved by Mr. Middleton, seconded by Mr. Fitzgerald, that all the contractors reasons to believe, that the quarter line between lots 6 and 7 in the 2nd concession, surveyed by the late I. B. Clement, P. L. S., is not parallel with the boundary, the Reeve take the necessary steps to have said line surveyed, if found incorrect.—Carried.

Moved by Mr. Fitzgerald, seconded by Mr. Garbutt, that the Treasurer be instructed to refund to George E. Elliott the amount of taxes overpaid by error of assessment of 1882.—Carried.

Aaron Nichols, Jr., applied for the timber on quarter line between lots 11 and 12 in 7th concession, for which he offered to pay $5 and clear off the road allowance.—Offer accepted.

Mr. James Fowler, overseer of highways, was allowed to dispense of the timber on his road division to any person paying what he thinks reasonable value for the same.

The following claims were ordered to be paid, viz:

W. B. Kelly, rent of hall, fuel, etc.	$33.75
James H. Mann, work on road	5.75
John Fancett, " "	17 00

S. McKibbin, for support of Mrs. Clegg	35.00

The council then adjourned.

MORE ROOM FOR LUNATICS.

At a meeting of the county of Carleton council a resolution was put by Mr. Ira Morgan, Metcalfe, and carried, to the effect that the Provincial Government be memoralized to establish asylums spacious enough to contain all insane persons and not have them encumbering the jails.

A Plant of Rare Virtues.

Is the common and well known Burdock. It is one of the best blood purifiers and kidney regulators in the vegetable world, and the compound known as Burdock Blood Bitters possesses wonderful power in diseases of the blood, liver, kidneys and stomach. 50-2t.

Pile Tumors.

neglected or badly treated, often degenerate into a cancer. The worst pile tumors are painlessly, speedily and permanently cured without knife, caustic or salve, by our new and improved methods. Pamphlet and references, two stamps. World's Dispensary Medical Association, 663 Main street, Buffalo, N. Y.

FOR THE FIRST TIME.

For the first time in history the Roman Catholic church outnumbers the Methodists in the United States, and stands numerically at the head of the list. It owes this position largely to the character of the immigration into the country.

Wisely Adopted by Dairymen.

The adoption by most of the prominent dairymen and farmers of the United States of the Improved Butter Color made by Wells, Richardson & Co., Burlington, Vt., is a proof of their wisdom in a business point of view. Nearly all winter butter is colored in order to make it marketable, and the color is the best, in regard to purity, strength, permanence and perfection of tint.

WHEAT PROSPECTS.

The prospects for wheat raisers on this continent grow worse rather than better. This is an additional argument for tariff reduction. The European nations have grown tired of paying spot cash to Americans for wheat and getting no trade in return.

Never Give Up.

If you are suffering with low and depressed spirits, loss of appetite, general debility, disordered blood, weak constitution, headache, or any disease of a bilious nature, by all means procure a bottle of Electric Bitters. You will be surprised to see the rapid improvement that will follow; you will be inspired with new life; strength and activity will return; pain and misery will cease, and henceforth you will rejoice in the praise of Electric Bitters. Sold at fifty cents a bottle by Taylor & McDonald.

A DUCAL FORTUNE.

The fortune left by the Duke of Buccleuch to his youngest son—$200,000—represents just about two months of an income which the Duke had enjoyed over sixty years. That left to his daughter, who married Cameron of Lochiel, represents six weeks' income, and that to the other daughters one month's income.

The Boundary Line

between comfort and discomfort is often very slight. Have you rheumatism or neuralgia? or are you a sufferer from obscure nervous pains? Why suffer longer? You can purchase for ten cents a bottle of that king of pain—Polson's Nervilina, or you can get a large bottle for 25 cents. It cures promptly. It is sure, pleasant to take, and never fails to cure all kinds of pain. Don't wait an hour, but send to any drug store and get a trial bottle. Nervilina, the sure pain cure.

STARTLING STATISTICS.

The statistics of divorce in the United States are startling. On Saturday last twenty-eight divorces were granted in Philadelphia, and fifty cases were sent for trial in Chicago. In the Superior and Circuit Court of the latter city 674 cases are pending. How much worse than this are the Utah Mormons?

James Cullen, Pool's Island, N.F., writes: "I have been watching the progress of Dr. Thomas Eclectric Oil since its introduction to this place, and with much pleasure state that my anticipations of its success have been fully realized, it having cured me of bronchitis and soreness of nose; while not a few of my 'rheumatic neighbors' (one old lady in particular) pronounce it to be the best article of its kind that has ever been brought before the public. Your medicine does not require any longer a sponsor, but if you wish me to act as such, I shall be only too happy to have my name connected with your prosperous child.

THE GREAT EASTERN.

The sailing of the Great Eastern for the World's Fair at New Orleans has again been postponed, this time until the 16th inst. The delay is explained by the statement that the labor of re-fitting the great ship for the voyage and for use as a floating hotel after her arrival at New Orleans, has proved far greater than was estimated. She will take only a dead-weight cargo.

Whedon's Tissue Phosphates.

Invalids who take with disappointment as many of the new remedy sensations advertised, and lose faith in medicine, should reflect that most of the preparations in common use are products of minds entirely ignorant of medical science, and designed commonly to trade on the reputation of standard preparations and impose on the credulity and receptivity of the gullible masses. A thoroughly expert agent, to stand the test of universal experience and secure the confidence of physicians and patient, must formulate the crystallized essentials of many years medical practice, as in Whedon's Phosphates and Calisaya—a tonic restorative now everywhere prescribed in all forms of debility.

Itching Piles—Symptoms and Cure.

The symptoms are moisture, like perspiration, intense itching, increased by scratching very distressing, particularly at night, seems as if pin-worms were crawling in and about the rectum; the private parts are sometimes affected. If allowed to continue very serious results may follow. "SWAYNE'S OINTMENT" is a pleasant, sure cure. Also for Tetter, Itch, Salt Rheum, Scald Head, Erysipelas, Barbers' Itch, Blotches, all scaly, crusty Skin Diseases. Box by mail 50 cents; three for 1.25. Address, DR. SWAYNE & SON, Phila., Pa. Sold by Druggists. 7-52t.

A BIG TRAIN.

A heavy wheat train pulled into Fargo by one engine, a few days ago, on the Northern Pacific Railroad, consisted of 110 cars, loaded with wheat. This would make, allowing 500 bushels to the car, a weight of 3,620,000 pounds, while the cars weigh 2,750,000 pounds, making 6,370,000 pounds pulled by one locomotive, or over 3,180 tons. The train was over three-quarters of a mile in length.

Mrs A. Nelson, Brantford, writes: "I was a sufferer from Chronic Dyspepsia for eleven years. Always eating, an intense burning sensation in the stomach, at times very distressing, caused a drooping and languid feeling, which would last for several hours after eating. I was recommended by Mr. Popplewell, Chemist, of our city, to try Northrop & Lyman's Vegetable Discovery and Dyspeptic Cure, and I am thankful to say that I have not been better for years; that burning sensation and languid feeling has all gone, and food does not lie heavy on my stomach. Others of my family have used it with best results."

STRAY ANIMALS.

The law requires that every person who takes in a stray animal must notify the township clerk of his municipality of the fact, in addition to advertising it, giving an accurate description of the animal as possible. The clerk is required to keep a list of all such animals. Persons failing to comply with this provision of the law, lay themselves subject to a heavy penalty, and besides cannot collect expenses for keeping, etc.

Advice to Mothers.

Are you disturbed at night and broken of your rest by a sick child suffering and crying with pain of cutting teeth? If so, send at once and get a bottle of MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP FOR CHILDREN TEETHING. Its value is incalculable. It will relieve the poor little sufferer immediately. Depend upon it, mothers, there is no mistake about it. It cures dysentery and diarrhœa, regulates the stomach and bowels, cures wind colic, softens the gums, reduces inflammation, and gives tone and energy to the whole system. MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP FOR CHILDREN TEETHING is pleasant to the taste, and is the prescription of one of the oldest and best female nurses and physicians in the United States, and is for sale by all druggists throughout the world. Price 25 cents a bottle.

THE JUDGMENT OF HEAVEN.

While James Lyman, of Brown county, Ind., who was noted for profanity, was pouring forth a volley of oaths a few days ago, he was struck on the earth. His sight was destroyed, speech gone and motion impossible. After 30 minutes' prostration he recovered slightly, but was unable to regain speech. His eyes were also dimmed. He has since been in a half conscious condition.

A BRANTFORD VICTORY AND A DEFEAT.

The Scott Act was voted on for the city on Thursday, as well as for the county. Great interest was taken in the fight, and a large vote polled. Everything passed off quietly. In the city the Act was defeated by 165 majority. The streets were very lively with carriages bringing voters to the polls. In the county the Act was carried by a vote of more than two to one.

A CLASSICAL EDUCATION.

I am afraid that George is giving too much attention to the classics, remarked an old lady.

Why do you think so? asked the old gentleman.

Because when he was at home the other day I overheard him tell young Smith that he played cricket a great deal, and that his studies were mostly all Greek to him. But I am glad the poor boy plays ball occasionally.

On Friday last John Ferguson was brought up in the Police Court for judgment on the charge of committing the Mills' fur robbery. The evidence adduced at the trial the week previous was so conclusive that the magistrate expressed himself as having no doubt of his guilt, and a sentence of three years in the central prison was imposed. At the request of prisoner the sentence was transferred to Kingston penitentiary.

Sabbath School Anniversary

Rev. Mr. McAmmond will, D. V., preach a sermon in the Mark street Methodist church in the interest of the Sabbath School of that church, next Sunday morning at 11 a. m. He will also occupy the pulpit again in the evening at 7 p. m. Miss Fanning, formally of Hamilton, pupil of the late Antonio Barilli, will be present at both services and lead in the singing. Miss Fanning's reputation as a singer will doubtless attract a large crowd both morning and evening.

Council Meeting.

A special meeting of the town council was held on Thursday night at which there were present Messrs. Cahill, Davidson, McNeil, Millar, Rutherford and Menzies. Mr. Menzies occupied the chair. The only business done was amending the by-law fixing the polling places for the coming elections, by substituting for the third ward, Mr. Yelland's coal office, Murray street (Toole's old stand), for the place designated in the original by law. The chairman very firmly sat on any attempt to enlarge the business of the meeting beyond the specific object for which it was called, and, of course, the session was of the briefest.

The Red Flag.

In the first issue of the EXAMINER in January will be found the opening chapters of Miss M. E. Braddon's historical novel, "The Red Flag." Miss Braddon has never written a more entertaining story than this. The terrible scenes enacted by the commune in Paris after the capitulation to the Germans in the late Franco-Prussian war, are described in vivid colors, and the thread of love and romance running through the story, captivates the reader and holds him entranced from the beginning to the end of the last chapter. "Love for a Day" will be completed next issue. Short stories suitable for the Xmas season will be published in the next two weeks.

Collegiate Institute.

In our condensation in last issue but one, of the report of the High School Inspector, referring to the Collegiate Institute, we inadvertently omitted that portion relating to the proficiency of the different classes examined in the Peterborough Collegiate Institute. The proficiency is indicated by numerals, 1 indicating excellent, 2, good, 3- but it is not worth while to mention the other figures, for very creditably, no lower figures than 1 are needed to describe our Institute's class standing. The Inspector reports the proficiency of the classes examined to be:—In Latin, 1, in Greek, 1, in French, 1, in German, 1, in English Grammar, 1, in English Literature, 1, in Algebra, 1, in Geometry 1, in Trigonometry, 1, in History, 1, in Geography, 1. Thus in the standard subjects taught in the Institute, the proficiency receives the highest rating, a fact which speaks strongly in favor of the efficiency of the present staff.

Mind now, what I say.

Respiration and Circulation.

All who want to know more about the wonders of the human body, should hear the first lecture of the popular Y.M.C.A. course. It will be given by Dr. Fife, on Thursday evening, 18th Dec., at 8 o'clock in the Y.M.C.A. hall, over the post office. It is the first of a course of ten lectures by local gentlemen on interesting topics. Tickets for the course may be had at fifty cents. Admission to single lectures will be 10 cents.

Remember! Remember! Turnbull is now offering Great Bargains in Remnants. All ends measured and laid out, at reduced prices.

Church Opening.

On Sunday December 28th the new Baptist church, Murray street, will be formally opened for public worship. On that day Rev. Dr. Thomas of the Jarvis street Baptist church, Toronto, will preach sermons at 11 a. m. and 7 p. m. On Monday evening a social meeting will be held in the church, at which addresses will be given by Rev. Dr. Thomas, Rev. S. H. Dyke and resident ministers. Excellent and appropriate music will be provided. Tea will be served at 5 o'clock. Admission 25 cents. All are invited.

Charlotte Street Bazaar.

A very successful bazaar and entertainment was held in the lecture room of Charlotte street Methodist Church, on Thursday night. The attendance was large and the bazaar was a gratifying success. The entertainment consisted of music, quartettes, duets and solos, by Misses Stevens, Lamaden, Miller, May Snider, A. Brundrett, Jennie Coe, Messrs. J. Miller, H. Stevens and W. Pearse. A dialogue was well given by Misses Stock, Barry, Alford and Miller. Mrs. Chambers, assisted by Mr. E. Snider, furnished the accompaniments upon a piano, kindly loaned by Mr. D. Smart. The proceeds, which are devoted to the funds of the Sunday School, netted about $100.

Another Victim of the Nile.

On Thursday last Mrs. J. E. Falkner, of No, 2 ward, whose husband joined the Canadian Contingent to the Gordon relief expedition, received a telegram from the Governor-General stating that her husband had been drowned in the Nile. What adds to the keenness of her grief is the fact that only the day before she received from her husband his first letter, reporting himself in good health, not exposed to danger, and full of hope for a speedy and joyful reunion. The deceased was a young man, aged 27 years, a native of Durham county, England. He was a baker by trade, and worked for Wm. Stock, Sherbrooke street. He was a sober, industrious man, and leaves a widow and two small children behind him.

J. MCALEER.

Frightful Saw-Mill Accident.

A frightful accident occurred on Saturday at the saw and stave mill of Mr. John Hunter, on the river, in Otonabee township, about nine miles from town. Mr. Hunter went out of the mill for a few minutes, leaving his son Robert, aged about 25 years, using the grindstone to sharpen an axe. By some means the belt came off the grindstone pulley, and the unfortunate young man was caught in the belt and so twisted and entangled in it and whirled about the shaft that the belt had to be cut in several pieces before his mangled remains could be released. Death must have been instant, for not a bone of the body, which was crushed into a shapeless mass of pulp, was left unbroken. One boot was torn from the foot without injuring the boot. Never was any man so completely crushed and mangled out of any semblance of a human being.

The Catholic Bazar

On Saturday evening, this most successful enterprise was brought to a conclusion. The returns are not yet all in from the various sub-treasurers, but a careful estimate places the net result of the bazar enterprise throughout, between $5000 and $6000. It is expected the exact result will announced next Sunday.

True to His Character.

On Tuesday night, when about 200 Orangemen, in procession, headed by the band, went to the O. & Q. station to receive Rev. Mr. Chiniquy, Sir John took the honor to himself and came out and made a few jokes to the few Tories present, who went down expressly to get a view of his coat tails as he passed through on his way to Toronto.

Complimentary.

The Canadian American, published in Chicago, says: "Among the successful men in this country there are hundreds of old Tassie boys—that is, men who received their education at the old Galt, Ont., Grammar School. They will be interested to know that Dr. Tassie is now at the head of the Peterborough Collegiate Institute, and that he is rapidly bringing that school to the front." We might add that since the 1st of September the number of pupils in the Institute has largely increased.

Nothing Cheap but the Price.

On Monday evening the Tavernier Dramatic Company, opened a season at the Opera House, playing in good style to good seats, beginning with "The Mighty Dollar," with 'The Danities' the following night. The Company is a good one and the plays are well mounted and presented. The price of admission is only ten cents, (20, reserved seats), but there is nothing cheap about the performances, but the price. They are better worth seeing than most of the high priced shows.

Grand Opening Carnival.

On Friday evening, December 26th, a grand opening fancy dress carnival will be held in the new Curling and Skating Rink, Charlotte street. A spectacle of great attractiveness will be presented, the rink being lighted with electric lamps; and expensive prizes for costumes presented. A Curling match will also be played, between Peterborough and Lindsay, the latter sending the rinks that won the gold medals at Montreal, and the local rinks will be composed of the members that won the silver medal in Toronto. A close contest may be expected.

St. Paul's Presbyterian Church.

The new and beautiful lecture and school rooms of St. Paul's Church are completed and ready for use, and the enterprise of the Ladies' Aid Society on Wednesday afternoon first employed them—for holding a sale of useful articles and for giving a social entertainment. The sale began at three o'clock. The numerous beautiful and, many of them, costly articles, especially a table cover in arrasene embroidery, were displayed to great advantage in the ladies' parlour, on the first floor. The room was also beautifully decorated, a fine pyramid of cut flowers having a delightful effect, and a prominent feature was a large scroll bearing the word "Welcome," which, however, the cordial greeting of the ladies in charge rendered quite superfluous. This department was in charge of Mrs. Walsh, Mrs. McDonald and Mrs. Robt. Hall. Adjoining, in the infant's class room, were the temptingly spread refreshment tables, presided over by Mrs. Innes, Mrs. R. Hamilton, and Misses Brown and Hamilton. In the evening the school room on the second floor was the scene of the social gathering, which was, as well as the sale, a most successful affair. In the alcoves representing the class rooms were spread tastefully laid and decorated tables, with abundance of refreshments. This department was in charge of Mrs. Bertram, Mrs. W. Davidson, Mrs. James Dickson and Mrs. (Dr.) Taylor. The inception, management and outcome of the affair was exceedingly creditable to the executive ability, taste and tact of the members of the Ladies' Aid Society.

FROM BAD TO WORSE.

To the Editor of THE EXAMINER:

SIR,—I was pleased to see in your paper of last week, the manly position taken by Mr. Bell, of Smith, in regard to the lease of the new Agricultural Grounds. I was glad to see that he had the courage to express his mind and to resign, when his retention of office implied an endorsation of a scheme he opposed. For years the Society has been going down, and its prospects are no better, if not, indeed, worse, than they were five years ago. And there will be no improvement so long as the Secretary is allowed to "run the show,"—to make it a medium, as seems to have been done in the selection of the new site, of indirectly promoting his own personal interests at the expense of the Society, and consequently, of the general public.

REV. MR. CHINIQUY.

He Addresses an Immense Audience in George Street Church.

The large auditorium of George Street Methodist church was well filled on Tuesday night to listen to the address of Rev. Mr. Chiniquy, delivered under the auspices of the Orange Association of Peterborough. Mr. J. B. McWilliams occupied the chair, and Rev. Messrs. Munro, Bennett, De St. Dalmas, and Torrance occupied seats on the platform. Rev. Mr. Munro offered prayer. The chairman stated that the object of the address was to give a chance to hear a gentleman of such great repute, zeal and courage, and to arouse Protestants and Orangemen to resist the aggressions of Rome.

Rev. Mr. Chiniquy said he did not come to insult Roman Catholics, but he must tell the truth for the benefit of both them and Protestants. Many Roman Catholics were honest in their errors, and in earnestness of work, zeal and sacrifice, they put Protestants to shame. Protestants were too much engrossed with money making and politics, when they has a battle to fight. If they did not fight it they would soon again be under the power of the Pope. In speaking of the "Dangers ahead for Canada from Romanism," he depicted the condition of England and Scotland 400 or 500 years ago, when they were covered with darkness. There was no light, no Bible. The priests taught the people to go to Mary instead of Jesus, The latter was pictured as an offended Deity, only to be appeased through her intercession. Jesus was not known as the friend of sinners. Instead of going to Him the people were taught to go the priests, and wives and daughters were defiled by the vile questions which it was the priest's duty to ask in the confessional. Instead of Jesus there was purgatory, where "money" was the price of salvation. But the introduction of the Bible as the only light brought a great change. The people learned that salvation was a Gift, and there was no need of confessions, purgatory or money. Under the direction of the Pope, the bishops were directed to exterminate the heretics who clung to the Bible. The speaker detailed the terrible persecutions that followed, in which ten millions of so-called heretics were destroyed. The struggle for religious liberty in England, as culminating in the victory of the Boyne was depicted at length. The power of the Pope was broken, and our ancestors raised the flag of liberty of conscience that to-day floats over all the world. He did not revive these recollections to stir up dissension. The Church of Rome was the same now as in the past. If the Pope does not now direct the extermination of "heretics" it is not because he thinks it a bad thing. The same beliefs are still held. The speaker translated a paragraph from St. Thomas Aquinas (page 90, vol. 4), which priests had to learn by heart to know their duty towards heretics, in which it was laid down that heretics were to be exterminated. Rome says that no heretic has a right to live. The priest who would not heed that direction would be a bad priest, and he would be a bad Catholic who would not be willing to kill a heretic, when told to do so. The hour would come, if Protestants did not wake up, when the truth of the statement would be put to test. The speaker denounced the evils of party among Protestants and the danger of electing to Parliament men who were in the hands of bishops. There should be only one party, the soldiers of Christ. The speaker had been a most devoted and earnest priest for 25 years, but he saw the Light and came out of darkness. He entered into a detail of his work since, showing how successful God had made him, and what great persecution and danger of death he suffered. The Pope and bishops had often sought his life. The speaker continuing, said he did not come to raise bad feelings towards the Roman Catholics, they were in ignorance. They were not wicked in these things, only blind. He enjoined his hearers not to hate individual Roman Catholics, but to destroy the church system, not by persecution, but with the sword of God, the Bible. Referring again to his personal work, the speaker said, that by God's mercy, he had wrenched 30,000 souls from Rome, among which were 26 priests. Referring to one episode of his career, he said that if Rev. Mr. Bennett had not come to his aid and extended the hand of kindness he would have been destroyed. He asked him to come to Canada, and he had come. The forefathers of Canadians had conquered Canada, and the present people were urged to retain the victory by giving money to carry on mission work. If all would say it, Rome would fall. At the conclusion of the lecture, a vote of thanks, moved by Rev. Mr. Torrence seconded by Rev. Mr. De St. Dalmas, was tendered Rev. Mr. Chiniquy. Rev. Mr. Bennett pronounced the benediction, and, at the suggestion of the chairman, the singing of "God Save the Queen," closed the exercises.

SERMON IN MEMORIAM.

The Late Rev. J. W. Butcher.

On Sunday evening last Rev. Mr. Tovell, pastor of the George street Methodist church, preached a sermon commemorative of the life of the late Rev. Mr. Butcher. The sermon was prefaced with a brief biographical sketch of the deceased minister, who was born in St. James, Suffolk, England, in 1821. At an early age he came to Prince Edward Island, and at the age of 17 years was converted to God. At the age of 21 he entered the ministry of the Bible Christian church, being received in 1842. For nearly a quarter of a century—24 years—Rev. Mr. Butcher earnestly and successfully followed his life calling. In 1867 he came to Peterborough and labored for sometime, being assigned subsequently to Mitchell, Ingersoll, Exeter and Crediton. He was a most earnest, faithful preacher and pastor, whose work in winning souls to Christ was crowned with great success; he was a kind father, affectionate husband, and a Christian of most devoted character. Although, through failing health he retired two years since from active work, the Ashburnham congregation needing a pastor, he filled the want and labored there till the Union. After a life of 61 years, two-thirds of which was passed in the Christian ministry, he was called to his heavenly reward. The text of the sermon was from Ephesians, 3rd chapter and 15th verse—"Of whom the whole family in Heaven and earth is named." It was pointed out that the family of God were all one, no matter how separated, or in what varying conditions of life or residence. This view of the subject was eloquent, elaborated and aptly illustrated. While spiritualism was denounced, yet the influence of the departed spirits of the blest was consolingly depicted. The discourse was an exceedingly able, eloquent and impressive one, and exactly suited to the solemnity of the occasion. A fitting and touching climax to the sermon was the singing, at its conclusion, of "The Sweet Bye and Bye."

Peterborough House Furnishing Store!

We take this opportunity of letting the general public know of our establishment. People are calling on us from time to time, enquiring whether this is the CHEAP STORE. One lady actually told us she knew where they sold things at half price. Others say, after having purchased elsewhere, if they only knew of our establishment, they would have done otherwise. These are some of the kind of experiences need about our business. While we believe a good business can only be done by constantly and well advertising it, we also think it necessary to let the public know exactly what we are doing, by the use of printer's ink. We do not know of anyone else who wants to sell cheap, except those who have been in business enough to trust unprincipled persons, they have chosen us and left us, why do not the customers of such. We would now just say stranger friend, when you are told by some kind friend to go to the Home Furnishing Store, do not fail to do so.

HALL'S BIG BISCUIT BUSINESS.

And Collossal Family Industry.

Though we have before had the pleasure of describing G. W. Hall's Biscuit and Confectionery business, yet, under the impetus of his enterprise and energy, it has taken such strides, that it is well worth calling the attention of the public to again.

The present business is a revival on a larger scale of the business carried on by Mr. Hall on Water street, for several years. The total destruction of his factory by fire in Sept. 1882, did not destroy Geo. W. Hall's business energy. He secured the present commodious premises on Simcoe street, and reopened his factory, almost on the tenth anniversary of the beginning of the industry in Peterborough—in 1882.

THE CONFECTIONERY DEPARTMENT.

This is one of the departments of Mr. Hall's business whose consideration will be of greatest interest at the present time, and therefore may well be considered first. At this season the youngsters, especially, will revel in tons of Hall's candy luxuries, and as it will be interesting for them to know how the sweets they devour are made, we purpose taking them with us to show them

HOW CANDY IS MADE.

The whole of the second floor of the huge building is devoted to the manufacture of sweetmeats and candies. The commonest kind, stick candy, is made by placing in a copper kettle the finest standard granulated sugar with a due proportion of water, and heating to 320 degrees. The boiling syrup is then poured upon iron slabs where it is allowed to cool slightly; when flavored and coloured, workmen take it and pull it across iron hooks till the amber color becomes white and it looses its waxy consistency. The mass is then re-warmed and kneaded into the shape of a large loaf of bread. If striped candy is to be made, a small portion of the batch is colored, say, red. This is spun out and laid on and pressed lengthwise of the "loaf." This is then placed on a long table, one end of which is covered with tin heated from beneath. The operator, with leather gloved hands, then "spins" out a roll of the material to the size of an ordinary candy stick, and about ten feet long; another operator rolls it on the long table, and the color appears on the outside in delicate spiral stripes. When the batch is all spun out there are about twenty of these ropes of candy lying along side. They are cut into sticks with blunt pointed scissors, and are ready to be boxed and put upon the market. All kinds of stick candy and balls eyes are made in a similar manner. All the colorings used are purely vegetable and entirely harmless.

CREAM CANDY

is made from the same kind of syrup as the former, though heated to a lower degree. It is poured on a marble slab, and when at a milk heat is stirred with wooden spatulas to the color and consistence of cream. It is then re-heated and poured into moulds made by pressing any of over fifty different patterns of flowers, birds, pipes, etc., into shallow trays of corn starch. The surface of the creams is crystalized by covering them with syrup boiled at a low degree. They are allowed to stand for 12 hours, then the surplus syrup is poured off and the creams appear sparkling with crystals.

CHOCOLATE CANDY

is made by the same process to begin with, only the conical fondants or castings of cream after being dried and brushed are dipped into melted chocolate and then dried.

ROCK CANDY

is made by pouring syrup heated to a low degree, into a square tin can, across which are stretched strings about two inches apart. At the end of thirty hours the surplus syrup is poured off, and the strings are found to be covered with glittering masses of sugar crystals. This accounts—not "for the milk in the cocoanut"—but for the string in the rock candy.

CARAWAY COMFITS,

Almonds and other coated goods are made as follows: The almonds, or whatever is to be the heart of the comfit to be made, are put into a hollow copper pan, then heated by steam passed through a coil on the outside. The syrup is then poured in and the pan revolved by machinery till the kernal or seed is thoroughly coated. The coated kernels are then taken out, dried and polished by being placed in a similar revolving pan coated inside with white wax.

This department is in charge of Mr. John Watt, a gentleman whose 18 years' experience and thorough knowledge of the business, make the candy and confectionery of Mr. Hall so popular. The daily output of candy is about 500 pounds, making in a year of 300 working days a total of 150,000 lbs., or 750 tons. The sugar solely used is the best standard granulated, obtained from Redpath in car lots. At Christmas time the staff is working double time—day and night, so greatly do the operations of Santa Claus stimulate the candy market.

In addition to the kind of candies above described there are turned out by Hall's works all other kinds, such as almond tablets, motto candies, etc., etc. The tissue for the latter and the mottoes are obtained from New York. The lunatic asylum in which the poet who writes the "poetry" of the mottoes is composed, is not known.

THE BISCUIT BUSINESS.

This branch of the business, though here alluded to last, is by no means least. Its importance may be seen when it is stated that in the course of a single year the total amount of flour used is 375,000 lbs., lard, 45,000 lbs. and 750 barrels of granulated sugar, besides raisins, currants, ginger, soda, etc. The flour—all wheat exclusively—is furnished by Clegg's mills, and the lard comes from Geo. Matthews & Son's pork packing establishment.

The making of biscuits by machinery entirely is a very simple process. The batch, say for soda biscuits, (about 700 lbs.) is mixed in a huge mixing trough; when this is ready for baking it is run first through a mixer by means of a large revolving screw, which thoroughly mixes the mass, which is next run through a brake—heavy iron rollers—and then through another brake not more closely. The dough is then passed to a cutting machine, which cuts it into biscuits and stamps them. These are then carried on a wide belt in front of the revolving oven, which when at full blast bakes the biscuit at two revolutions. When baked the biscuits are poured upon a broad shelf with a flanged edge. They are next packed in regular layers in wooden boxes made by Mr. Enos Dunsford, or into three pound boxes, which as well as the candy boxes, are supplied from the EXAMINER bindery. The dexterity of the girls who do the packing is marvellous. Hour after hour through the day they will pack as eighteen pound box, containing about 560 biscuits, in eight minutes. In addition to soda biscuits there are made here wine, lemon, Sultana-lemon, Abernethy, and ginger snaps. In fancy cakes there are made spiced jumbles, queen's cakes, grocer's cakes, oyster crackers, oatmeal crackers, etc., etc. These goods are all of first-class quality, Hall's sodas especially, having been graded as first-class at the recent meeting of the Biscuit Manufacturers' Association. At any rate the demand for them is rapidly increasing. In the Midland District their substance will be found on every table and their praise in every mouth. The district covered by the Hall's delivery wagons is Midland and Hallberton on the north, Port Hope, Bowmanville, Campbellford, and Harwood on the south. This district his wagons visit regularly every month. Besides, he ships large quantities of his goods by rail.

The excellency of the goods manufactured by Mr. Hall, as well as the extent of his business, make it one of the most important in the town. Employment is given thirteen hands the year round, and the output is $200 worth daily, or over $60,000 per year.

Besides, his cigar business is one of no mean importance. He handles about a million cigars per year, the product of the following manufacturers: J. M. Foster, G. Fisbell & Co., and Olmstead Bros., Montreal, and Kelly & Co., London.

Mr. Hall's establishment is a sample of what go-aheadativeness and enterprise will, when rightly directed, accomplish, and we are sure that we only echo the general public sentiments when we wish him unbounded success.

KEENE.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

Sleighing at last.

Fashionable wedding on the thirtieth,—ring the bells!

There was good skating on the river till the ice got snowy.

The rink will open on or about Christmas day, whereof all the youngsters and souse of the oldsters will be exceeding glad.

The spire of the new Presbyterian Church will soon be completed; it is very cold in the celestial regions of its taper sides, and the mechanic would willingly occupy a lumber or more earthly locality.

HAND ENTERTAINMENT.

The members of the Keene Brass Band gave an entertainment in the Town Hall, on Friday evening nineteenth, that will long be remembered by those who witnessed it, as one of the most enjoyable affairs that ever took place here. On account of the severity of the weather, the house was not packed as we would like to have seen it, but a very intelligent and exceedingly well behaved audience was present, and signified their pleasure frequently and most emphatically. The first on the programme was a very fine piece of music by the Band, led by the talented Mr. Freeman, their instructor. They and he certainly deserve great praise, for the unusual progress made within a year. We hope they may long continue to delight us with their sweet strains. Next was a beautiful song by Miss Amy Gallon, of Lindsay. This young lady was suffering from a severe cold as we were told, and so could not hope to succeed as she would wish. Notwithstanding this she sang in a very pure and pleasant tone one of those touching child's-wish songs, which went to the heart of all who heard it, and her "Dandy, goodnight," at its close, will not soon be forgotten. Then a temperance reading by Dr. Massie, Keene, which was entitled "Found dead," and was deeply pathetic, and a sermon in itself on the evils of drinking. Next, a humorous song by Miss Amy Gallon, representing the styles of different singers at "Mrs. Jones' Musical Party" to which every one went prepared for "Most terrible sequels." Miss Gallon is certainly as talented as she is beautiful, and we predict for her no common career, if she always succeeds as well as she did in her inimitable rendering of the "heavy swell," when he sings "Oh, Jerusalem, etc.," and others of like persuasion. She was rapturously encored, and responded with a courtly bow that would have graced a prima donna. Next in order was reading by Dr. Massie, a matrimonial squabble in the broadest of broad Scottish dialect, which was capitally given by the Dr. who is a good reader, and fairly brought down the house again and again in the course of his rendering the trials of Bob Johnston with his wife Maggie. Then we had a selection from the opera, by the Peterborough Orchestra, ending another last one in the evening. These gentlemen rank very high, as performers on the cornet and violin &c., and the music they made was simply perfect, being listened to with intense attention, and applauded with noisy delight by present. Next came the piece of the evening, a comic operetta entitled "Gertrude, or the Lass of a Lover." In this play, Miss Minnie Gallon is Gertrude, the the heroine, a sweet, bewitching little waiting maid, whose innocent frankness and amiability added to her honest desire for a sweetheart, even if a borrowed one, charmed every heart in the building, and this young lady's rendering of her part, her sweet, and very pure tones in the higher range of voice in singing, her thorough abandonment of self, in the character she presented, were worthy of a place on the boards of Drury Lane. Her acting was true to nature, and excelled that of some celebrated leading ladies we have seen. Next to her in merit, was the acting of Mr. Wylie of Keene, who, as a pompous, withered old butler, in accurate and most correct readimentals, was everybody's friend but Gertrude's, till he learned she had a fortune, and then made sudden and most ridiculous love to her, even trying the kneeling attitude to win her. Mr. Wylie was a strong support to the piece, and rendered his part in an exceeding truthful and well chosen style, and his "Yorkshire ham" was well sung, and elicited delighted applause. Mr. Campbell, the Keene teacher, well sustained the part of the hero of the play "Peter Spike" a young farmer, who succeeded in knowing his own mind at last, and in winning Gertrude, who always liked him. His dress was correct and well chosen, and his rendering of Peter's vacillating character was well received by the appreciative audience. The minor parts were taken by Miss Campbell as "Lady Kraestine," and Dr. Shaw of Keene, as Capt. Amesfort, both of whom excelled in their characters, particulary Miss Campbell, who was the indignant lady, and the repentant sweetheart, was haughty or imperious, and humbly loving with equal success. Dr. Shaw made a good officer in H. M. S.—was gallant and generous, patriotic and passionate, as the part required, and was correct in costume and acting generally. The young page or porter Mr. J. Bryce of Keene, sustained his part admirably also, and his manly proposal for Gertrude and her money to Peter Spike, his defiance and descriptions of her in her words with said Peter, was a bit of acting that sustained the general excellence of the whole play, which, from prologue to epilogue was a decided success. Some of the young people expected a dance after the concert, but owing to some misunderstanding it did not come off. Proceeds something over thirty dollars, which was very good, considering the bitter cold.—COM.

THE REJUVENATED RINK.

Rink Removed, Rebuilt, and Ready for the Rejuvenilists.

Within the past two months there has risen on Charlotte street between George and Aylmer streets, an imposing new skating and curling rink, and the company is to be congratulated on the splendid structure now ready for use. The decision once formed to remove the rink from Dickson's rear to its present more central position, was followed by little delay in proceeding with the work. It was at first contemplated to simply remove the original wooden structure, but largely owing to the very practically expressed arguments of Mr. Mayor Cox, it was decided to do the well what was well worth doing. Consequently substantial stone foundations were laid down; on these the original frame was placed, and outside it nine-inch brick walls. Some idea of what this latter addition involved may be gathered from the fact that 117,000 brick were used in the work, and to cover the immense expanse of roof 170,000 shingles were used, which were laid in over half an acre of mortar. The inside of the building has a very neat appearance. The huge pile of red brick is relieved by broad pilasters of white brick. The roof is tipped at the ends, and the cornice of this part is neatly ornamented with brackets, while the rest of the gable is finished with brick laid in ornamental style. The exterior of the structure presents a very imposing and neat appearance.

THE COMPLETED BUILDING

is a spleadidly built structure, covering nearly half an acre of ground. It is 104 feet in width by 193 feet in length. It provides three curling rinks 18x160 feet, and a skating rink 50x160 feet. Thirty-three feet are cut off the front for waiting rooms, etc. The entrance is on Charlotte street, (level with the pavement) by two doors three feet wide, and hung so as to open with equal facility outwardly and inwardly. These admit to a vestibule 6x18, and by ascending two or three steps the general level of the floor is reached. The hall contains wide stairs to the galleries on either side, and beside these are the ticket offices. This hall opens on a broad passage to the right and left, from which admission is got to the ladies', gentlemen's, and curlers' waiting rooms, each suitably fitted and furnished for its intended use. From this passage also, the floor of which is elevated four or five feet above the ice, from which it is screened by a close railing (so to speak), there are flights of steps, five feet in width, divided in the middle by a railing, to admit skaters and curlers to the ice. There are five of these flights, one at each side of the skating rink, and one leading to each of the curling rinks.

The gallery is the same in size as in the old building. The band stand is in the same relative position. In the front of the building, on the gallery floor, the club room is partitioned off, 16x40 feet in size. The building is much more solid than the old one, the rear gallery, which in the old building admitted of some vibration, has been so thoroughly braced in every way by the builder, Mr. David Gamble, that it is as solid as the rocks of Burleigh.

THE WATER SUPPLY

for the formation of ice is furnished from the mains of the Peterboro' Water Company, and the lighting is done by six electric lamps, furnished by the Peterborough Electric Light Company, five to light the curling rinks and one in the middle over the skating rink. The rink is lighted by day by numerous windows, which are provided with close board shutters. At proper distances, at the base of the walls, iron gratings are let in the masonry to admit of the frost doing its work.

While the company is to be applauded for its enterprise, it is to be congratulated upon securing the services of so exceedingly careful and efficient a builder as Mr. D. Gamble. Having built the old rink, he was intrusted with the work of taking it down and re-erecting it on its present site. And so carefully and skilfully was the work done that not a single timber in the framework was rendered unfit to enter into the renewed structure. He deserves the greatest credit for the manner in which he has carried out the entire work.

There is one more curling rink than in the old building; this was formed by throwing out an annex on the western side 18 feet in width the whole length of the building.

Peterborough can now boast of having the largest and best skating rink in the Dominion of Canada, with the single exception of the Victoria Rink, Montreal,—no other in the province can equal it. The new rink is a splendid Christmas box to the devotees of the exhilarating and invigorating recreations of curling and skating.

The keen weather of the latter part of the week was exceedingly favorable to the formation of ice, and a splendid foundation of good solid ice has been obtained almost a foot in thickness. On Saturday morning Mr. W. G. Ferguson, the President of the Company, with the assistance of Mr. Alex. Stewart, "sexton" to the rink, marked out the "crampit" and "tee," and sent the first "stane" spinning over the glassy surface.

The public will please recollect that the opening grand carnival will take place on Friday night,—grand fancy dress carnival and curling contest between Peterborough and Lindsay.

Don't miss the opportunity of obtaining Winter Underclothing 20 per cent below regular prices, at Andrew McNeil's Tailor and Clothier, George Street.

MATHER'S CORNERS.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

At the close of a most pleasant two years term of teaching, Mr. E. L. Wood was honored by his pupils by the presentation of a very handsome silver fruit basket, accompanied with addresses. The presentation was made by Misses Ida McFarlane and Emma Taylor, and the following address read by Miss Ada L. McFarlane, on behalf of the school:

Otonabee, Dec. 19th, 1884.

Mr. Wood,

DEAR SIR,—On behalf of the scholars of S. S. No. 7, Otonabee we have great pleasure in presenting you with this fruit basket, as a small token of our love and esteem, and pray you may always be successful in life's undertakings.

On behalf of the school { ADA McFARLANE, EMMA J. TAYLOR, IDA McFARLANE.

Mr. Wood, though completely taken by surprise, replied in feeling and suitable terms, thanking the pupils for the handsome present and expressing the pleasure he had experienced during his two years stay among them.

The domestic suggestiveness of the above present has given Dame Rumour a chance of discussing our late teacher's danger of being involved in a matrimonial complication.

Mr. Wood is succeeded in the mastership of the school by Mr. Campbell, who has so successfully managed the Keene school.

Mr. Mather has a fine stock of cutters on hand, and the farmers will do well to inspect his stock before making a choice.

Things are quiet in the township at present. Our councillors have given such excellent general satisfaction that there is no probability of their being successfully opposed.

The general topic of talk among farmers is the low price of grain, and there is vengeance vowed against the bogus N. P. and its authors.

THE IN-SANITARY "CRANK."

To the Editor of THE EXAMINER:

SIR,—The information contained in "Ratepayer's" letter is much more extended than the argument. If I show he "lies in his throat" of course it will be unnecessary to draw aside the curtain that fails to hide his witherel soul and expose the inherent magnanimity of his character.

Firstly.—Conformably to the law a public meeting was called, which was instigated by governmental pressure, to form a board, which even now has no power, but through the Council, to spend one cent of the public money.

Secondly.—The labour and time expended by Dr. Clarke in unearthing the hot-beds of malaria—resulting in the sending out of some hundreds of "notices to clean up," and in the rectifying investigation of many absurd systems of amateur sewage, cannot fail to impress the public that those to whom disease is most terrible, viz.: the poor are protected by the taxation of the rich.

Thirdly.—The Doctor who advised the appointment of more medical men quoted his authority, which is the regard of experience in the large cities and town of the United States. But what's that to "Ratepayer"?

Fourthly.—The poor Water Works people must be literally scared to death. The charge of "Ratepayer" is that the Medical Health Officer is an employee of the water works. Prof. Last Carpenter, the great English scientist, said the same thing as Dr. Clarke, so he was a minion of the water works also. But the argument, or rather baseless assertion, is not about what Dr. Clarke said, but about that which he did not say. If "Ratepayer" be other than a bogus political cripple, let him come out like a man, or as near like one as he can, and say that Dr. Clark is paid by the Water Co'y, and then he may have an opportunity of defending a libel suit. But, notwithstanding that the Doctor guards one of the avenues of "peculation" "we have nothing to say against him personally." "Ratepayer" means, "The Health Officer is a rascal, but I have not pluck enough to say so, because I only think so," and "with all his faults I love him still." This latter assertion concludes. Now, Dr. Clarke says he will write and show he does something for his money; but "Ratepayer" begs him not to do his duty.

The next paragraph abuses Mr. McNeil because he is a tailor and earns an honest living. "Ratepayer" will never need to pick up a goose as long as he lives.

The inhabitants around Spaulding's Bay are, according to the doctor's lists, the most unhealthy in the town. "Ratepayer" says the doctors are designing; surely they would be as transparent as his nonsense if they who do well in sickness advised the prevention of it, so that ill might cease to them. The west wind does not carry the malaria in a solid mass, but by sheer force manages to dissipate it so that the people on the east of the lake do not get the essence of the impurity.

TOADSTABBER.

INFORMATION SUPPLIED.

To the Editor of THE EXAMINER:

MY DEAR SIR,—Questions have been asked me as to what I did on behalf of Father Chiniquy to cause such an expression of grateful emotion towards myself, as was manifested on the occasion of his recent lecture in the George street Methodist church.

In reply, I may say that the service rendered by me towards Mr. Chiniquy, was just about equal to that rendered by the boy who pushed the required pound that launched the ship. Mr. Chiniquy was in difficulty with his own Presbytery, owing to false charges that had been preferred against him. Though innocent, he was found guilty and suspended. Through a mutual friend I came to know all the circumstances of the case, and recommended to Mr. Chiniquy to seek refuge in the Canada Presbyterian church. This was in 1882. Mr. Chiniquy at once acted upon the suggestion, made his application for connection, and after full enquiry into all the charges, was eventually received as a minister of the Canada Presbyterian church.

I have had a lecture in readiness for some time, in which these trials of Mr. Chiniquy are stated in detail, and would like to take an early opportunity of giving it to the public. The lecture has been carefully revised and amended by Mr. Chiniquy himself, so that every statement has been endorsed by him, and there is much in it of which the Canadian public are altogether ignorant. In his lectures from time to time, Mr. Chiniquy has made frequent reference to his difficulties with Rome, but as far as I know has seldom, if ever, touched upon those with the Chicago Presbytery. I am

Yours truly,

WM. BENNETT.

A SUGGESTION.

To the Editor of THE EXAMINER:

KIND SIR,—Under the circumstances stated, the wise and handsome thing to do for the "escaped unrepentant drunkard," imprudently styling himself "Common Sense," is to seek a right cold bath, without delay, sober up as soon as possible, go then straight home and earnestly beseech his unlucky mother to stow him away snugly in his own little bed. The "unrepentant drunkard" is little likely to have an overpins of "glittering gold," and much less as to be distressed with, any whit of "common sense." If his maudlin attempt to relieve his surfeited person of a choice specimen O-K of extreme stale wit, be any token of his mental condition, the asylum from which he "escaped" is highly favored by his riddance, to the detriment of society; and the "key" most congenial and adapted to his craving desires, is the tremen-stop whis-key. That he "stick quietly to his knitting," leave the religious discussion to care for itself, and "receive the benefit" of that rest which he so badly needs, is the wholesome advice charitably given him by SUNIE.

Burdens Lifted.

"Cast thy burden upon the Lord, and He shall sustain thee."—Psalm, lv., 22.

David was there taking his own medicine. If anybody had on him heavy weights, David had them, and yet out of his own experience he advises you and me as to the best way of getting rid of burdens. This is a world of burden-bearing.

During the past few days tidings came from across the sea that Bishop Wiley, of the Methodist church, in the discharge of his duty—going around the world—falls at his work at Foo Chow, China. A man full of the Holy Ghost was he, his name the synonym for all that is good, and kind, and gracious, and beneficient, and that entire denomination has a burden of mourning. Word comes to us from West Virginia and from Kentucky of a scourge sweeping off hundreds and thousands of people, and there is a burden of sorrow. Sorrow on the sea and sorrow on the land. Coming into the house of prayer there may be no sign of sadness or sorrow, but where is the man who has not a conflict? Where is the soul that has not a struggle? And there is not a day of all the year when my text is not gloriously appropriate, and there is never an audience assembled on the planet where the text is not gloriously appropriate: "Cast thy burden upon the Lord, and He shall sustain thee."

In the far East wells of water are so infrequent that when a man owns a well he has property of very great value, and sometimes battles have been fought for the possession of one well of water; but there is one well that every man owns, a deep well, a perennial well, a well of tears. If a man has not a burden on this shoulder he has a burden on the other shoulder.

The day I left home to look after myself and for myself, in the waggon my father sat driving, and he said that day something which has kept with me all life: "De Witt, it is always safe to trust God." I have many a time come to a crisis of difficulty. You may know that, having been sick for fifteen years, it was no easy thing for me to support a family, but always God came to the rescue. "I remember the time," he said, "when I didn't know what to do, and I saw a man on horseback riding up the farm lane, and he announced to me that I had been nominated for the most lucrative office in all the gift of the people of the county; and to that office I was elected, and God in that way met all my wants, and I tell you it is always safe to trust Him."

Oh, my friends, what we want is practical religion. The religion people have is so high up you cannot reach it. I had a friend who entered the life of an evangelist. He gave up a lucrative business in Chicago, and he and his wife finally came to severe want. He told me that in the morning at prayers he said: "Oh Lord, thou knowest we have not a mouthful of food in the house! Help me, help us! And he started out on the street, and a gentleman met him and said: "Cole, I have been thinking about you for a good while. You know I am a flour merchant; if you won't be offended, I should like to send you a barrel of flour." He cast his burden on the Lord, and the Lord sustained him. Now, that is the kind of religion that we want.

In the Straits of Magellan, I have been told, there is a place where, whichever way a ship captain puts his ship, he finds the wind against him; and there are men who all their lives have been running in the teeth of the wind, and which way to turn they do not know. Some of them may be here this morning, in this assemblage, and I address them face to face, not perfunctorily, but as one brother talks to another brother: "Cast thy burden upon the Lord, and He shall sustain thee."

There are a great many men who have business burdens. When we see a man hurried and perplexed and annoyed in business life, we are apt to say: "He ought not to have attempted to carry so much!" Ah! that man may not be to blame at all. When a man plants a business he doesn't know what will be its outgrowths, what will be its roots, what will be its branches. There is many a man with keen foresight and large business faculty who has been flung into the dust by unforeseen circumstances springing upon him from ambush. When to buy, when to sell, when to trust and to what amount of credit, what will be the effect of his new invention of machinery, what will be the effect of the loss of crop, and a thousand other questions perplex business men until the hair is silvered and deep wrinkles are ploughed in the cheek; and the stocks go up by mountains and go down by valleys, and they are at their wits' ends, and stagger like drunken men.

There never has been a time when there have been such rivalries in business as now. It is hardware against hardware, books against books, chandlery against chandlery, imported articles against imported articles. A thousand stores in combat with another thousand stores. Never such advantage of light, never such variety of assortment, never so much splendor of show window, never so much adroitness of salesmen, never so much acuteness in advertising; and amid all these severities of rivalry in business, how many men break down. Oh, the burden on shoulder! Oh, the burden on the heart!

Ah! my friends, do you say that God does not care anything about your worldly business. I tell you God knows more about it than you do. He knows all your perplexities. He knows what mortgage is about to foreclose; He knows what unsalable goods you have on your shelves; He knows all your trials, from the day you took hold of the first yard-stick, down to that sale of the last yard of ribbon, and the God who helped David to be king, and who helped Daniel to be prime minister, and who helped Havelock to be a soldier, will help you in the struggles of your duties. If you forget the Almighty, When loss comes and you find the account going, footpaths in black and you have by your ledger, and read of the eternal possessions that will come to you through our Lord Jesus Christ. And when your business partner betrays you, and your friends turn against you, just take the insulting letter, put it down on the table, put your Bible beside the insulting letter, and then read of the friendship of Him who "sticketh closer than a brother."

A young accountant in New York city got his accounts entangled. He knew he was honest, and yet he could not make his accounts come out right, and he toiled at them day and night until he was nearly frenzied. It seemed by these books that something had been misappropriated, and he knew before God he was honest. The last day came. He knew that if he could not that day make his accounts come out right, he would go into disgrace and into banishment from the business establishment. He went over there very early, before there was anybody in the place, and he knelt down at the desk and said: "Oh, Lord, Thou knowest I have tried to be honest, but I cannot make these things come out right! Help me today—help me this morning!" The young man arose, and hardly knowing why he did so, opened a book that lay on the desk, and there was a leaf containing a line of figures which explained everything. In other words, he cast his burden upon the Lord, and the Lord sustained him. Young man, do you hear that?

Oh, yes, God has a sympathy with everybody that is in any kind of toil! He knows how heavy is the hod of bricks that the workman carries up the ladder of the wall; He hears the pickaxe of the miner down in the coal shaft; He knows how strong the tempest strikes the sailor at masthead; He sees the factory girl among the spindles, and knows how her arms ache; He sees the sewing woman on the fourth story, and knows how few pence she gets for making a garment; and louder than all the din and roar of the city comes the voice of a sympathetic God: "Cast thy burden upon the Lord, and He shall sustain thee."

Then there are a great many who have a weight of prosecution and abuse upon them. Sometimes society gets a grudge against a man. All his motives are misinterpreted and his good deeds are depreciated. With more virtue than some of the honored and applauded, he runs only against raillery and sharp criticism. When a man begins to go down, he has not only the force of natural gravitation, but a hundred hands to help him in the precipitation. Men are prosecuted for their virtues and their successes. Germanicus said he had just as many bitter antagonists as he had adornments. The character sometimes is so lustrous that the weak eyes of Envy and Jealousy cannot bear to look at it.

It was their integrity that put Joseph in the pit, and Daniel in the den, and Shadrach in the fire, and sent John the Evangelist to desolate Patmos, and Calvin to the castle of prosecution, and John Huss to the stake, and Korah after Moses, and Saul after David, and Herod after Christ. Be sure if you have anything to do for church or state, and you attempt it with all your soul, lightning will strike you. The world always has had a cross between two thieves for the one who comes to save it. High and holy enterprise has always been followed by abuse. The most sublime tragedy of self-sacrifice has come to burlesque. The graceful gait of virtue is always followed by scoffers with grimace and travesty. The sweetest strain of poetry ever written has come to ridiculous parody, and as long as there are virtue and righteousness in the world, there will be something for iniquity to grin at. All along the line of the ages, and in all lands, the cry has been, "Not this man, but Barabbas. Now, Barabbas was a robber."

And what makes the persecutions of life worse, is that they come from people whom you have helped, from those to whom you loaned money or have started in business, or whom you rescued in some great crisis. I think it has been the history of all our lives the most acrimonious assault has come from those whom we have benefitted, whom we have helped, and that makes it all the harder to bear. A man is in danger of becoming cynical.

A clergyman of the Universalist Church went into a neighborhood for the establishment of a church of his denomination, and he was anxious to find some one of that denomination, and as he was pointed to a certain house, he went there. He said to the man of the house: "I understand you are a Universalist. I want you to help me in the enterprise." "Well," said the man, "I am a Universalist, but I have a peculiar kind of Universalism." "What is that?" asked the minister. "Well," replied the other, "I have been out in the world, and I have been cheated and slandered and outraged and abused until I believe in universal damnation!" The great danger is that men will become cynical and given to believe, as David was tempted to say, that all men are liars. Oh, my friends, do not let that be the effect upon your souls! If you cannot endure a little persecution, how do you think our fathers endured great persecution? Motley, in his Dutch Republic, tells us of Egmont, the martyr, who, condemned to be beheaded, unfastened his collar on the way to the scaffold; and when they asked him why he did that, he said: "So they will not be detained in their work; I want to be ready." Oh, how little we have to do compared with those who have gone before us!

Now, if you have come across ill-treatment, let me tell you you are in excellent company—Christ and Luther and Galileo and Columbus and John Jay and Josiah Quincy and thousands of men and women, the best spirits of earth and heaven. Budge not one inch, though all hell wreak upon you its vengeance, and you be made the targets for all devils to shoot at. Do you not think Christ knows all about persecution? Was He not hissed at? Was He not struck on the cheek? Was He not persecuted all the days of His life? Did they not expectorate upon Him. Or, to put it in Bible language, "They spat upon Him?" And cannot He understand what persecution is? "Cast thy burden upon the Lord, and He shall sustain thee."

Then there are others who carry great burdens of physical ailment. When sudden sickness has come, and fierce cholerus and malignant fevers take the castles of life by storm, we appeal to God; but in these chronic ailments which wear out the strength day by day, and week after week, and year after year, how little resorting to God for solace! Then people depend upon their tonics and their plasters and cordials rather than upon heavenly stimulants.

Oh, how few people there are completely well! Some of you by dint of perseverance and care, have kept living to this time; but how you have had to war against physical ailments! Antideluvians, without medical college and infirmity and apothecary shop multiplied their years by hundreds; but he who has gone through the gauntlet of disease in our time, and has come to 70 years of age, is a hero worth of a palm.

The world seems to be a great hospital, and you run against rheumatism and consumptions and scrofulas and neuralgias and scores of old diseases baptized by new nomenclature. Oh, how heavy a burden sickness is! It takes the color out of the sky and the sparkle out of the wave and the sweetness out of the fruit and the lustre out of the night. When the limbs ache, when the respiration is painful, when the mouth is hot, when the ear roars with unhealthy obstruction, how hard it is to be patient and cheerful and assiduous!

"Cast thy burden upon the Lord." Does your head ache? He wore the thorn. Do your feet hurt? His were crushed by the spikes. Is your side painful? His was struck by the spear. Do you feel like giving way under the burden? His weakness gave way under a cross. While you are in every possible way to try to restore your physical vigor, you are to remember that more soothing than any anodyne, and more vitalizing than any stimulant, and more strengthening than any tonic is the prescription of the text: "Cast thy burden upon the Lord, and He shall sustain thee."

We hear a great deal of talk about faith cure, and some people say it cannot be done and it is a failure. I do not know but that the chief advance of the church is to be in this direction. Marvellous things come to pass every day which make me think that [illegible] religion liquor, it is because the faith of miracles is past.

A prominent merchant of New York a few days ago said to a member of my family: "My mother wants her congratulations to Mr. Talmage." This was the case. He said: "My mother had a dreadful abscess, from which she suffered untold agonies, and all surgery had been exhausted upon her, and worse and worse she grew until we called in a few Christian friends and proceeded to pray about it. We commended her case to God, and the abscess began immediately to be cured. She is entirely well now, and without knife and without any surgery." So that case has come to me, and there are a score of other cases coming to our ears from all parts of the earth. Oh, ye who are sick, go to Christ! Oh, ye who are worn out with agonies of body, "Cast thy burden upon the Lord, and he shall sustain thee!"

Another burden some have to carry is the burdens of bereavement. Ah! these are the troubles that wear us out. If we lose our property, by additional industry perhaps we may bring back the estranged fortune; if we lose our good name, perhaps by reformation of morals we may achieve again reputation for integrity; but who will bring back the dear departed?

Alas me! for these empty cradles and these trunks of childish toys that will never be used again. Alas me! for the empty chair and the silence in the halls that will never echo again to those familiar footsteps. Alas! for the cry of widowhood and orphanage. What bitter marahs in the wilderness, what cities of the dead, what long black shadow from the wing of death, what eyes sunken with grief, what hands tremulous with bereavement, what instruments of music shut now because there are no fingers to play on on them! Is there no relief for such souls? Ay, let that soul ride into the harbor of my text.

The soul that in Jesus hath learned to repose,
I will not, I will not desert to its foes:
That soul, though all hell shall endeavor to shake,
I'll never, no never, no never forsake,

Now, the grave is brighter than the ancient tomb where the lights were perpetually kept burning. The scarred feet of Him who was "the resurrection and the life" are on the broken grave hillock, while the voices of angles ring down the sky at the coronation of another soul come home to glory.

Then there are many who carry the burden of sin. Ay, we all carry it until in the appointed way that burden is lifted. We need no Bible to prove that the whole race is ruined. What a spectacle it would be if we could tear off the mask of human defilement, or beat a drum that would bring up the whole army of the world's transgressors—the deception, the fraud and the rapine and the murder and the crime of all the centuries! Ay, if I could sound the trumpet of resurrection in the soul of the best men in this audience, and all the dead sins of the past should come up, we could not endure the sight. Sin, grim and dire, has put its clutch upon the immortal soul, and that clutch will never relax unless it be under the heel of Him who came to destroy the work of the devil.

Oh, to have a mountain of sin on the soul! Is there no way to have the burden moved? Oh, yes. "Cast thy burden upon the Lord." The sinless one came to take the consequences of our sin! And I know He is in earnest. How do I know it. By the streaming temples and the streaming hands as He says: "Come unto me all ye who are weary and heavy laden, and I will give you rest."

Why will prodigals live on swines' husks when the robe and the ring and the father's welcome are ready? Why go on wandering over the Sahara Desert of your sin when you are invited to the garden of God, the trees of life, and the fountains of living water? Why be houseless and homeless forever when you may become the sons and daughters of the Lord God Almighty.

When that grander harvest home shall come—that harvest home of which the harvest we have recently celebrated is only a dim type—the great gathering from all nations and kingdoms and people, and they shall come from the east, and from the west, and from the north, and from the south, oh! that in that great harvest home you may be among the sheaves.

Catarrh A New Treatment.

Perhaps the most extraordinary success that has been achieved in modern medicine has been attained by the Dixon treatment for Catarrh. Out of 2,000 patients treated during the past six months, fully ninety per cent. have been cured of this stubborn malady. This is none the less startling when it is remembered that not five per cent. of patients presenting themselves to the regular practitioner are benefitted, while the patent medicines and other advertised cures never record a cure at all. Starting with the claim now generally believed by the most scientific men that the disease is due to the presence of living parasites in the tissue, Mr. Dixon at once adapted his cure to their extermination—this accomplished, he claims the Catarrh is practically cured, and the permanency is unquestioned, as cures effected by him four years ago are cures still. No one else has ever attempted to cure Catarrh in this manner, and no other treatment has ever cured Catarrh. The application of the remedy is simple, and can be done at home, and the present season of the year is the most favourable for a speedy and permanent cure, the majority of cases being cured at one treatment. Sufferers should correspond with Messrs. A. H. DIXON & SON, 305 King street west, Toronto, Canada, and enclose stamp for their treatise on Catarrh.—Montreal Star, Nov. 17, 1883. 48-52b

THE INDISPENSABLE SCOT.

Below is found the St. Andrew's poem, read by the Hand. Mr. Wm. Tolliol, at the St. Andrew's Dinner, which we were unable to publish before. It has the true ring and will be pleasant reading to the true Scotchman at any time:

IF THERE WERE NA' A SCOT.

This wad be a queer world, if there wasna a Scot,
The big axle it rins on would rumpy gang to pot,
An' the great muckle globe would upset in mid-air
If there wasna a Scot in't to balance it fair.
It looks gie like a loe, though some big fules hae said
How that man lost a hand when this world was made;
If they helped wi' the makin' o' the ass or the quid,
They were Scots—or it wadna hae been half so rid.
Our ain Queen, the guid bodie, though she wal-lowed in wealth,
Has tae gang doon tae Scotia to build up her health;
Her fourth daughter might been an auld maid even now,
If that braw Heelan' laddie hadna' ta'en her in tow
Britain's big ship of State, that presides o'er the realm,
Wad be wrecked if there wasna' a Scot at the helm;
An' the Lords an' the Commons would soon strip and skit,
But for long-headed Sandy, why he keeps them baith richt.
Britain's glory is safe; to no foe she shall kneel,
While a Scotchman commands, or a Scot points the steel.
Egyptians and Arabs wad just do as they please
If it wasna' for Scots, wi' their kilts and bare knees.
You may sail to the tropics, where the richest fruit grows;
You may penetrate Iceland, where the frost bites your nose;
You may search the hale world, in ilk civilised spot,
If you meet two white men, you will find ane a Scot.

But come nearer oursels, and I'll bate you a groat
Canada owes more than half her success to the Scot—
But for Scots' perseverance, hard work, will an' way,
Haf her wild woods and swampe would be standing to-day.
In party or politics I tak' nae delight,
For I no care a preen how they bark or they bite,
But I whiles think mysel', quick to ruin we would float,
If the safety-valve wasna' well watched by a Scot.
Look the wondrous machine that spins oot our affairs,
It is oft needing greasin' an' bits o' repairs.
It pinions and axles wad sune get red hot,
If it wasna' kept oiled by a sharp-sighted Scot.
While in makin' or mendin' the laws o' our land,
As a rule for the best, the rale Scot takes his stand.
Baith Reformers an' Tories, at the head of their ranks
Has twa Scots—though they turn upon opposite cranks.

In the pulpit, on platform, the bench or the bar,
In the counsels of peace, or at field amang war,
In the counting house, banks, at the office desks, thrang,
If they speak,—ten to one—has the rale Scottish twang.
In trade, or in commerce, by land or by sea,
Shrewd Sandy is foremaist, if its worth a bawbee.
In land carriage or shipen, guids might lie till they rot,
Ye wad heard no steam whussle had there no been a Scot.
They are canny an' cautious, but as cute as a miller,
Wi' two een like a cat's, always watchin' the ailler.
The high places they fill proves the name they have got,
Hard, honest, trustworthy, sagacious Scot.
Now, there isna' a race that lives under the sun
But has faults—and some folk say the Scotchman has one,
An' they point their forefinger at ane little blot,
Sayin' they needna' brew whisky if there wasna' a Scot.
Now, I think that's a lee, though some Scots a drop tak'
But they no drink the ha'f o' the whiska fo'ks mak';
The unprejudiced man will agree with ma views,
Very few o' them dees in the treemans or blues.

The last nicht of November, it wad pass by in gloom,
Not a fine speech or Scotch song be heard in the room.
The big Haggis micht lie there—untasted, unshorn,
Till it moulded fair green, had a Scot ne'er been born
That St. Andrew was Scotch, there is reason for doubt,
But for Scots he wad not has been spoken about,
An' they tell me in Scotia a few ashes remains
O' his toes an' his fingers, an' a wheen of sma' banes.
It's a grand world, this—but man fills it with woe,
And I wonder it wasna' destroyed long ago.
The big flood that spared Noah, or the fire that chased Lot,
Wad sune mak' a clean sweep if there wasna' a Scot.

COMING TO CANADA.

Written for THE EXAMINER.

Such a stir as there was in the "Village Home"! The sweet spring breezes that came flying across the meadows, flirting with the buttercups and daisies and playing hide-and-go-seek among the cottages seemed to have filled the air with messages of mysterious import, as if the lady sprites had so far forgotten their feminine principles as to have a tea-party and gossip about village affairs. What can it mean, I said to myself, as I walked across from Mossford Lodge, through the village, one sunny morning, taking in half-dreamily, for my thoughts were far across the waters, the pretty effect of vine-covered cottages, nicely trimmed grass plots, and groups of merry children rolling hoops, skipping and playing ball, in full view of their watchful "mothers"? Reaching the "Governor's House" the mystery was solved—and here let me humbly crave forgiveness of the lady sprites for my base insinuation concerning their gossiping proclivities, and confess that in this instance a man had raised the commotion. A message had had come from the Managing Director: "Select and prepare on hundred and fifty girls for Canada." For the dear Ilford workers this meant heavy, extra effort. I was sorry for them, and ready to help; but, oh, how glad I was. That one dear word, the name of my native land, set my heart throbbing with a pleasure that was almost pain; for every step toward preparation was for me another step toward home.

Coming back through the village I heard a childish voice calling in suppressed tones, "Girls! There she is!" Then came a regular stampede, and soon I was surrounded by bright young faces and laughing eyes, all eager, yet all to shy too ask the great question of the day. At last it came from a gentle looking girl of twelve, who crept up close and whispered, "Please, ma'am, we'd like to go to Canada. One of the Hyacinth girls says you told them such nice stories about Canada that she's going to be real good so 's you'll take her back with you, an' please 'm, won't you take me, too?" "An' me, an' me, ma'am," came from a dozen voices at once. Disclaiming the right to settle such momentous questions, I sent them back to their games with a promise to tell them a Canadian story, too, some other time. But the shy, sweet face and pleading tones of the little girl who spoke first could not be so easily dismissed from my mind. Presently I met her again, with a wistful look in the great dark eyes that went straight to my heart. "Why do you want so much to go to Canada, my child?" I said, playfully pinching the soft round cheek. "Because, ma'am, the girls said you'd get nice homes for all the girls that went out, an' I thought if I went, an' you got a home for me, then I'd belong to somebody. I don't seem to have anybody, ma'am." "Where are your father and mother, dear?" "They're dead ma'am, least-ways my mother is. I didn't ever have any father, an' there's no one, else." Could anything be more pitiful than the unsatisfied longing of this young heart for the tenderness and love that are children's birthright?

After this, my readers may be sure, I did not rest until this child's name was placed on the Canada list. I felt so thankfully proud that England's Canadian daughter might say:

Mother England, loved and honored, if the homestead's graves too small,
And the sprouts of little children are too many for the hall,
Take them from the lanes and alleys, from the perils of the street;
Show them what God meant they should be; clear a pathway for their feet;
Make them feel that work is noble; teach them what their hope may be,
And we'll give them freedom's welcome to our happy haven the sea.

Dear readers, this blessed work of rescuing and training is, from its very nature, fraught with difficulty and discouragement. But it is the Master's work and must succeed, and we hope, at no very distant day, to see our beautiful "Home" at Hazel Brae flourishing, in happy independence of English funds, an ever-increasing memorial to the large-hearted liberality and missionary spirit of our Canadian people. To this end let an alabaster box be an institution in every home, that, when broken and poured forth upon the Saviour, in the person of His "neglected little ones," shends of perfumed incense may ascend to heaven and reflect the sunlight of God's mercy in rainbow tints of matchless beauty. Christmas is fast approaching, and Jesus still waits to say, with approving smile, "Inasmuch as ye have done it unto one of the least of these, ye have done it unto Me."

THE CHEESE INDUSTRY.

LILLY LAKE FACTORY HOLDS ITS ANNUAL MEETING.

The patrons of Lilly Lake cheese factory held their annual meeting on Friday evening November 21st, Mr. Joseph Barnard in the chair, and Mr. Joseph L. Walton, secretary. After the minutes of the previous meeting were read and confirmed, the chairman gave a few well timed remarks and then called upon the president of the factory for the annual report, who, on coming forward, said it was a pleasure to him to submit to them, perhaps, as favorable a report of Lily Lake factory as others would be able to give. He said one thing above all gave him satisfaction, that not one pound of cheese had been condemned for want of good quality, during the season, and that he had done all he could to secure as good prices as possible, but believed they were at a loss for want of a larger factory, for thes, having quantity with quality they would be able to secure better prices—the time had come when cheese must be sold on their merits. He then gave the following figures:—Number of pounds of milk received at factory, 438,182; cheese manufactured from milk, 41,799 pounds; tais required 10.48 pounds of milk for one pound of cheese; this was not as good as last year, but believed the patrons were dealt with fairly. The cheese maker did not take off 15 or 20 pounds of milk every wet morning, as he believed some cheese makers did, to make their average look well at the end of the season. The money received for cheese was $4,190.89. This will give a small fraction over 10 cents per pound for cheese. The average had been struck seven times during the season, twice for May, and once for each of the other five months, and was as follows:

	Number pounds of milk for 1 lb cheese.	Price.
First half of May	11.72	12.44 cts.
Last " "	11.37	10.35
June	10 73	9.75
July	10 91	9.97½
August	10 71	10.03
September	10.19	11 27
October	9.17½	11.39½

The president then gave the patrons their accounts and cheques for cash, when new business was taken up. James Middleton was made president for 1885, at a salary of $60, and Joseph Barnard, William Swinton, Joseph L. Walton and John Campbell directors. After a few remarks from the newly elected officers, the meeting then closed.

"Sweet Maud Muller."

Whittier's beautiful ballad contains a touching allusion to the many cares and sorrows which wear upon the "heart and brain" of a wife and mother. Thousands of weary suffering women have found Dr. Pierce's "Favorite Prescription" a marvellous recuperator of wasted strength, and of sovereign efficacy in all those derangements and maladies peculiar to their sex, by reason of which the vitality is gradually sapped, and the cheek robbed prematurely of its bloom. Price reduced to one dollar. By druggists.

DEATH OF BISHOP FULLER.

The Right Rev. Dr. Fuller, Bishop of Niagara, died Wednesday morning. Several days ago he was working in his library, when he ran a three-cornered file in his hand. At first the wound did not give much trouble, but a day or two after it festered and gangrened, and blood-poisoning set in, the effects of which was the cause of his death. The Bishop was the father of Mrs. Judge Benson, of Port Hope.

Every Woman in the Land owes it to herself and her family to take care of her health. When she finds her health failing, and debility and weakness undermines her strength, her surest and best remedy is Kidney-wort. It builds up the general health, keeps the secretory system in perfect order, regulates the Kidneys and Bowels, and enables these important organs to perform their natural functions in throwing off the accumulated impurities of the body.

HARD JUSTICE.

A very singular case has just been disposed of in England. Capt. Dudley and mate Stevens, of the vessel Mignonette, who killed and ate a boy at sea in order to preserve their own lives, were tried and sentenced to death for murder. They were afterwards reapited by the Queen, and their sentence commuted to imprisonment for six months.

Mrs. W. J. Lang, Bethany, Ont., writes: "I was one of the greatest sufferers for about fifteen months with a disease of my ear similar to ulcers, causing entire deafness. I tried every thing that could be done through medical skill, but without relief. As a last resort, I tried Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil, and in ten minutes found relief. I continued using it, and in a short time my ear was cured and hearing completely restored. I have used this wonderful healer successfully in cases of inflammation of the lungs, sore throat, coughs and colds, cuts and bruises, etc., in fact it is our family medicine.

KING'S EVIL

Was the name formerly given to Scrofula because of a superstition that it could be cured by a king's touch. The world is wiser now, and knows that can only be cured by a thorough purification of the blood. If this is neglected, the disease perpetuates its taint through generation after generation. Among its earlier symptomatic developments are Eczema, Cutaneous Eruptions, Tumors, Boils, Carbuncles, Erysipelas, Purulent Ulcers, Nervous and Physical Collapse, etc. If allowed to continue, Rheumatism, Scrofulous Cachexia, Kidney and Liver Diseases, Tubercular Consumption, and various other dangerous or fatal maladies, are produced by it.

SCROFULA

Ayer's Sarsaparilla

Is the only powerful and always reliable blood-purifying medicine. It is so effectual an alterative that it eradicates from the system Hereditary Scrofula, and the kindred poisons of contagious diseases and mercury. At the same time it enriches and vitalizes the blood, restoring healthful action to the vital organs and rejuvenating the entire system. This great

Regenerative Medicine

Is composed of the genuine Honduras Sarsaparilla, with Yellow Dock, Stillingia, the Iodides of Potassium and Iron, and other ingredients of great potency, carefully and scientifically compounded. Its formula is generally known to the medical profession, and the best physicians constantly prescribe AYER'S SARSAPARILLA as its

Absolute Cure

For all diseases caused by the vitiation of the blood. It is concentrated to the highest practicable degree, far beyond any other preparation for which like effects are claimed, and is therefore the cheapest, as well as the best blood purifying medicine, in the world.

THE POPULAR CARRIAGE BUILDERS.

While thanking the public for the liberal patronage extended to us since commencing business, we beg to inform the inhabitants of Peterborough and vicinity that we have now on hand for the winter season the most superb stock of elegant Sleighs and Cutters ever turned out in the Midland District. In excellence of material and workmanship, tasty upholstering and beauty of finish, they cannot be surpassed, and hardly equalled, in any city or town in Canada. None but the best and well-seasoned material is used, first-class workmen are only employed, and in purchasing our Sleighs or Cutters the customer will not only secure a thoroughly first-class article, but will find the prices most reasonable.

CARRIAGE TOPS.

To make our establishment complete, which was before the best equipped in the Midland District, we have added to it the manufacture of Carriage Tops, and for this purpose have associated with the present firm, in this department, MR. A. GIBSON, who has especially fitted himself for the business by his experience in the leading top factories of the Dominion, and all work will be turned out under his personal supervision. Our premises have been especially fitted up for this business, and we make it a principle to use only the very best material. For Bows only Second-Growth White Ash is used, the Rails and Joints are made of the Best Wrought and Swiide Iron, while only the very best American Rubber is used for the covers. These Tops combine the latest improvements, and will be found equal to the best, either for strength or durability, style or finish.

OUR HORSE-SHOEING, JOBBING, REPAIRING AND BLACKSMITHING DEPARTMENT

is especially complete. In prompt fulfilment of orders, and Good, Strong, Neat Work, perfect satisfaction is guaranteed. Our Horse-shoer has had a large experience in the best shops, and Tender-Footed Horses will be carefully treated and ultimately cured by having them shod with us.

Good and Stylish Work, at Right Prices, and Square Dealing is our motto.

Our work is its own praise and reward. We have turned out this season over 100 Wheeled Rigs, and all are giving the best of satisfaction and speak for themselves.

It will be to your own interest to visit our shops when you want to buy anything in our line.

Wishing all our customers and friends "A Merry 'Xmas and a Happy New Year."

PORTER BROS.

WAREROOMS AND FACTORY:—Corner Charlotte and Aylmer Streets—"Fitzgerald's Old Stand"—opposite the Midland Station.

A REASONABLE

INVITATION

And a very hearty one too, is hereby extended to you, to visit our Stores, whether you want to buy or not, you'll not be pressed to do so, nor your freedom of action in any way interfered with. On the other hand you're at perfect liberty to inspect our goods, compare our prices, view our facilities, ask questions in regard to our system of business, and in short make yourself

THOROUGHLY AT HOME,

As though our Stores were to you, as they are to thousands, an old, familiar and pleasant resort. You'll find our Sale-room among the largest and handsomest in Town, and therefore, that there's no undue crowding of goods, no lack of facilities for their display, no need to make allowance for poor light or poor surroundings. In short, that there's nothing to be excused. You'll also find, if an evening be selected for your visit, that we've turned night into day, and that under the brilliant Electric Light, goods can be chosen, colours matched, and qualities compared with the same ease, as at any time during the day. Now, we don't want you to think that the above is altogether an invitation to come and buy, for it isn't. We don't even ask you to come to us before going elsewhere, we merely advise you in a friendly way, to come and see us if you do not want to buy, and especially before buying at all.

Peterborough Examiner.

PETERBOROUGH, DEC. 25, 1884.

A Merry Christmas.

With these familiar words we prepare our greeting to all the readers of the EXAMINER in this happy festival. Most cordially we wish our numerous friends and patrons the compliments of the season, and trust that they may experience for themselves and friends and families a VERY MERRY CHRISTMAS!

Everybody concurs in keeping the festival of to-day. Even those who feel constrained to express a doubt as to whether the true date of the Nativity is known, are glad to join in keeping Christmas under protest. They do not question the fact of the Saviour's birth, or their own rejoicing in it. Though they strongly argue that the true day of Christ's birth is unknown, they are as glad as the undoubting little one who sings its carol in the full faith of its simple and unsophisticated heart.

It is a matter of rejoicing that Christmas has thus once more resumed its rightful place as the gladdest festival of the year. All churches, all sects, forget to-day their differences, as with exceeding joy they greet again the star of Bethlehem. This is sufficient evidence of the hold religion has upon the masses. Scriptical sneers cannot thrive in Christmas sunshine.

If there is a day in the whole year on which life's burdens and cares may be laid aside, and only good-will and peace and union remembered and sought after, it is the blessed anniversary which the world keeps to-day. The Saviour's coming was to bring happiness and peace to humanity. And to-day, the angelic message, peace! good-will! good-will and peace! falls around us like the melody of the chimes from the old church tower.

It is from that cradle-manger of Bethlehem that all who profess and call themselves Christians must set out. The very doctrine of this day therefore is full of the thought of unity. Because of that blessed fact of the incornation, the feeling of a common brotherhood is cultivated and expressed to-day in a hundred different ways. May it flourish and abound, not on this day only, but throughout the coming year!

The Christmas season is a time for friendly greetings, for mutual reconciliations and ready forgiveness of real or fanciful wrongs. In the name of Him whom the world thinks of and honors to-day, in the name of all that is loving and pure and holy, let us, in this blessed spirit, keep our Christmas festival.

Christmas is especially a day for the display of liberality and kindness to the poor and needy. Christ gave Himself for us. As we dwell to-day upon the magnitude of this gift, let us show our gratitude, not only in serving Him more humbly and devotedly, but also, in assisting those whose wants are greater than ours. Let the poor and destitute be sought out and relieved. Let us make them happy with some of earth's good things which we can so readily spare. And let us offer them above all, sympathy, good-feeling, kindly charity and words of cheer, of comfort and consolation.

We sincerely trust our readers may enjoy in every way the pleasures and delights of this holy season, and that they may be made to know the fullness of happiness which can only come to those who see others made happy, as the results of their own earnest efforts and cheerful gifts. With this feeling, in true sincerity, we wish all the readers of the EXAMINER

A MERRY CHRISTMAS.

The address to Sir John from West Peterborough, particularly emphasized the British connection slab of the Tory platform. Consistently enough the local Conservatives ignore the fact that the National Policy as a party machine was to be maintained whether "British-connection" stood or fell. "So much the worse for British connection," betraying the readiness to sacrifice this lip-loyal Tory shibboleth to the needs of party policy, shows how much humbug there is in that party arrogating to itself all the loyalty of the country.

Protection professes to raise and keep raised the price of labour. Yet we read in the New York Herald that a family in New York, the commercial metropolis of the most highly protected country in the world, make shirts for 30 cents per dozen. Talk of the "pauper labour" of free trade England after this.

Life and Legends of Santa Claus.

The Christmas festival does not lose its hold upon the people by the lapse of time. Indeed its observance becomes more general year by year. It is marked particularly as a time of social mirth, by the giving of presents, and by special efforts to make children happy.

There are many well-known Christmas institutions whose origin we can trace far back into the misty past. To-day, most of the children who read THE EXAMINER (particularly amongst the very young,) will think of the famous Santa Claus and the numerous gifts, which, at this happy season the good old Saint has left with them in remembrance of his yearly visit.

Now the history, or, perhaps, we should say, the biography, of Santa Claus, is enshrouded in much mystery. The more we strive to know of him, the harder it is for us to find anything quite reliable. Like a spectre of the past, his figure looms up before us from the dim and distant ages of antiquity. Santa Claus has indeed attained an honored old age.

Where he lives during the summer months, history does not tell us. How he occupies his time from year to year is a matter of surprise and perplexity. And with what skill and care he keeps a complete record of the children's behaviour, so that he knows whom to reward, and whom to forget at Christmas, is simply an astonishment and a wonder in every age. It is, in truth, one of those deep mysteries "no fellow can find out."

We are going to attempt a short sketch of this much beloved Saint, and will strive to gather a few particulars of his life for the benefit of the youthful readers of THE EXAMINER.

His full and correct title is St. Nicolas, and he was a bishop of the church, filling this office more than fifteen hundred years ago. He was born at Patara, in Asia Minor, and was appointed abbot of a monastery early in life. Sometime afterwards he became Bishop of Myra, in Lycia, and here he acquired a great reputation for holiness and good, kindly deeds. He died in the year 342, and was buried within the walls of his own church, at Myra. Seven hundred years afterwards, so greatly was his tomb venerated and his memory held in esteem, that to save his bones from desecration, they were removed to Bari, on the Adriatic Sea.

This was the thoughtful act of some pious merchants, and from that hour St. Nicolas has been the patron saint of merchants, travellers and sailors. Many churches in seaport towns are, on this account, dedicated to him, and they are very generally the resort of any pious sailors who may be on shore, when in their vicinity on Sundays.

But it is as the special friend and patron of children, St. Nicolas is best known. And it is under his Dutch title of Santa Claus, that we in Canada revere his memory.

The proper day for his festival is the 6th of December, the day of his death. Many, many years ago, when children were employed as choristers in English churches, it was the custom in great cathedrals for the members of the choir to elect one of their number as a boy-bishop on St. Nicolas' day. After his election, he was duly vested in the episcopal habit, with mitre and crosier, and he expected the rest of the choir to obey him strictly until Holy Innocents' day, the 28th of December. On the eve of that day, the boy-bishop, with the children of the choir, read prayers in the church, and then his brief and curious episcopate ended. The service to be used on this occasion still forms a part of the old Sarum prayer book, which was in use in England from the days of Osmund, in 1085.

But how did Santa Claus become the patron saint of children? An old legend thus answers the query: Once upon a time, when St. Nicolas was Bishop of Myra, an old Asiatic gentleman sent his two sons to Athens for their education. He ordered them to call upon the good bishop as they journeyed, but they, arriving at Myra late in the day, postponed their visit until the morrow. During the night, the cruel landlord murdered the helpless lads, cut them into pieces and mixed their flesh with some pork which he was making ready for market.

Next day, the bishop, to whom this impious transaction had been revealed in a vision, called at the inn and reproached the landlord for his shocking villany. The man then confessed his crime and entreated the good bishop to seek pardon for him from God. Seeing his penitence, the bishop besought the Almighty to forgive the murderer and to restore life to the poor innocents who had been so inhumanly put to death. Hardly was his prayer ended when the mangled bodies of the youths were reunited and they were restored to life, and fell at the bishop's feet to kiss and embrace them.

Such is the origin of Santa Claus becoming the patron saint of children. As a wonderful performer of good deeds and thoughtful acts of kindness we must accord this hoary saint a foremost place. No one ever attempted such blessed work and fulfilled it so promptly, so universally, and on such a gigantic scale. Long may the children receive his bounty. Long may he make good boys and girls rejoice, and give pleasure both to young and old at Christmas-tide.

Like Master Like Man.

The extravagant expenditure that has marked the political career of Sir John Macdonald is merely a material evil, which sinks into comparative insignificance beside the corrupt methods he has pursued for the promotion of personal and political ends. The evil effects of his pernicious example in these respects are too patent and wide-spread to need specific enumeration. The reaction on the public has been intense, and as a result the political corruption of the country is deplorable. One of the standing practices of Sir John has been to adroitly seize a measure of reform, and, like the cuckoo, take advantage of the labors of his opponents. When the latter had worked up the measure till an irresistible popular demand was created for it, he would then seize it and, by the majority which his peculiar methods generally assured him, pass some great Act of reform and claim the credit of it, though he might, as in the cases of Confederation and other questions, have opposed it tooth and nail, till popular demand made further opposition useless and impolitic. "Like master, like man," was never better exemplified than in the case of Mr. Pruyn, the Tory candidate for Lennox. His abilities are modest, but his shrewdness in copying the style of the "Chieftain" is beyond dispute. Mr. Pruyn is a liquor merchant; he has made a large amount of money by the sale of intoxicating drinks. Now, when the Scott Act seems to be popular enough to be adopted in Lennox, Mr. Pruyn stultifies the record of his life by coming out flat-footed in favor of prohibition. That he is sincere, is hard to believe. He simply takes this stand because prohibition is popular in Lennox, and he can make it, he thinks, useful in promoting his political purposes. How like Sir John! How will such a solemn somersault commend Mr. Pruyn, in his imitation of his Chieftain's methods, to the good graces of Lennox Tories! Mr. Pruyn's prohibition principles will last, at least, till after the election, and then, if elected, he will, if he continue to imitate Sir John, forget all his promises and vote as he likes.

Our Educational System.

In its last issue, the Fenelon Falls Gazette presumes to deal with the Ontario Educational Department. The article is hardly a criticism of the management of this department. It is written not so much in a spirit of calm discussion, and in the attempt to point out possible defects, as in a spirit of innuendo—saying a little, and leaving much to be inferred. It is hinted that the public is inclined to regard the system as an unsatisfactory one. There may be some force in this if we consider, as we should do, that the "public" alluded to is mainly composed of Tory politicians and newspapers, who raise a howl for political purposes, which has again and again been proven to be utterly groundless. The Gazette favors our educational affairs being relegated to an irresponsible department. This is a true Tory principle, one sure to find favor with the wire pullers of that party, whom nothing pleases so well as a bureaucracy, managed according to political exigencies, independently of the will or wishes of the people. If the people had any fault to find with our educational system, they have the remedy in their own hands; and since they have failed to condemn it, it follows that the "public" alluded to by our contemporary, is that little ring of Tory politicians and journalistic trimmers who have ends to serve entirely disassociated from the interests of the real public. The Gazette's remarks on the educational system of Ontario, which has in the past silenced the captious criticism by which it has been assailed, is all the more remarkable when that journal devotedly defends the jobbery, delay and criminal neglect that mark the Governments manner of dealing with the Trent Valley canal scheme. This they have converted into a purely political machine, and as far as their interest in its completion is concerned, they have made it one of the most stupendous farces the history of the country has ever been called upon to record.

Gathering of the Axe-Grinders.

The demonstration made in honor of Sir John Macdonald's fortieth year in harness, held in Toronto last week, was, no doubt, as a political caucus, a success, but the same cannot be said of it as a national show of respect. The attendance of the honest yeomanry—men who simply cast their ballots in favor of good measures, who pronounce the verdict of the country—was small in comparison with the civil service employes, political hangers-on, and men who have an axe to grind. Of course there were floods of addresses full of fulsome landation in irksome iteration. But to say that the demonstration was a spontaneous tribute to forty years of honest administration, honest political methods and brilliant statemanship, is to tax the credulity of the people too far.

ADDRESS AND PRESENTATION.

Last Friday afternoon Miss Fair's connection as teacher, with the Public School pupils ceased, and her room was the scene of a pleasant event. After a very creditable programme of songs and recitations prepared by the pupils, a beautiful jewel casket was presented Miss Fair, accompanied with the following address. Master Alfred Weir read the address, and Miss May Snider made the presentation.

THE ADDRESS.

DEAR MISS FAIR.—We, your pupils, hearing that you are going to leave us, cannot allow the connection which has existed for the past sixteen months to be severed without expressing our regret at your departure. You have always shown the deepest interest in our studies, ever ready to give a helping hand; our advancement seemed your one desire. We know that at times our seeming indifference must have been very trying to you, but we hope you will overlook our imperfections and remember only that which may be pleasing to you. Before parting we ask you to accept this jewel case, as a slight token of regard and affection, with best wishes for success and prosperity in your undertakings.

Signed,

MAY SNIDER, ALFRED WEIR.
CELIA HARVEY, GEO. SOUCHER.
CLARA ARMSTRONG, WM. FIFE.

Miss Fair made the following

REPLY:

MY DEAR PUPILS,—It is with feelings mingled with pleasure and regret that I now part with you; with pleasure when I consider the many happy hours we have spent together; with regret because I must now sever the tie existing between us of teacher and pupil.

When I look back upon the time when I have spent in teaching you, and boys and girls of the South School, it seems more like months than years: for to teach the youth of Peterborough has been always more of a pleasure than a labor to me.

One of my greatest triumphs in future years will be to see my pupils ranked amongst the most respectable and honorable. But in seeking for earthly honor always remember that no earthly dignity can render that satisfaction which is realized from the assurance that God is looking with pleasure upon his image reflected upon our hearts

I hope that the pupils whom I leave behind me will still continue to reflect credit upon their parents' careful training, that they will treat my successor as kindly and respectfully as they have treated me, and he will also leave Peterborough with the idea that teaching is both a pleasant and an ennobling profession. I know that those about to be promoted will gladly pass under the care of Mr. Coleman, whom they have already learned to esteem as a kind and faithful Principal.

My dear pupils, this handsome gift has taken me by surprise. I shall always prize it, not for its worth, although it is indeed valuable, but as a token of love and esteem

I now say good-bye to my fellow-teachers and pupils, thanking them for their kindness and wishing them a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year.

The Inspector and Principal, who were present, made remarks appropriate to the pleasant occasion.

LAKEFIELD.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

BEFORE THE BEAK.

On Wednesday morning a young man by the name of Smith, who had been working on the dam, was brought before Mr. J. Hall, J.P., charged with drawing a knife with intent. He was arrested on information laid by Mr. R. Parker. Smith, who had come into the bar on the preceding day, was rather noisy and ordered out of the house, or to be quiet. Words followed, when Mr. Parker threatened him with a stick, and Smith drew a knife, which he said he would use. Smith, being under the influence of liquor and not having in any way attempted to use the knife, was let off with $2 and costs.

SUDDEN DEATHS.

A few evenings since Mrs. John Greig, who had been as well as usual during the day and had done a hard day's work, fell off her chair and died during the night. Apoplexy is the supposed cause.

Mr. Thos. Buckley, eldest son of Mr. Jas. Buckley, of Dooro, also died very suddenly, on Friday last. In the morning he appeared to be in his usual good health, and had been working about the threshing machine at Mr. D. Grady's, in which he had an interest. Having become chilled, he went into the house to warm himself, about seven o'clock in the morning. While taking off his boots he fell over, and was allowed to remain there. The threshing in the meantime was began and continued for some hours; and the young man was dead before eleven o'clock in the forenoon. No effort, so far as we can learn, was made to resuscitate him, and he was probably dead for sometime before it was known, and before his clergyman arrived As he was and always has been in good health, the suddenness of his death seems inexplicable and is a very sad bereavement to his family.

ELECTIONS.

Nominations are to be held in the Council Chamber on Monday next for Reeve and Councillors. The present Reeve, Mr. R. C. Strickland, who has given fair satisfaction so far, will be a candidate. We have also heard it reported that Mr. John Hull is in the field and seems to have some good backers, as a gentleman was offering to "bet" fifty dollars on his success; probably a little bluff, however. We have not heard who are to be candidates for Councillors.

SKATING RINK.

The Skating Rink was opened to the public on Saturday evening last. There was good ice and a fair attendance.

SCHOOL ELECTION.

Nomination for school trustees will take place in the Council Chamber on Wednesday next at 12 o'clock. Mr. Thos. Casement is the Returning Officer. Mr. Sanders and Dr. Caldwell are the retiring members.

UPSET.

While Mr. Levi Payne was driving towards Lakefield on Saturday last, his horses shied, completely upsetting them into a ditch near Young's Point Road. Mrs. Payne and a friend, who were with him, were bruised considerably. The horses ran away, breaking the pleasure sleigh all to pieces. Mr. George Grant, came along and, with Mr. Payne, overtook the horses, one having fallen and being unable to get up.

A GRAND CONCERT

will be given in the P.C.A. Hall here on Jan. 1st, 1885. A fine programme of musical and elocutionary numbers will be presented. In music, Mrs. Chambers, Miss Tina Menzies, Miss Clarke and Miss R. Clarke, and Mr. Lech, of Peterborough, and Miss Graham, of Lakefield, will delight the audience. Miss Rose Clarke, recently from Ontario Ladies' College, Whitby, will give readings and recitations, and Mr. McNaughton, Peterborough, will give an exhibition of his well-known and unsurpassed club swinging. Tickets, 25 cents; reserved seats, 35 cents.

The Season has again arrived at Turnbull's, when you can yet your choice of a huge pile of Remnants, at sweeping reductions.

AUBURN.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

On Friday evening last a large number of the parents and friends of the pupils of the Auburn school assembled to witness the closing exercises. The entertainment, consisting of readings, recitations, dialogues, and singing, was given by the pupils, in which each one acquitted themselves in a satisfactory manner. At the conclusion of the entertainment a very pleasing event took place, when Miss Chrow was presented with a beautiful plush album and perfume case, accompanied by an address. The address was read by Miss Ella Burke, and the presentation made by Miss Ada Curtis on behalf of the pupils of the school, to which a reply was made in suitable terms. The pupils of the school were then presented with prizes off a Christmas tree, which was laden with suitable gifts. Special prizes, given for regular attendance, were carried off by Maggie Moffat and Maudie Tully. Eddie Curtis acted as chairman. Brief addresses were delivered by the trustees of the school, after which the evening's entertainment was brought to a close by singing "God Save the Queen."

AYER'S
Cherry Pectoral.

No other compounds are so insidious in their attack as those affecting the throat and lungs: none so trifled with by the majority of sufferers. The ordinary cough or cold, resulting perhaps from a trifling or unnecessary exposure, is often but the beginning of a fatal sickness. AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL has well proven its efficacy in a forty years' fight with throat and lung diseases, and should be taken in all cases without delay.

A Terrible Cough Cured.

"In 1857 I took a severe cold, which affected my lungs. I had a terrible cough, and passed night after night without sleep. The doctors gave me up. I tried AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, which relieved my lungs, induced sleep, and afforded me the rest necessary for the recovery of my strength. By the continued use of the PECTORAL a permanent cure was effected. I am now 62 years old, hale and hearty, and am satisfied your CHERRY PECTORAL saved me.
HORACE FAIRBROTHER."
Rockingham, Vt., July 15, 1862.

Croup.—A Mother's Tribute.

"While in the country last winter my little boy, three years old, was taken ill with croup; it seemed as if he would die from strangulation. One of the family suggested the use of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, a bottle of which was always kept in the house. This was tried in small and frequent doses, and to our delight in less than half an hour the little patient was breathing easily. The doctor said that the CHERRY PECTORAL had saved my darling's life. Can you wonder at our gratitude? Sincerely yours,
MRS. EMMA GEDNEY."
139 West 126th St., New York, May 16, 1862.

"I have used AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL in my family for several years, and do not hesitate to pronounce it the most effectual remedy for coughs and colds we have ever tried.
A. J. CRANE."
Lake Crystal, Minn., March 15, 1862.

"I suffered for eight years from Bronchitis, and after trying many remedies with no success, I was cured by the use of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL.
JOSEPH WALDEN."
Byhalia, Miss., April 8, 1862.

"I cannot say enough in praise of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, believing as I do that but for its use I should long since have died from lung troubles.
E. BRADDON."
Palestine, Texas, April 28, 1862.

No case of an affection of the throat or lungs exists which cannot be greatly relieved by the use of AYER'S CHERRY PECTORAL, and it will always cure when the disease is not already beyond the control of medicine.

JEAN'S TWO CHRISTMASES

Nevertheless it was rather a delicate matter to write to John and tell him of their great trouble. It seemed to Jean, who was sensitive, as if she said, "I am free now, because I am poor, and can wed you, though I was refused you when I was an heiress."

She knew John was so sure of him, yet she hesitated; she pondered over it for long, then decided she would send a newspaper first with all the account of the failure, and her father's intention to give up everything. It would break the ice. Of course Jack would notice it at once; then she could write in answer.

So, without a flutter of doubt, she procured a paper and gave it to the maid of the house to post; then having ascertained on what day the mail went out, calculated when John Maurice would receive it, and when she could get his reply. It was possible in seven weeks, perhaps six, but she would give two months, not to worry herself by disappointment should he happen to miss a mail.

During these two months it was that Bob and Mr. Welbrook found their dingy apartments so sunny. Jean had received three letters from Jack Maurice, full of tenderness and love, rejoicing much in her refusal of Lord Melton; but, of course, he had heard nothing of the bank stopping.

Mr. Welbrook and Bob were too occupied to notice that a change was coming over Jean; that her eyes had at times a wistful, anxious expression in them, and her laughter and light-heartedness were at times forced. True, she tried to be always the same before them, but she could not always succeed, for the two months had passed—it was nearly ten weeks—but not a letter, not a line had come from Jack Maurice. Had one of his usual epistles arrived, Jean would have believed the newspaper had miscarried. But these had ceased also.

What could it mean?

For the first time the girl's heart knew real sorrow. She began to despair—to ask herself was Jack like Lord Melton, and had cared for her only because he believed her an heiress?

Another week; no letter.

Surely he would have written if but to hint his change of desire. There must be something wrong. Should she write? It took her long to decide, but she finally did in the affirmative. It was a short letter. She told him of the paper she had sent, of her surprise that he had taken no notice of the fearful misfortune which had come to them. It had brought many changes. It had proved to them who were their friends, and they hoped he would still be one. She said little more, putting her words tenderly, but making no mention of the love which had filled his letters.

She posted this herself, and sorrowed to find she had missed the mail by a day. Nevertheless, she was glad it had gone beyond her power of recall.

"Now I shall know—now I shall know," she repeated, as she wearily returned home, for her step was as heavy, poor girl, as her heart, and her face careworn and wan when she was alone. She only wore a mask for her father's and Bob's sake.

But Bob was not so occupied as not soon to perceive something was wrong, and to guess its nature

"Jean," he said one evening, "does Jack Maurice know what has happened?"

"Yes," she answered, in a low tone, thankful for the twilight about them.

"What does he say, dear?"

"Nothing," a tremble in the sweet voice.

"Nothing," cried Bob. "What do you mean?"

Then she told him. Bob's heart sank a little as he listened, but he said, heartily:

"Oh the newspaper has miscarried, Jean, newspapers will."

"Then Bob, why has he not written as usual?"

Bob was struck by the truth of that remark, though he said:

"Oh, with a soldier many things may prevent. But I'm glad you've written dear. You see, it'll be all right. Jack Maurice is not like other men."

So Bob began to look out for the mails too; but it none the more brought the letter which never came.

"I would not have believed it of Jack Maurice," exclaimed Bob, indignantly.

"We can tell the character of no man until he is tried," rejoined Mr. Welbrook sadly. "Remember, I refused him, Jean—I am glad I did now—only, my boy, we must be kinder to her."

Jean, however, gave them little trouble. She bore her sorrow with quiet bravery. She saw Jack had been unworthy of her love. She knew she ought to banish him entirely from her heart, but that she could not. She lived upon the memory of what she had believed him, not what he was.

Shortly after Mr. Welbrook's affairs were settled; the creditors had been so well satisfied, that, in proof of the esteem in which they held the ci-devant banker's honorable conduct, they presented him with two thousand pounds.

"Jean, my dear," he remarked, as the three were talking over it at tea-time, "I have been thinking of what you said about starting life again. We of course must do that; but I don't fancy I should like to serve, at my age, among the old scenes where I have ruled. I have thought, though, that with two thousand pounds we might do much—nay, even realize fortune in a new land."

"Do you mean Australia, sir?" asked Bob, eagerly.

"Yes; what do you say to the plan, my boy?"

"That it is excellent, sir. I should like nothing so well. I own the idea of being tied to a desk, as I must be in London, is not agreeable."

"And you, my Jean?"

Jean's heart, to say truth, had seemed to fail, fall very low at first at the suggestion—Australia! It appeared like a severance indeed from Jack Maurice. The next moment she had seen her folly; were they not severed already? Would it not be better to be away where there would be no chance of meeting him? So she answered promptly:

"Whatever pleases you and Bob, papa, pleases me. I fancy station life in the bush must be far preferable to genteel, struggling poverty in London, where you have lived so differently."

So it was agreed. Jean could not help feeling much depressed at quitting London without word or sign from Jack Maurice. Yet her spirits rose at the good she saw this prospect of change was doing both her father and brother. Bob, in fact, was quite elated. Up early—in bed late; busy every hour planning, or purchasing necessary articles to take with them.

At last the day of departure arrived. They went down to Gravesend and took their places on board. Unconsciously to herself, poor Jean had clung to a hope that after all she might still hear of or from John Maurice one little word, despite that long, long silence, before she quitted England.

But it died out as the vessel moved slowly away down the river to the sea.

CHAPTER III.

THE CAPTAIN OF THE MOUNTED POLICE.

A glorious sun so shining upon a glorious land, that the very air seemed to quiver with bright molecules of light. If breeze there was it came as the hot breath of a furnace. The tropical portion of vegetation seemed to revel in it, the rest shrivelled or hung languidly in the intense heat. The consciousness of heat was everywhere, and worse, the want of water. The rivers were dry, the land cracked, and the cattle of yonder large station, with a look of an English homestead about it, had to be driven here, then there, through the bush for fresher herbage and water.

About three hours after noon, a young fellow in light linen garments and broad planter's hat, came at a gallop down the road to the station. Leaping his horse on reaching it, over the barrier into the stockyard, he gave the animal to one of the men, then made his way to the the house.

At the sound of the clattering hoofs a young girl had stepped out of one of the shaded sitting-rooms into the verandah, and now she greeted the new-comer.

"My dear Bob, what madness to come through the heat of such a day! You certainly will have sunstroke!"

"Not I, Jean," was the answer, as the speaker, wiping his hot, handsome face, came under the verandah. "If I hadn't I should have had possibly to camp out, and I'm not up to that yet, so far as liking goes; besides I promised the pater to ride over early to-morrow to Dingo Gully, to see how Dixon's managing about the cattle. I fancy if this weather lasts much longer, there will be an awful mortality among them; and our capital at present will hardly stand a loss."

"No, papa is very anxious!" answered Jean, on whose fair face, though prettier than ever, was a greater gentleness and sweetness, as is observable at times with those who have gone through some great sorrow. "It is very hot."

"Hot!" repeated her brother, who, in the twelvemonth, had grown into a very fine and handsome specimen of a young squatter. "It's not the word for it; another ought to be found. Just imagine, Jean," as, seated in an American chair, he fanned himself with his hat, "in four days it will be Christmas!"

"It doesn't seem like it, does it?" laughed his sister. "Here is papa—here comes papa!"

She ran down the steps of the verandah to meet Mr. Welbrook, and came back fondly leaning upon his arm. Change of fortune certainly had not acted unbeneficially on the ci-devant banker. His countenance was bronzed, his expression animated, free of care, and happy.

"Are you very warm, papa?" asked Jean.

"My darling," laughed her father, "in the language of Mr. Middlewick 'I'm 'ot.' Isn't it droll to think that there may be fine skating going on in London now?"

"Well, our time will come, papa."

"No, my love," as he sat down, but yet clasping her hand—he was ever gentle and fond to his daughter—"Christmas never can be like Christmas in such weather as this. But at any rate we'll have as merry a one as we can. What time is it pet?"

"Four, papa."

"Do you mind making your tea-hour earlier? I should like a cup above all things."

"Mind, papa! No, Deb shall bring it out here."

The three sat at the social meal, talking of much, especially of their new home.

"It's a capital place," remarked Bob; "but for the heat, the 'musketeers,' and those prowling semi-bushrangers."

"I fancy, my boy, it would be better for you to hand such over to the law than treat them as you did the fellow the other day."

"It may be, sir. But I was so riled I couldn't help it. He came to ask for work, and I found him sneaking off with my horse. I horsewhipped the scoundrel off the station."

"For which piece of justice taken into your own hands the fellow vowed vengeance."

"Let him," laughed Bob; "what could he do?"

Matters had prospered with Mr. Welbrook in his new home. His small capital, judiciously expended, had already realized nearly cent per cent. The cares of a speculator's existence had slipped from his shoulders, and he enjoyed the free existence he was leading. He had but one trouble—his beloved child, Jean. He knew the canker in her young heart, and was unable to remove it. Still, the canker was now of long date, and did not obtrude itself on others. Only two knew of its existence. Certainly Jean would not have let it obtrude at this season—Christmas. She undertook to decorate the walls, to give the rooms an appearance of the old country. They had not lived long enough in the new to forget that.

Jean had an aide-de-camp in a bright, intelligent, aboriginal boy of about twelve. Mr. Welbrook had found him starving in the bush, had brought him home, fed him, and handed him over to Jean as her special attendant. To amuse herself, the girl had undertaken his education until the boy grew to love his pretty, gentle mistress with an affection that was devotion.

He brought heaps of greenery, and grinned delightedly as Jean, the morning after that conversation on the verandah, made festoons of flowers and nailed them to the walls.

"Now, Jube," she said, "I want some different flowers. Those beautiful scarlet, trailing ones, you know. Go and get my horse and your pony saddled. We'll go ourselves and fetch them."

Off ran Jube. The horses were soon brought, and Jean galloped away, followed by the Australian. It was a beautiful morning; a south wind had set in, cooling the air. They were scarcely a mile from the station when they reached a dense part of the bush, where the flowers needed grew luxuriantly; they alighted, and began to gather the splendid, gorgeous blossoms.

"Missie Jean," cried Jube, "me see booties yonder!" and the boy darted farther into the bushes.

Scarcely had he gone than Jean felt a rough, hard hand on her shoulder. Surprised, alarmed, she turned to find the evil face of the man who had sworn vengeance on her brother Bob.

She uttered a cry of terror; but in a second it was stilled by a hand over her mouth.

"We've got you now, my fine madam, have we!" laughed the scoundrel. "Tit for tat's my motter! He horsewhips me, does he? Calls me thief, cattle-lifter, does he? Well, I'm going to be a woman-lifter too! Let's see how he likes that! Mert, lend a hand; she struggles like a cat! Quick—quick—bring the horses! We must reach Black Gully before evening."

Poor Jean did indeed struggle—so well that, for a moment, she freed her mouth, and cried:

"Oh! Jube, Jube, help me! Don't leave me!"

For a second Jube's black face, in horror, glanced out of the bushes, then disappeared. The bushranger swiftly gagged her again, then, by the help of his companion, mounted his horse, holding Jean close before him, and both at full speed rode off through the bush.

Not a quarter of an hour later Jube came dashing down the road to the station. As he came in sight of it he gave a great whoop of joy. A group of mounted men were at the gate.

"The pa-leese!" he cried. "The pa-leese!"

In a few minutes he had joined them, and was breathlessly pouring his story into the ear of the captain—a handsome, soldierly man.

"Good Heavens! what do you mean?" ejaculated the latter. "Mr. Welbrook's daughter abducted by these scoundrels! Where is Mr. Welbrook? He has a son—where is he?"

He turned to poor old Deb, whom he had been interrogating about the station before Jube's arrival, and who was now wringing her hands in the bitterest distress, calling out:

"Miss Jean!—oh! my pretty mistress, save her! If you be like them London police, go and take the villains up. Master's somewhere about," she now answered. "I don't know where. And Mr. Bob's gone about the cattle to Dingo Gully. Oh! master, master!" she added wildly, "the bushrangers have stolen Miss Jean! Help—help!"

"Men," exclaimed the captain rapidly, "you hear! A young lady has been carried off; there is not a moment to lose. We are on their track. Who knows Black Gully?"

"Me," exclaimed Jube. "Take me with you, misser pa-leese; me show you."

"Good. Lindgrin, take the boy behind you. Now off!"

The command was followed by the clatter of hoofs, as the men dashed off in pursuit.

Black Gully was nearly twenty miles distant—a dense spot of wild overgrowth in the midst of a wilderness near the mountain range. Once amongst the gloomy recesses of the place, capture would be difficult; the police knew that, and did not spare whip nor spur. If the young girl was to be saved it must be before Black Gully was reached.

They had great hopes of success. First, the cattle of the police were of the best; secondly, the bushrangers would never suspect so rapid a pursuit.

These hopes were realized. They had not gone ten miles before they sighted the two villains; Jean was being carried in front of one.

"They are ours—they are ours!" said the captain. "Spur, spur; whip and spur, my lads."

Seeing them the example he darted on ahead, at the same time plucking out his revolver.

On, on they went, and at every stride saw they were decreasing the distance between pursuer and pursued. Why a breeze there was blew in their favor, thus the police were drawing very near before the bushrangers caught the sound of the horses hoofs. They were seen to look back, then increase their speed.

"On! on!" cried the captain. "Remember, my lads, it's a woman's honor we're saving. By heavens! the brutes are flagging! Hurrah!"

It was so; the horse that carried the double weight was perceptibly dropping behind. Then it was perceived that Jean, having also become aware of pursuit, was struggling with her captor.

"Good heavens! should he hurt her!" thought the captain in horror. One instant he reflected; then, raising his weapon fired above the bushranger's head. To have fired at him or his horse might have brought the three down with a crash fatal perhaps to the delicate girl.

The captain's plan succeeded; the bushranger, as the bullet whizzed over him, halted a second; his horse reared. Directly after, Jean, her head and shoulders yet muffled, was seen to be half flung, half slid on to the ground, when the horse, relieved of the weight, sprang forward at redoubled speed.

The captain, followed by his men, dashed forward. The former, on reaching Jean, halting, with a cry of indignation, sprang to the ground, and kneeling by her side, began to tear off the muffings as he called to his men:

"Forward, forward, lads. Capture the villains dead or alive. What's the matter?" he added, as the men suddenly, with various exclamations, brought their horses to a halt.

Jube had already seen and called out:

"Fire bush on fire."

"Yes," exclaimed one of the police, "they've fired the bush, captain; and see, it's rushing toward us with the wind. By Jove, we shall have a race for it."

"Great heaven," ejaculated the captain as he sprang up, clasping Jean in his arms.

A race indeed. Owing to the intense heat the trees and grass were as inflammable as gun-cotton, and even in the few seconds the flames were licking up whole patches of the dry grass, leaping up the tree trunks, and running along the branches.

In less time than it takes to write, the captain was in his saddle, Jean supported on his arm, and with the police retracing his steps through the bush. The question now would be, who could go fastest—the horses or the fire?

Jean was conscious of nothing; she lay as one dead, and might have been thought so save for the slight heave of the bosom. How peaceful, how beautiful, she looked. As the captain bent over her, in his admiration, he almost forgot the fire leaping after them with such dangerous speed. Then his eyes glowed fiercely with indignation, as, noticing her stillness, the idea crossed him that to stay her struggles the scoundrel had struck her.

Riding up to his side at this moment, one of the men said:

"This lad says, captain, that he can take us another way, across Stoney Flat; once there, he declares we need no longer fear the fire."

"Let him lead us in heaven's name," answered the captain. "All of you forward, I will follow."

The slight divergence brought them for awhile nearer the fire. It scorched their hands and faces, but it goaded the horses to speed.

"Shall I save her—shall I," murmured the captain, distractedly, as he leaned over Jean. "Pray heaven, yes."

As the words passed his lips, Jean's eyes opened, and, wondering, bewildered, fixed themselves on the countenance bent over hers. Then—oh, the cry that burst from her lips—the joyous light on her face, as her arms went suddenly to his neck, and she exclaimed:

"John—John—at last."

"My darling—my Jean—my own love," for John Maurice it was. "My Jean—my betrothed—found after all these months."

The words recalled her; she drew back regarding him in perplexity.

"Found? Found?" she repeated.

"Yes, dearest; after long search," he answered, fondly. "Darling, I have much to tell, much to hear; but this is no fitting time. Jean, see."

She looked up, and perceived the flames. She uttered a cry.

"The bush is on fire! Ah! yes, I remember now—the bushrangers. Oh! see the flames, how they spring after us!"

"Fear nothing, love. I am here, and will save you."

"But you—you—how are you here?"

"I will tell you, dearest, as we go. Only first, Jean, answer me. Did you fancy I had ceased to love you?"

"How could I do other, John, when you were so silent?"

"But if, dearest, I can explain that silence? Will you give me back your love?"

She looked into his face with a fond, half-reproachful glance.

"Ah! John," she answered, "as if I had ever taken it from you!"

"My darling!" His lips touched hers, and at that moment all else lost the joy of reunion was forgotten.

Jube proved as good as his word. The race was in truth a hot one; but on reaching Stony Flat the fire was baulked. It seemed to rush towards them, rise up in columns of impotent wrath, then sweep off to the ranges.

An hour later the police came in sight of Welbrook station. Captain John, bidding his men halt, rode on alone. At the gate of the station, Bob was seen just arrived, hearing the news from old Deb; while Mr. Welbrook was riding from an opposite direction, after a fruitless search.

Speedily they all met, when Jean, laughing, blushing, sprang to the ground, and ran to her father.

"Saved—saved!" he cried, catching her to his heart. "My darling saved!"

"Yes, papa," she answered. "Saved by Lieutenant Maurice."

"What!" cried Bob and Mr. Welbrook together.

"Yes, sir, no other," said the captain, removing his hat. "Don't blame me until you hear. Not for one moment has my love changed. Remember," smiling, "every man is innocent until proved guilty. Jean has forgiven me—have you not?"

"Yes," she smiled; "and so, John, will papa and Bob when they hear."

"Then I propose that we do hear," said Bob. "I for one shall be jolly glad to find you are a true man, Jack. Deb, take the men and feast them. Well, captain, come into the house. We'll have luncheon, then you can tell us."

Jack Maurice's story was briefly this:

"The newspaper had never reached him. Whether the servant had not posted it, or from some other cause, it had certainly miscarried, and anxiously he was waiting a reply to his last letter to Jean, when he met with an accident while tiger-shooting in the jungle. He had been struck by a stray bullet. For weeks he lay, his life despaired of. For months the medical staff would not permit any letters to be shown him, fearing excitement. When he was well enough he had Jean's last communication, and was bewildered.

He would write. Of what use? He was invalided home, and could go by the next mail. He went. Reaching London, he had driven instantly to the address Jean had given, to find that a month previously the Welbrooks had started for Australia. Where to in Australia?

That no one could inform him. Jack Maurice's decision, however, was quickly made. He sold out as soon as he was able, then started for Australia to search for Jean; but he had to live, so entered the mounted police force, feeling in that position he might better prosecute his search. He had succeeded far more easily than he had imagined. Rumours of bushrangers' depredations had brought the captain by chance to the station, where lived her he loved dearer than life.

The rest is known.

"You do not refuse my hand now, Mr. Welbrook? Eh, Bob?" said Jack Maurice ending.

"By Jove, no!" exclaimed the younger, both grasping the proffered hand. "I am awfully glad, Jack, to find it all right. What a jolly Christmas we'll have though we can't skate."

"John Maurice," said Mr. Welbrook, "I am more pleased than I can express. Once you asked me for a great gift, which I refused. Will you accept it now?"

He took Jean's hand and placed it in the captain's.

"Oh, how gladly!" ejaculated the young fellow, drawing her to him. "My Jean—my wife!"

Despite the heat, who will doubt that that was a merry, and a "jolly" Christmas indeed?

And through the rosy cloud of happiness a seer would have seen in a future two other Christmases. One, when Bob was the wealthy master of Welbrook station, with a wife and children around him; another in dear old England, when the land was covered with snow, and the trees hung with icicles.

Then on the terrace of Sunnyside stood Sir John and Lady Maurice—for the lieutenant's expectations had become realities—while within the library sat Mr. Welbrook, his grandchild on his knees, all waiting to welcome Bob and his wife just arrived in England, and eager to be the first to greet their home-coming with "A Merry Christmas and Happy New Year."—E. Don't Know.

"I don't know," is too often the remark made by a farmer or dairyman.

"How much milk does this cow give?" "I don't know." "How much butter?" "I don't know." "How much feed do you use?" "I don't know." Suppose the grocer or butcher is asked how much sugar or tea in a barrel or box or in that parcel, or how much does that quarter of beef or that side of pork weigh? and he should say I don't know; we should contemplate him with amazement, and silently count up how long it would be before the "know-nothing" would be sold out by the sheriff. But farming is so good a business that it will stand all this neglect and ignorance, and the farmer still make a living. The owner of a cow should know to an ounce how much milk she gives to a milking, in a day, in a week, each month, and in the year. He should know to an ounce how much butter each cow gives, and how much feed she eats to produce so much. He should also know the most he can get from the least feed, and the most feed, so that he can regulate to a cent the cost of his milk and butter. And a cheap spring balance and a note-book and pencil, used in this way, will be worth many dollars every year to him.—The Dairy.

LOVE FOR A DAY!

A round Lady Severne inclined to be quiet and to talk rationally. There was something of sullen defiance about her at first, but it died away when I had been some little time with her. I tried to interest her, and to make her forget the horrible craving for stimulants that was destroying her. She became more like herself.

It was about four in the morning—a lovely June morning, bright with sunshine and with dew, fragrant with the odor of lily and rose. During her fits Lady Severne never went to rest like a rational being. That made her so difficult to manage. She would sit up all night and sleep in the day. A sudden gleam of gold shooting into the room showed me that the sun was rising. I drew aside the hangings and opened the window, letting in the sweetness and freshness of the morning air.

"Dear Lady Severne, do come here for one minute," I said.

She came and stood in silence by my side. I saw her look at the brilliant, beautiful tints of the morning sky, at the fresh, tender beauty of the green trees; and then her eyes wandered round the room. The glasses, the bottles, the garish light of the lamp, the confusion and disorder, how they contrasted with the bright pure heavens and the clear light of day! I knew that the contrast had touched her; I felt that the peaceful influences of the morning had reached her. The wind, which was like the breath of roses, seemed to change her face as it swept over it. She put her arms round me.

"I am so tired," she said.

I took her in my arms and laid her head upon my breast—a lost, unhappy woman, I knew, but still Mark's wife. The warm tears were falling then from her eyes.

"How kind you are to me," she said. "I am so tired that I could sleep for ever, I think. Tell me something. Say to me some of the beautiful words you sing."

There came into my mind one of those poems my mother had loved—one she had often repeated to me—one which, when she lay dying, she had asked me to say once again for her. I shall never forget my surroundings as Lady Severne preferred her request—the blue sky flushed with rosy light, the green earth waking up to summer life, the dark background of the room that had been like a prison, the beautiful, yet haggard face that lay upon my breast, and the tears that fell like rain. I told her that what I was about to repeat was my mother's favorite, and that it was called "An Angel's Song."

"You have the face of an angel," she said, looking up at me, "with that golden light upon it;" and she listened to every word.

"I know I have heard them sing, child,
And I know that they spoke to me,
With my mother's arms around me,
While I sat on my mother's knee,
And she told me of love that saved us,
And a Father we had on high,
And the grave that we need not fear, child
And the soul that can never die.

"Again, when I walked with the loved one—
You remember this loved one, dear,
And the smile that is gone from among us,
And the voice we no longer hear—
The voice was so tender and earnest,
That joy was too deep for mirth,
And the heart was too full for speech, child,
And heaven came down on earth.

"Not a drop in the cup seemed wanting
The thirst of a life to fill,
And farther and fainter the song died out,
But I heard the angels still.
I think it will not be long, child;
They are bidding me home at last,
To the place where the joy of the future
Shall be linked on the love of the past,
Where the houseless shall seek a shelter,
The lonely shall find a friend—
There the heart's desire shall be granted,
That hath trued and loved to the end."

Tears are the dew of heaven, the poets tell us. Tears fell from Lady Severne's eyes upon my dress and hands. She was clinging to me, wildly crying out that she wished she had been a better woman, that she loathed her sin, that she loathed herself. Would I show her the way to that heaven where the angels sang? What could she do to atone to Mark? What could she do to regain her lost youth and goodness? She clutched my arm as she cried out—

"A demon holds me in his grasp—take me from him!"

Then, with tears of regret and repentance, utterly exhausted, she fell into a deep sleep with her head upon my breast.

And I? Well, I knew so little of the hold this terrible vice takes of its victims that, as I held her closely clasped in my arms in the light of the morning sun, I thought she was saved, and tears of gratitude filled my eyes. I thought the sweet influences of the fair summer morn had spoken to her heart, that grace from heaven had fallen like dew upon her soul.

I let her sleep as long as she could, and then Martha came back. We laid her down, pale and exhausted, on her bed. I whispered my hope to the old nurse. She said:

"Please Heaven." But I have seen her ladyship repent before now, and found her worse than ever a few hours afterwards."

Despite those words, I had a hope.

"Farther and fainter the song died out,
But I heard the angels still."

CHAPTER XVI.

My hope was vain. A few days afterwards Lady Severne was, to use the nurse's phrase, worse than ever. The blow that Lady Yorke had feared fell; the terrible expose which she had dreaded came. For a day or two Lady Severne had been better. She came down to dinner, and was careful what she drank. There was relief on Mark's face and on Lady Yorke's. On the third day an awful occurrence happened. Whether Martha was tired, off her guard, or in ignorance of what was going on, I know not. Perhaps Lady Severne had deceived her. I know only the results. Martha dressed her ladyship for dinner, and Lady Severne asked for a favorite dress of hers, a handsome white and gold brocaded satin. Martha was delighted that she should take so great an interest in her appearance; that was always a good sign. She evidently did not perceive anything wrong in Lady Severne, or possibly the mischief was done after she left her. We were all in the drawing-room, waiting for the dinner-bell. Lord Severne was talking to Captain Forrester, more at ease and less anxious than I had seen him for many days; and Lady Yorke looked as though a great load had been taken from her mind. Some one had just inquired if we should have the pleasure of Lady Severne at dinner, and Lady Yorke had answered, with a bright smile, that she was much better and would certainly join them, when the door opened, and we saw her standing on the threshold, saw the gleam of white and gold, saw the light in the diamonds, the graceful figure, the white jewelled hands. And, alas! how shall I tell it? In one moment I saw what was the matter—so did Mark and Lady Yorke; and we all three hastened towards her. Her face was ghastly, her eyes were wild, and a leering smile hovered on her lips. Half conscious herself that she was not able to move, yet with a mad defiance of her own feelings, she tried to walk with a dignified step into the room and, before one of us could reach her, could put out a hand to save her, she had fallen upon her face, to the dismay and distress of every one present. In less than a minute Lord Severne had raised his wife in his arms and borne her away.

Lady Yorke, with a presence of mind I have never seen equalled, but with a face as white as death, turned to her guests.

"Lady Severne has fallen over her train," she said, quietly. "I wish those long sweeping trains were out of fashion; they are very dangerous."

There was a polite murmur of regret, but no one spoke. Whether any of those assembled there knew the truth, had really seen and understood her condition, I cannot tell. No one mentioned her name or spoke of her after that.

The same evening Mark, with an effort for which I admired him, returned to the drawing-room and spoke of his wife. His visit to Westwood, he said, had been a pleasant one, but he was afraid the air did not suit Lady Severne. She had not been well since her arrival, and he thought it would be better for them to go.

I believe every heart in the room ached for him; he looked so anxious and so sad. There were a few words of regret from the visitors, a kindly-expressed hope that Lady Severne would soon recover. Not one word of suspicion was breathed; but there was a strange quiet. No one talked much; we had no music, no singing. One or two spoke of leaving Westwood, and there was over all an indefinable shadow and gloom. Later on Mark, addressing me almost for the first time, said:

"Nellie, see—there are several people out on the terrace enjoying the moonlight. I want to say good-bye to you. I shall never see you again. Will you come?"

I went. My heart was filled with anguish and despair, a horrible restless pain. He was going away—Mark, who had been my lover—in distress and sorrow, and we were never to meet again.

We stood together, as we had so many times before, in the bright moonlight, and Mark raised his haggard face to mine.

"You know my secret now, Nellie," he said.

"Heaven help you, Mark!" I answered, with tears.

"You have been very good to my unhappy wife; you have been your own self—generous, noble, forgiving. I believe, Nellie, that if any one could do her good, it would be you. She loves you; she seems to have a certain faith in you." He looked at me wistfully. "I dare not ask you—you would not, of course—you could not in any way take charge of her—travel with us? Ah, no—I am mad to think of such a thing."

Yet to refuse him was the hardest thing I had ever had to do in my life.

"No, I could not do that. The wide world must lie between us, Mark, for evermore. I will think of you, pray for you, but see you again—never!"

"You are right, Nellie, and I have no reason to complain. It is all my own fault. I have paid a bitter price for my folly—only Heaven knows how bitter; man could never tell. I deserve to suffer!"

"What shall you do?" I asked, looking with loving, longing eyes at the dark, handsome face, so haggard and so sad.

"I shall do my best, Nellie. After to-night, I have done with the world. I will never visit nor receive visitors again; I have finished with society. I cannot bear the disgrace; but I shall do my best for my hapless wife. I broke one vow, I will not break another. It was 'for better or for worse,' and it is for the worst. I shall take her away from England, find some place where there are few temptations, and take the greatest care of her. There is no hope, I fear, but I will do my best until the very end. I fastened the yoke round my own neck, I must bear it with patience and courage. I say good-bye to all that is bright in life to-night, Nellie. I would rather die a thousa deaths than risk such a scene again. am going from light to darkness. Th is one thing only that can make me l sad and less sorrowful.

"What is it, Mark?" I asked, w fast-falling tears.

"It is this, Nellie—that before i go you will say you forgive me. The burden of my life is a heavy one and the heaviest part of it is the sorrow that my mad folly has brought upon you. Say you forgive me. Let me take into my dreary exile that knowledge, and it will be to me a gleam of happiness, the only one that can reach me after my cowardice, my weakness, my folly, my betrayal of your faith and trust. Oh, lost love of my youth, oh, true love of my heart, forgive me, forgive me!"

He was kneeling at my feet. Was it wrong, when I saw his white face so full of anguish, his eyes so full of pain—was it wrong to bend over him, to put my face for one minute near his, to kiss him with my whole soul upon my lips, while I said—"I forgive you, oh, dearest love! Good-bye!"

The last sound I remember was the terrible, passionate sobbing of a strong man, and then came to me a merciful oblivion.

They left Westwood early the next morning. How the removal was managed I never heard, and I was too sick at heart to inquire.

I spent the next two years with Lady Yorke, as happy as I could ever be in this world, helping her in all her good deeds and works of charity, thinking always, with a sorely aching heart, of Mark.

We heard nothing of him. He never wrote. He had kept his word; he cut himself adrift from every social and from the world.

I asked Lady Yorke if she had received any letter from him. The answer was always "No;" but we often spoke, when we were quite alone, of the beautiful, hapless woman who was worse than dead.

One morning Lord Yorke looked up from his newspaper.

"Louise," he said, "have you seen this? 'At Nice, on the 18th inst., after a long and lingering illness, Lurline, Lady Severne, aged twenty-seven.'"

"How young to die," said Lady Yorke.

And I wondered if the long and lingering illness had been sent to help to purify that poor sinful soul, in which, after all, there had been a yearning for good. Had she gone

"Where the houseless shall seek a shelter,
The lonely shall find a friend—
Where the heart's desire shall be granted,
That hath loved and trusted to the end?

I never in all the after years asked how she died. The only thing told to me was, "She died in peace!" and I know how great is the mercy of Heaven, how perfect the pardon for sin.

Mark came back to me, not then, but two years afterwards, and asked me again to be his wife.

"I know, Nellie," he said, "that some women of a nature lower than yours would punish me now, would take their revenge, would send me away heart-broken and wretched, would give me back pain for pain, would delight in heaping scorn and contempt on me. You might do so, Nellie; I am at your mercy. If you send me away, I cannot complain; but, as there is mercy in Heaven, there should be mercy on earth. Love, my love, take me; help me to be a better man; help me to be noble and strong! My life is in your hands, Nellie; will you say me nay?"

How could I, when I had loved him, and him only, all my life? How could I, when every glance, every word of his was dear to me? How could I, when my heart, my love were his, as they had always been? I did not say him nay. Mark knows best what I said.

I am Lady Severne now, with fair children growing round me, and I love my husband just as much as I did when we met and parted under the lilac-trees. I love him so well and so dearly that I pray I may die looking on his face.

The only reference to the past that Mark ever made was one day when he took me in his arms, and said:

"Nellie, my love for you was NEVER LOVE FOR A DAY."

Woman's Suffering and Relief.

Those languid, tiresome sensations, causing you to feel scarcely able to be on your feet; that constant drain that is taking from your system all its former elasticity; driving the bloom from your cheeks; that continual strain upon your vital forces, rendering you irritable and fretful, can easily be removed by the use of that marvelous remedy, Hop Bitters. Irregularities and obstructions of your system are relieved at once, while the special cause of periodical pain are permanently removed. None receive so much benefit, and none are so profoundly grateful and show such an interest in recommending Hop Bitters as women.

Draft Horses.

The following is a synopsis of a lengthy article which appeared in the Chicago Tribune, consisting of interviews of its reporters with the leading draft horse dealers of America. It was headed as follows:

"Breeding of Draft Horses—One of the Important Industries of the Day—Experience of Dealers who Handle 40,000 Horses Annually—Relative Merits of Percheron, Clydesdale and English Horses Opinions of all Leading Dealers in New York and Chicago—They are unanimous in preferring the French Breeds over all Others, as they are more enduring, best dispositioned, stand the pavements best and bring higher prices."

The Tribune reporters were instructed to procure opinions as to the relative merits of the different breeds of draft horses being raised in this country and sold in their markets. The experience of dealers who sell perhaps 40,000 horses annually directly to those who buy them to wear out was thus obtained. This information is of immense value to those engaged in breeding horses.

Mr. I. H. Dahlman, of New York City, said:—"I handle between 9,000 and 10,000 horses annually. Of the draft horses I handle, the greater proportion—nearly all—are Norman-Percherons. These horses are docile, intelligent, easily broken, steady in harness, powerfully and compactly built. They are short in the back, deep in the body and broad in the chest. They have the best feet of any horses in America. I do not want it understood that all Norman horses have these good qualities. I have seen some imported that were as badly shaped horses as could be found. Long in the back, narrow-waisted and not worth their freight from France here. That class of horses is only imported by people who buy them to sell and make breed." In regard to the Clydesdale horses Mr. Dahlman said: "I will give you no criticism. I buy very few of them. I prefer to pass their stable and say nothing about them. From what I have said the Tribune readers, I think, will understand what breed of horses I would recommend them to raise."

C. & H. Hayman, East 24th Street, New York City, said: "We handle about 2,000 horses a year, principally draft horses of all kinds—French, Clydesdale, English and Belgian. We handle more of the French than of any others, because the people like them better and will give higher prices for them than for any other breed. They have more endurance and are the best dispositioned horses we have. They mature sooner and are ready for the market younger than the other breeds. The Clydesdales are not so well shaped or are their feet so good. We advise the farmers of the west to breed to the finest and best bred Percherons to be found."

The above opinions were the expressions of all the other dealers interviewed, with one or two exceptions. The object of all farmers who breed horses for use or for market, is to obtain animals that will mature the earliest and bring the most money. In order to accomplish this purpose with the greatest degree of certainty the use of the finest and best bred Percheron Stallions is recommended and advised by nearly all the dealers. The finest specimens are recorded with their pedigrees in full in the Percheron Stud Book of France.

Among Turnbull's pile of Remnants, will be found choice ends of Dress Goods, Black and Colored Silks, etc., at decided bargains.

Consumption Cured.

An old physician, retired from practice, having had placed in his hands by an East India missionary the formula of a simple vegetable remedy for the speedy and permanent cure of Consumption, Bronchitis, Catarrh, Asthma, and all throat and Lung affections, also a positive and radical cure for Nervous debility and all Nervous Complaints, after having tested its wonderful curative powers in thousands of cases, has felt it his duty to make it known to his suffering fellows. Actuated by this motive and a desire to relieve human suffering, I will send free of charge, to all who desire it, this receipt, in German, French or English, with full directions for preparing and using. CHAPTER I.

A LOVERS' QUARREL.

"Of all the flirts I ever knew that girl is the worst!"

"Which girl?"

"That one!" and as he spoke Mr. Scrope bowed to the flirt, and his companion did the same. She was walking with an elderly lady, and smiled in recognition of both gentlemen. Flirt or not, she was wonderfully pretty, with great brown eyes, soft sunny hair, and the daintiest rose-tint in her cheek.

"Look, here, Scrope! if you make a remark like that again about Miss Ashton I'll punch your head—by Jove I will!"

And Dr. Gerald Murche, standing five feet ten in his stockings, looked quite capable of doing it, as his dark blue eyes gazed from under their straight stern brows into the colorless orbs of his companion—colorless or nondescript, like the hair, and the mournache not quite hiding a vindictive mouth.

"What's Miss Ashton to you, may I ask?"

"That is my business, not yours. But if you are particularly anxious to know, I hope to call that lady my wife, and I object to your tone in speaking of her. Do you understand?"

"Oh! yes, I learnt English at school!" returned Scrope, into whose eyes had crept the green evil of jealousy. "But a good many may have that hope, my dear fellow——"

"I am going on!" said Murche, curtly; and he moved away as he spoke, leaving Philip Scrope to choose his own way, which was straight after the young lady he had called "flirt."

Dr. Murche went onward, not musing on the words, but on the subject of them—Miss Hilarie Ashton, sole daughter of Sir Arthur Ashton, a kindly old Baronet with a craze for geology. Like Mrs. Bayham Badger's "dear second," he went about chipping bits of stone from public buildings; and at present he was shipping an old palace on the Mediterranean, leaving his daughter to the care of his deceased wife's sister in the small and scandal-loving town of Fairweather.

When Dr. Murche had bought the practice from old Dr. Jamieson's executors he had resolved, being young and ardent, to devote himself heart and soul to his profession. He had no thought of love or marriage—in fact was something of a misogynist; nevertheless, he soon made himself liked in the town, though people wished he wasn't quite so dreadfully in earnest. He was true as steel and as unbending, and he had a large share of that quality without which no man is manly—decision. And yet he, with all his strength of mind, with all his sense of life's reality and earnestness, fell over head and ears in love with that frivolous little mortal, Hilarie Ashton, a spoilt child—who knew nothing of life's seamy side, and cried if she couldn't go to a dance.

Dr. Gerald knew Hilarie's aunt well enough; he was a favorite with the lady, who was a martyr to neuralgia in the head and temper. He had known her—with her grumbles and crotchets, her queer gowns with great cords, and buttons and tabs, suggesting that she was upholstered rather than dressed—for a long time, and liked her fairly; but that was no reason why he should lose his heart to her niece.

He had tried very hard not to like her; he had drawn those black brows of his very sternly together when he had seen her amid a throng of gilded youth, her eyes dancing with pleased vanity. She loved admiration, and was a vain, frivolous butterfly to Dr. Murche, empty headed and empty hearted.

"I hate doctors, they always remind me of codliver oil!" Hilarie one day exclaimed to aunt Augusta, "and I detest Dr. Murche. I know he meant his discourse on high heels for me. I wonder if he thinks I am tight-laced?"

"I don't suppose he thinks about you at all," replied aunt Augusta with a sniff.

When was it that she had ceased to inspire Gerald with contempt? Was it not on that day when he had lifted from among the wheels of an overturned cab a child, bruised, and bleeding, and senseless, carrying it, tenderly as a woman, to the first house—the house of aunt Augusta? Was it not Hilarie who took the little one from his strong arms so gently, so kindly, with great tears in her eyes, and her long hair drooping like an angel's wings over the little white face?

And when he went away she gave her hand to him with a smile, and he thought that those dainty fingers touched his as they had never touched man's before—that not even Phil Scrope had received a smile so sweet. He asked himself why he should find fault with her for her mirth and brightness; one might as well call the sea shallow because its surface sparkled, as call her frivolous because she loved gayety. He visited aunt Augusta more frequently than the neuralgia required, and soon he and Hilarie began to understand each other, though they had not yet attained that state of perfect love which casteth out fear and doubt. Of late there were certainly fewer "idiots dancing about" Hilarie. Gerald had scared them away, according to aunt Augusta, but Phil Scrope had not deserted the shrine. He had an advantage over Murche too; he knew Hilarie's idolized papa very well, and could talk by the hour about him to the daughter who loved him and was proud of him.

Dr. Murche tramped over the snow with an occasional glance at the stationers' shops, adorned as they were with cards and gifts.

"Ah! if I could only get Hilarie to say yes," he thought, "it would indeed be for me a happy Christmas!"

Meanwhile Mr. Scrope had overtaken the ladies, and aunt Augusta invited him indoors—an invitation he accepted "just to warm himself."

Aunt Augusta was a fire-worshipper, and the room was all aglow with warmth and light. In a porcelain basket was a beautiful bouquet of [illegible] flowers, having for centre [illegible] white blossom with a [illegible]

"I suppose I [illegible] when you, Miss Hil[illegible] stairs with aunt Augus[illegible] her head[illegible]" asked Miss Ash-

"[illegible] engagement to Dr. Murche."

"[illegible] engaged to Dr. Murche."

"I beg your pardon, I thought you [illegible] from his way of speaking, you [illegible], he certainly seemed as if he had the right to choose your friends for you, and so objects to my coming here."

"Why in the world should he object to you?" said Hilarie, without interest.

"Jealousy! Ha, ha! By Jove, I feel flattered! But he evidently isn't a believer in the Tennysonian ideal.

"'Trust me in all, or not at all!
Untruth in aught is want of faith in all.'"

Hilarie reddened a little; she said Gerald had had one or two disputes in re Scope, and he had promised to be [illegible] jealous of that [illegible] name to mine.

[illegible] cruel that rising color [illegible] pain, the [illegible] displeasure [illegible] than an open [illegible] to him.

"Murche is a fine fellow, though!" he went on meditatively; "believes that each individual [illegible] everything to duty, don't you know! His duty in his profession."

"And that is noble enough!"

"Oh, yes, very; and he means to succeed in it—get to the top of the tree. And, you see, a married doctor always gets on better than a single one, so I can understand his eagerness to marry. There's no nonsense about Murche. By the way, have you heard from Sir Arthur lately?"

Hilarie answered something—she was not quite sure what. A poisoned arrow was rankling in her heart, and her pride was in arms. Did Dr. Murche simply seek her as his wife—from a professional point of view? and yet would dare object to the visits of an old friend?"

"What lovely flowers!" said Scrope, when he was going. "Do you mind giving me one, Miss Hilarie? May I take one?"

"Oh, certainly," said she, smiling; and he drew from the centre the white blossom, the very gem of the bouquet, airily fastening it in his coat.

As he left the house he encountered Dr. Murche, and the eyes of Dr. Murche went straight to that floral decoration.

He was very tired and a little annoyed; a fractious patient had disobeyed his orders, and reproached him with the consequences, and various other small things had tried him. The small things are the worst. Thackeray avers that if a man could have all the wealth, and fame, and rank possible, on condition of wearing two sharp pebbles in his shoes, he would forget all his splendors and give them up to get rid of those small trials.

Some of the wasps of life had been stinging Dr. Murche all day, and the smart was not healed when he saw that flower, selected by himself and presented to Hilarie, adorning the coat of Philip Scrope.

"So Scrope has been here?" he said to Hilarie, entering the cheerful room where she was still smarting.

"Well? Does that break any of the laws?" she asked pettishly.

"Oh dear, no! Only, if you must give him flowers—and mind you, I'd rather you did not—you might take others besides those of my giving, Hilarie.

"You are making a great fuss about nothing!"

"Am I? I know that I would not give away even a leaf of a flower you gave me."

"And may I ask, Dr. Murche, what right have you to dictate to me on any subject, even the most trifling?"

Gerald looked at her in astonishment.

"I have no right certainly — as yet."

"As yet? My dear sir, do you suppose you ever will have?"

He stared at the scornful lips and disdainful eyes with an air of consternation.

"Hilarie, what do you mean? It is not possible that you have only been trifling with me?"

"Why not possible? Am I not a coquette—a flirt, a butterfly—and doesn't it add to my triumphs to have so wise a man—"

"Now, look here, Hilarie," said Dr. Murche in his brusque fashion, "I admit that at first I misjudged you; you forgave me that long ago—and since the day you said you loved me I have had perfect faith in you. If you are only trying me, you may as well stop now, because this is the sort of thing I can't stand!"

"You assume great authority, sir! But suppose I decline to sacrifice myself on the altar of your duty?"

"I do not understand one word you are saying, Hilarie. What do you mean?"

"Is not your wife to be only the stepping stone to your ambition?"

A blue ray shot lightning-like from Gerald's eye.

"I know where that comes from," he said very quietly. "There is ambition in me, certainly; but I think there is also self-respect. And if you listen to the malicious lies of Philip Scrope, I have only one thing to say, and that is 'good evening!' I shall not need a second reminder that you are an heiress!"

"Gerald! Gerald! I didn't mean that!" cried the girl in swift penitence.

But Dr. Murche had gone, and Hilarie was left to cry alone. She resolved to send her lover a penitent, humble note, and never again tease one so true and manly; but her penitence, like many other things in life, came too late. His carriage rolled past the window later on, and aunt Augusta volunteered the information that Dr. Gerald had been summoned away to a consultation to be held some miles distant, and probably would not return for two or three days.

Even in that short space of time a good deal may happen.

CHAPTER II.

ALL FAIR IN LOVE OR WAR.

Never had Hilarie been so wretched as she was on the day after her quarrel with Murche, for then she realized how dear he was, and what his loss would mean.

And she had sent him away so cruelly, letting him believe that she stooped to remind him of her miserable [illegible] As though any wealth could [illegible] her man's heart. Everything [illegible] given of him; there was [illegible] Ruskin, her; there books, [illegible]," with all his prized "S[illegible]s marked for the magni[illegible] at hand was the her edi[illegible], when papa would re-Chri[illegible] had been plotting and [illegible] introduction to Gerald—who had gone away so hurt, so [illegible] angry, and was not the man to be won back by a few tears.

"Don't sit in the fire like that, Hilarie," said aunt Augusta, "you'll burn your face to a cinder, and you will not be fit to be seen to-night."

"To-night!" echoed the girl, vaguely.

"Have you forgotten Mrs. Morison's party?"

"Oh! I don't care to go, aunt," said Hilarie, with listlessness; "I don't want to go really."

"Very well, then, stop at home, and somebody will be pleased. I'm sure I shall not coax you to go; but because you take a whim I shall not stay at home, so if you like to be alone all the evening, enjoy yourself."

And so aunt Augusta went to the party alone, leaving Hilarie to amuse herself as she chose; and the girl sat [illegible] into the fire, wishing vainly that to-day she could undo the work of yesterday, until her thoughts turned to papa; he would surely be able to put things right. She had told him so much about Gerald Murche in her letters that he would understand everything. So she was thinking when a sudden peal at the bell startled her and set her trembling.

Because she was alone in the house; she had given the [illegible] servants permission and [illegible] to go [illegible]; and when that [illegible] of horrible tales [illegible] imagined—of masked men [illegible] in and [illegible] the house; of [illegible] [illegible] a hiding-place, and [illegible] horrors; but, arming herself with the poker, she bravely opened the door, to find only Philip Scrope. He looked rather pale and excited.

"I want to see Miss Gresham," he said, hurriedly.

"Aunt is out, though," replied Hilarie, now rather ashamed of her fears.

"I am sorry for that. May I come in for a moment? I—I want to tell you something."

He followed her silently into the room, and glanced around it in a strangely nervous manner. Hilarie looked at him in mute surprise.

"Have you had letters or anything?" he asked, after a few moments.

"Letters — where from? Letters! Oh, do you mean that something has happened to my papa?"

"Yes; I am so very sorry, Hilarie."

Hilarie sank with a low sob into the first chair she came to, and Scrope looked down at her in silence.

"What is it? what has happened?"

"He had left Naples for England, Hilarie, coming home to give us all a surprise, and at—at Dover he met with a serious accident, and he is lying there now."

"Is it serious?"

"Very," replied Scrope, gravely. "They telegraphed this to me by your father's wish; he knew that I would do my best for you, Hilarie."

"Philip, I must go to my father," said Hilarie, putting her hand on her lips to steady them.

"Yes, be sake for you. I will take you, Hilarie. There is a train in fifteen minutes, and if you will hurry I will take you to the station."

"But I must see aunt Augusta, Philip; she is at Mrs. Morison's——"

"There is no time to go there," said Scrope; "your father's message is 'Come at once.' If you wish to see him in life, Hilarie——"

"Don't!" cried the girl, putting both hands to her ears for a moment, and she turned so white that he feared she was going to faint.

After a moment's silence, she spoke again:

"Give me the telegram; I will write to aunt, and leave it for her."

She sat down and wrote, as rapidly as the trembling of her fingers would allow, a note to her aunt, telling her whither she had gone and why, and begging that lady to follow; then enclosing the flimsy slip of pink paper Scrope handed to her, she put letter and all on the table where Miss Gresham would at once see it.

Hastening up stairs, she put on hat and mantle, her eyes blinded by tears as she thought of that good and loving father who had spoiled and petted her all his life. The Christmas she had believed would be so happy was, it seemed, to be most miserable.

She came downstairs speedily, and Scrope went to the front door with her, then all at once turned back.

"I have forgotten something," he said, returning to the drawing-room, to snatch up Hilarie's note and thrust it into the very heart of the fire; then he went back to the girl patiently waiting in the hall, and they left the house together.

It was snowing fast, and there were few people about. When they arrived at the station Scrope had just time to rush to the booking-office, and then he assisted Hilarie into a compartment, and sprang in himself.

"I did not know you were coming!" she said.

"Did you think I would allow you to go alone? What could you, with your inexperience, do? Besides, I too wish to see poor Sir Arthur!" was Scrope's answer.

Hilarie was silent. She was too sorrowful for speech; and he, apparently respecting her grief, was mute and motionless also.

When aunt Augusta, an hour and a half after Hilarie's departure, returned home, she was amazed and alarmed to hear from the servants that Miss Ashton could not be found. Upstairs and downstairs, in every hole and corner, did the unhappy lady search, under the impression that her wilful niece was somewhere in hiding. All in vain; and, half distracted, Miss Gresham rushed out just as she was, scarcely knowing what she did; and almost at her own gate she ran against a gentleman hurrying homewards through the snow.

"Good heaven, Miss Gresham! what is the matter?"

"Is it Gerald Murche? I thought you had gone!"

"I got a telegram informing me that my services were not needed. But, my dear Miss Gresham, what are you doing out on such a night in this state?"

"Hilarie has gone!" gasped aunt Augusta. "Oh, Gerald! won't you help me to find her?"

Dr. Murche stared; then he led Miss Gresham back to the house, and got a more coherent statement from her. A sudden suspicion made his black brows meet in one straight, angry line under his dark blue eyes.

"I will come back [illegible] and leaving [illegible]sible," he said, [illegible] her vain search, Miss Gresham to [illegible] the station.

He made his [illegible] had written to Sir A[illegible]. explaining the state of Arthur's [illegible] towards that gentleman's [illegible]; and only last night, after his quarrel with Hilarie, had he received the following letter:

"Hotel de Blanc, Calais.

"DEAR DR. MURCHE,—I have to thank you for your very frank and manly note, which I shall answer in person immediately. In the meantime, I will only say, that from what I know of you through my sister, my feelings towards you are very favourable.

"Faithfully yours,

"ARTHUR HILARY-ASHTON."

Armed with this letter, Gerald had intended to seek reconciliation with Hilarie on the morrow; but now—when hope was at the highest—where was she?"

"Perhaps I am unjust to her," he said, "only——"

A bribe, and a question or two addressed to a porter, and he learnt that Miss Ashton and Mr. Scrope had left together rather more than two hours ago—a piece of information confirmed by the station-master.

"And that is the woman for whom I'd have given my life!" said Gerald to himself, with exceeding bitterness, as he turned away, cut to the core of the heart.

CHAPTER III.

VICTOR AND VANQUISHED.

When the train stopped, and Scrope assisted Miss Ashton on the platform, she was in a state of truly pitiable nervousness. The young man drew her arm through his, and guided her hurriedly through the noisy throng to a large hotel.

A startling and important discovery was made when, after long and patient experiments, the combination of NERVILINE was produced. A grand victory, indeed, for the suffering have at last found a remedy, prompt, efficient and speedy at hand. Do you know that for 15c you can buy a trial bottle of Polson's Nerviline and that its great power over pain of every description? Polson's Nerviline cures chills, pain in the stomach, side, back and rheumatism; in fact all pain. Sold by druggists and country dealers.

PROFITABLE DAIRYING.

During the past season Mr. John Bonistel, of Sidney, Hastings county, has sent the milk of ten cows to the cheese factory, cheese factory. The cows averaged 51,679 lbs., and [illegible] the sum little sum of $447. Mr. The cheese maker, Mr. Frank White, says this about tells the record.

Is Advice Cheap?

We think not, for if disinterested it has like every good thing been dearly purchased. A fool may offer, but it requires a wise man to profit by it, and you my reader may offer or accept a little practical advice. Use or sell your friends to use only Putnam's Corn Extractor, for thousands have testified, after a practical test, that it is the only sure, safe and harmless remedy for corns in the world. Sold everywhere by druggists and dealers in medicine, all over the country. Beware of substitutes.

A MONTREAL BLAZE.

The Lion Stamping Factory of Thomas Davidson & Co. was totally destroyed by fire Thursday evening. The fire broke out about 7 o'clock, and within an hour the factory and outbuildings were consumed. The factory was valued at about $30,000; machinery, $27,000, and stock, $13,000; insurance, $20,000. This fire throws 125 men out of work.

An Answer Wanted.

Can any one bring us a case of Kidney or Liver Complaint that Electric Bitters will not speedily cure? We say they can not, as thousands of cases already permanently cured and who are daily recommending Electric Bitters, will prove. Bright's Disease, Diabetes, Weak Back, or any urinary complaint quickly cured. They purify the blood, regulate the bowels, and act directly on the diseased parts. Every bottle guaranteed. For sale at 50c. a bottle by Taylor & McDonald.

CARLING'S COMPARISONS.

Hon. John Carling addressed a meeting in London the other day, and to prove the benefits of the N. P. drew two comparisons, first, workmen's wages in 1678 with those paid in 1881, and then the prices paid for clothing, food, etc., in 1878 with those in 1881. Now, everyone knows that wages and prices were high in 1881 and that both are low in 1884, and in selecting one year for wages and the other for prices Mr. Carling intended to mislead and deceive.

An Enterprising, Reliable House.

Taylor & McDonald can always be relied upon, not only to carry in stock the best of everything, but to secure the Agency for such articles as have well-known merit, and are popular with the people, thereby sustaining the reputation of being always enterprising, and ever reliable. Having secured the Agency for the celebrated Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption, will sell it on a positive guarantee. It will surely cure any and every affection of Throat, Lungs, and Chest, and to show our confidence, we invite you to call and get a Trial Bottle Free.

SIR JOHN'S POVERTY.

And now some of the Tory organs declare that "a peerage was offered to Sir John Macdonald, but declined because his income was inadequate for its proper maintenance." Yes, Sir John is a poor man. His income only amounts to twenty-two thousand five hundred and sixty-nine dollars a year, besides all the expenses of his occasional trips to England and elsewhere for the benefit of his health. If his pay isn't raised soon we imagine he will have to go to the poor house.

Wheeler's Tissue Phosphates.

PHTHISIS, instead of being purely a local disease of the lung, as is commonly believed, must be treated as a great constitutional malady, the result of impoverishment from failure of nutrition. Organs and tissues impaired by climatic influences, or previous disease, are the first to give way, and we have the poverty of blood showing itself in consumption of the spine, hip, knee and bowels, as well as the lungs. The defect consists essentially in an insufficient supply of the food phosphates for tissue construction and the generation of nerve force. Wheeler's Phosphates and Calisaya shows the best record yet attained in benefiting and curing this disease.

A BRAVE CHILD.

Mrs. Phillips, who resides at No. 14 Napier street, Hamilton, went to market, leaving her little children locked up in the house. While absent, the youngsters played with matches and set fire to a cot in the bedroom, upon which a little girl, aged 4 years, was lying. Her clothing ignited and when the mother returned she found the little one standing over the bed bravely fighting the flames with water. She had succeeded in extinguishing the fire in the bedroom, but not before she had received bad burns about the abdomen and breast.

If it Were Possible to get testimony of the multitude who have used The Shaker Blood Syrup for spring debility, languor, lassitude, and that general feeling of stupidity, weariness and exhaustion which everyone feels during this season, we should be able to present to our readers such an overwhelming mass of commendatory messages, that the few who have not tried it would do so at once. It is a positive fact, and has been so effectually demonstrated that no one to-day denies it, that The Shaker Blood Syrup contains more real medicinal value than any article now before the public. Hundreds, in spite of their prejudices, are taking The Shaker Blood Syrup, and now honestly declare it to be the best medicine ever offered to the public; and they are quite right, and this sentiment must and will extend just as far as people will allow themselves to be influenced by facts and the testimony of those people who have tried it and know whereof they speak. In presenting The Shaker Blood Syrup to the public we suffer, because people have been so often humbugged by the weak decoctions with which the country is filled. It is often difficult to make people believe what an advertisement says, because of the evil influence produced by those unreliable worthless preparations. It is true that honest people are constantly suffering from the effects of dishonesty, and this will probably always be so, but it does not require any remarkable ability to see how the real worth of The Shaker Blood Syrup impresses itself upon people. Our reputation rests upon the value of this medicine, and we are proud of the record it is making.

DEATH OF DR. RICE.

Toronto, Dec. 16. Rev. Dr. Rice died at 3:30 yesterday afternoon. Deceased had been in very poor health for a long time back, and yesterday death was momentarily expected. He was born in September of the year 1814, and was therefore 70 years of age at the time of his death. His labors for Methodism were as untiring as they were various. In 1873 he was president of the Wesleyan conference, and in 1882 he was elected to the presidency of the general conference of the then united church. At the time of his death he was Senior-General Superintendent of the church. Three sons and two daughters survive him.

If you have a cough or cold do not neglect it; many without a trace of that hereditary disease have drifted into a consumptive's grave by neglecting what was only a slight cold. Had they used Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup before it was too late, their lives would have been spared. Mr. A. W. Levy, Mitchell, writes: "I think Bickle's Anti-Consumptive Syrup the best preparation on the market for coughs and severe colds. About six years ago I caught a severe cold which settled on my lungs, and for three months I had a cough. I had a physician attending me, but gradually grew worse until I was on the verge of Consumption, and had given up hopes of being cured, when I was induced to try Bickle's Syrup. Before I had taken one bottle I found myself greatly relieved, and by the time I had finished the second bottle I was completely cured. I always recommend it for severe colds and consumption.

Parties wanting Sewing Machines repaired can get them done in first class style, by applying to Mr G. A. Mitchell, agent for the Wheeler & Wilson, office Hutchison's Stove Store, Hunter street. Have your repairing done at home, by a person you know, and save the trouble of sending your machines abroad, at the risk of breaking and delay.

Baptist Church.

The good people of Peterborough will kindly bear in mind that the new Baptist Church will be opened on Sunday next. Sermons will be preached both morning and evening by the Rev. Dr. Thomas, of Toronto. The entertainment on Monday evening will be a pleasing one, and we hope to see it largely patronized. The tea will be served from 6 to 7 o'clock. Dr. Thomas, Rev. S. H. Dyke, of Toronto, and resident ministers will deliver short addresses.

Modest.

The facetious fiend of the Lindsay Post tells of a tramp, hailing from Peterborough, who struck that town, having a foot 16½ x 5½ inches. He forgets to tell the rest of the story, so creditable to the charitable nature of Lindsayites. The wretched tramp was almost barefoot. A Lindsay girl, her sweet soul stirred with pity, gave him a pair of her boots that were too small for comfortable wear. The poor, grateful tramp went on his way rejoicing, and as gracefully as he could in a pair of boots several sizes too large for him.

Y. M. C. A. Lectures.

On Thursday night last Dr. Fife delivered the first of the series of lectures on popular subjects by local men. There was, owing to the intense cold, only a limited attendance. Mr. D. R. Gardner occupied the choir. The lecturer treated his subject, "Respiration and Circulation," in plain language and in interesting style. He explained the arterial and venous circulation, and the important changes made in the life fluid thereby. In dealing with the breathing, the importance of fresh air in abundance was brought out. The lecture was full of interest and received a most attentive and appreciative hearing.

Social Reception.

The lady friends of the Young Men's Christian Association, are making arrangements for holding a reception to all the young men of the town, on New Year's day, from two o'clock A number of the ladies will be present to receive the callers, and serve refreshments. In the evening choice selections of music etc., will be given. Every young man of Peterborough will receive a cordial welcome. The furnishing of the new rooms will be then completed, and this will be the opening of them to the young men. There will be no admission fee or collection, either afternoon and evening.

Bellegbem's Furniture.

Bellegbem's furniture warerooms on Hunter street, are at present one of the sights of the town, well worth seeing. No holiday display of furniture ever made in the town or province, outside the cities, can equal it, and no visitor can find in town a more pleasant place to spend a half hour, and no buyer can find a more handsome, extensive and varied stock to select from. A huge show room is filled with long arrays of beautiful furniture arranged in artistic style. Every variety is presented for inspection. The goods will be found of the best quality in fashion and finish, and the price is so low that a dollar bill will here cover more square feet of furniture than in any shop in the country. Pay the place a visit. Remember the plate glass front furniture shop on Hunter street. See his advertisement.

George Street Church Anniversary.

The anniversary services of the George street Methodist church were held on Sunday and Monday evenings. On Sunday, Rev. Ralph Brown, of Australia, preached to large congregations morning and evening, powerful sermons. On Monday evening the reverend gentleman gave a most instructive address on "Heads and Faces," otherwise, on phrenology and physiognomy. His lecture was full of interest, and dealt chiefly with the broad principles of these two arts, but at the close of his remarks he gave practical illustrations of his theories, and "read the heads" of several well known citizens, in every case "hitting" closely the characteristics which they daily display to those who know them best. The chair was occupied by Rev. Mr. Tovell, and at suitable intervals the choir rendered excellent music, Miss Fanning also rendered a solo with very pleasing effect, and the duet by Misses Fanning and Ellsworth was highly appreciated. The anniversary services throughout were exceedingly satisfactory, not the least pleasing being the financial portion, the proceeds of Sunday's and Monday evening's collections being $300.

The "Canadian Florist."

This is the title of a new quarterly devoted to the cultivation of flowers, vegetables and fruits, published by Mr. Francis Mason. It is a handsome thirty-two page octavo pamphlet, printed on fine toned paper, with an elegant illustrated cover. It is printed and put together at the Examiner printing rooms and bindery, which is sufficient comment on its typographical excellence and neatness of make-up and appearance. Its contents are varied and practical, embracing the culture of flowers, fruits and vegetables. Study of its contents will prove of great service to both the amateur and professional gardener, while those whose refinement of taste and opportunities incline them to the beautiful recreation of cultivating flowers, both in-door and out-door, its pages will be found full of valuable practical instructions and suggestions. It contains, besides, a large amount of general reading matter of excellent moral tone, such as to make it a favorite in the home circle. This magazine is published by Mr. Francis Mason, a florist and seedsman whose success has made him competent to deal practically and intelligently with the topics treated of in the Canadian Florist and Cottage Gardener. Apart from its intrinsic merit this magazine, as the only kind published in Canada, is worthy the support of the constituency to which it appeals—only 25 cents a year, sample copies 10 cents. Address Francis Mason, publisher, Peterborough.

Christmas Cards in great variety; also a large assortment of Scripture Cards, in packets at list prices, besides a fine variety of Scripture Text Book. Miss Havergal's Books, Scripture Mottoes, etc., at John Erskine.

Sunday School Social.

On Friday evening a very delightful entertainment was given in St. Paul's lecture room, for the Sunday school children. Rev. Messrs. Bennett, Munro, Torrance, and Mr. Roper gave short addresses. Mr. D. B. Gardner gave a ma[illegible]ment. Mr. Smith gave d[illegible]asic was furnished by the Misses Dennistoun and Miss Johnston. The latter, with a class of six pupils, illustrated the Kindergarten style of instruction. The children were served with sweetmeats, and a very pleasant evening indeed was spent.

Tavernier Dramatic Company.

For the last ten nights the Tavernier Dramatic Company has been playing in the Opera House here to overflowing and delighted houses. The company is an excellent one, the leading artists, Miss Ida Van Courtland and Mr. Tavernier, being amongst the leading performers in their line. The support is strong and judiciously selected, with an eye to versatility of talent that proves exceedingly effective in the presentation of the varied dramas that form the large and first-class repertoire of this company. During its stay in Peterborough it has made hosts of friends, and every night crowds test the sitting and standing room of the large Hall. The plays presented have been of a high order and well put on, and it is safe to to say that no company ever visited the town that gave such universal satisfaction. While the performances have been good absolutely, comparatively they have been marvellously good. The price is only 10 cents (20 cents reserved seats), yet there are few travelling companies at high prices that are superior, and few indeed that can equal the Tavernier Dramatic Company. Every play-goer will be glad to know that the season lasts the week out. On Wednesday evening "Forget-Me-Not" and a farce will be presented. On 'Xmas day, at the matinee, "The Banker's Daughter"; at night, Dion Boucicault's "Led Astray." Friday night, Ida Van Cortland's benefit, "Hazel Kirke," the great Madison Square success. On Saturday, "The Mighty Dollar" at matinee; at night, "The Hidden Hand." Tickets 10 and 20 cents. Reserved seats at Hartley's.

St. Luke's, Ashburnham.

On Thursday last St. Luke's Sunday School held its annual Christmas Festival. In the afternoon about 120 children were feasted, and afterwards the adults "enjoyed the same blessing." In the evening a very pleasant entertainment was given. Music was supplied by the Fire Brigade orchestra. The school children sang carols with great precision and good effect. Mrs. Bowman gave in her usual superior style, two solos. Mr. McDonald, piper to St. Andrew's Society, gave a bagpipe solo, and Miss. Grundy contributed readings, and two interesting dialogues were well presented: One by Messrs. Geo. Overton, Wm. Heaps, Arthur Smith, Wm. Rombrough, Geo. Phillips and Chas. Orde; the other by Misses Carrie, and Ella Bennett, Katie Payne, Sophia Cameron Florence Tivey, and Laura Butcher. The evening's delightful entertainment closed with the distribution of 46 prize books. The first, second and third prizes were awarded to pupils who attended during the year 50, 46 and 43 Sundays respectively. First prizes.—Katie Payne, Louisa Friend, Victoria Maniece, Hettie Bennett, Maud Packenham, Fanny Packenham, Carrie Bridgewater, Martha Beatty and Harry Phillips. Those winning Second prizes:—Carrie Bennett, Lizzie Beatty, Pearl Walker, Katie Phillips, J. Pollock, Fred Long, Jos. Starr, Geo. Crowe, John Crowe, Carrie Young, Susie Young, Laura Butcher, Geo. Phillips, and Thos. Cathcart. Third prizes:—Mary McAnairn, Eva Gaddy, Annie Denne, Laura Young, Lizzie Tighe, Effie Bennett, Gertie Denne, Ada Curtis, Albert Roberts, Geo. McWilliams, David Rogers, Chas. Young, Geo. Overton, May Canning, Richard Canning, Ed. Armstrong, Jennie Pollock, Mossie Irwin, Hettie Burnham, Frank Curtis, David Curtis, Thos. Burnham, and Mary C. Curtis.

China Hall.

This extensive establishment at this season of the year presents a scene of indescribable beauty and attractiveness. From the magnificient stock of varied goods suitable for the holiday season, it would seem that Santa Claus himself had personally supervised the purchase and arrangement of the stock. The specialty of the establishment is its silverware, of which the magnificient trophy in the show window is only a speciman. The amount of silverware is not to be judged by what is seen, though that is of great extent, for the vaults are full of stock which even the extensive premises do not admit of displaying. The silverware of China Hall is of the very best quality, and of such diversity that no buyer can complain of lack of variety for choice. An immense stock of glassware in the latest designs is also worthy of inspection. A specially fine line of dinner sets presents unusual opportunities for purchasers making satisfactory selections. In all other departments there will be found beautiful holiday presents, smoking sets, parian statuary, vases, ornaments, bronze statuary and dolls, mugs, hand painted cups and saucers, plaques, and a thousand articles that cannot be enumerated. The immense orders placed by Mr. Wilson for his goods, give him reduced prices, and his retail prices are therefore such as would be ruinous, to any person not endowed with the wide awake, pushing character, which leads the proprietor of China Hall to make decided specialities of his leading lines, and enables him to distance competition. China Hall will be found the veritible headquarters for gift goods of every conceivable description. His stock is conveniently and accessibly arrayed, and a large, attentive staff of assistants, makes selection and purchase easy, even in the rush of the holiday trade. China Hall,

Though crowded with customers up to the door,
—Like an omnibus, always has room for "one more."

We can confidently advise all those in need of a holiday gift to make the purchase at China Hall.

CHRISTMAS-TIDE.

For the Examiner.

We are tired of the weary warfare,
The daily battle that must be;
But the one true thing that is left us,
Is the dear old Christmas joy.

So we lay aside all our troubles,
The cares that we cannot name;
And rest us, awhile, in the gladness
That ever has been the same.

The same old remembrance and giving,
Always so sweet in the end;
Ever since the great Master-Giver,
Came down to be King and Friend.

The same fragrant odour of cedar,
Of hemlock, holly and pine,
Which only grows fresher and sweeter,
With memories that years entwine!

The same "merry Christmas" responding,
The same old story again,
As sweet as when told in the shepherds,
Of "peace and good-will to men."

The same gladsome chime of the church-bells,
The same old carols and cheer;
The same weary world that is smiling,
As the Christmas-tide draws near.

And we turn aside from life's worry,
From all the cares that annoy;
To rest us awhile, in the brightness,
Of the dear old Christmas joy!

TOWN COUNCIL.

The city fathers held their final meeting of the year on Monday night. All the members were present except Mr. Kelly and Mayor Cox. A large number of communications and several accounts were dealt with. The report of the Finance Committee, advising the payment of bills to the amount of $236.76 was adopted. The report of the Building Committee, recommending that the building by-law be amended to provide for the appointment of a Building Inspector, and that the fines of W. O. Ferguson, R. Z. Rogers, Wm. Aldridge and V. Best, in all $49.40, for infractions of the by-law, be remitted, was also adopted. The Court of Revision recommended the remission of taxes of several persons and thereafter all other applications.—Adopted. The Charity Committee's report was adopted. Mr. McNeil, from the special committee on the drainage of Spaulding's Bay, reported, recommending that the G. & Q. and G.T.R. railways be written to, asking them on what terms they will fill in Spaulding's Bay. The by-law to levy a local tax to pay for two electric lamps on Hunter street was passed. The by-law to amend the building by-law was discussed without any final action. A motion to dispense with the special night watchman was lost. The transfer of Mr. Wainwright's butcher shop license to his new shop on George street was agreed to.

Ashburnham Public School.

Address and Presentation.

The pupils of the Ashburnham Public School having heard that their Head Master, Mr. A. T. Emmerson, had tendered his resignation to the school board, previous to the closing of the school on Friday last for the Christmas vacation, presented him with a dressing case and the following address:—

Mr. Emmerson:

Dear Teacher,—It was with feelings of regret that we heard you had decided to sever the connection which has existed between us for the last two years. During the time you have proved yourself to be a faithful and painstaking teacher, ever striving to advance the best interests of the school, and guid[illegible] with patience and kindness our steps in the path of learning. Under your wise management the school has prospered, and we feel that in parting with you we are not only losing a good teacher, but a friend. We hope you will accept this toilet case as a small expression of our esteem; and in whatever sphere of life you may hereafter engage, you have our best wishes for your success. Wishing you a Merry Christmas and a Happy New Year, we are your affectionate pupils.

Signed on behalf of the school.

Lizzie Rombough.
Robbie Erskine,
Maude Packenham,
Robbie McAmmond.
Lizzie Beattie,
Arthur Lipsett.

Ashburnham, Dec. 19, 1884.

Mr. Emmerson made a suitable reply, thanking the pupils for their good wishes and expressing his interest in their future welfare. We feel sure that the sentiments contained in the foregoing address will be heartily endorsed by the parents and friends of the children, as Mr. Emmerson is an efficient teacher, whose place it will be difficult to supply.

PERSONAL.

Mr. Alf. Tate is spending his holidays in town

Mr. H. H. Burnham, of Port Hope, was in town during the past week.

We had the pleasure of a call from Dr. Massie, of Keene, during the week.

Mr. D. Anderson, of Apsley, was in town on Friday, and smilingly graced our sanctum.

Mr. E. E. Bowie, of London, paid us a flying visit on Saturday.

Misses Brodie, Bertram and Davidson are home for the holidays from Morvyn House School, Toronto.

Mr. E. W. Cox and Miss Cox have returned to town from college to spend the Christmas holidays.

Messrs. James and William Delaney, are home for the holidays from Montana and St. Michael's College, respectively.

Miss E. Smart, daughter of Mr. D. Smart, is home from Demill Ladies' College, near Oshawa, for the 'Xmas holidays.

Messrs. Maxwell Hamilton and Maxwell Dennistoun, Queen's College, and Harold Morrow, R. M. College, Kingston, are home for the holidays.

Mr. Maxwell Hall, Secretary of the Longford Lumbering Company, is in town spending a few days with friends and enjoying the 'Xmas festivities. Long may he enjoy them

Mr. F. H. Dobbin, of the Lindsay Post, gave us an early call on Monday morning. Mr. Dobbin knows what town to come to when he wishes to hear a good sermon on Sunday.

Local Brevities.

There is still hope for the N. P. Our local Tory contemporary announces with great glee that "wheat has advanced half a cent in Chicago to-day"—Tuesday.

The net proceeds of the lecture of Rev. Mr. Chiniquy were $169.14. Of this sum half goes to the lecturer, and the balance to the Peterborough Protestant home, $84.57 each, a tidy Xmas box in either case.

The total proceeds of the Cathedral bazar as announced on Sunday, is $5,642 62. Of this sum the Bishop's "noble ward"—No. 1—contributed $1,256, thus heading the list by a good majority.

Rev. Mr. Munro preached the last sermon in the old Baptist church, Aylmer street, previous to occupying the new church on Murray street. An interesting and impressive sermon was preached from the text—"Arise, let us go hence."

Next Sunday at three o'clock p. m. Rev. Mr. Munro preaches to the united Masonic fraternity of the town in the Murray street Baptist church.

CHRISTMAS MEATS.

The Holiday Display.

Canadian civilization demands that the solid as well as sentimental requirements should be pandered to at the holiday season, and the fine display of Christmas meats made by our butchers shows that they have borne this in mind.

Mr. James Howden,

in his preparations this year, has eclipsed all former efforts. His stalls on Saturday last were a sight worth seeing. His display was contributed to by 14 cattle, 25 sheep, lambs and pigs galore, and one calf weighing 300 lbs., fed by Mr. D. Tully, Smith. All the above stock was fed by Mr. Howden, himself on his farm, especially for the Christmas market, being the pick of a herd of 200 cattle. The public can judge of the quality of these meats when it is remembered that Mr. Howden understands feeding stock, and does so as well as he has fed the people of Peterborough for the past thirty years. His display this year was a splendid one, and was ornamented in the usually excellent manner that marks them. One novel feature was a dressed carcase of bear, which has been fed for the past eighteen months by Mr. Thomas Miller, of Douro. Mr. Howden has great reason to feel proud of the exceptionally excellent display he has made this year.

Mr. Harry Winch

is this year up to his usual mark, and that is saying a great deal. His stock is cut from animals contributed as follows:—Mr. E. Belmer, Smith, several first-class cattle and a mammoth hog weighing 675 lbs.; 1 heifer fed by Mr. James Wallis, "Merino"; 2 steers and a heifer fed by Mr. Peter Drummond, Otonabee; 1 heifer fed by Mr. James Fife, Otonabee; and one thoroughbred Ayrshire heifer fed by Mr. James Carber, Otonabee; sheep and lambs from the folds of Mr. R. Moloney and Mr. John Moloney (reeve), of Douro. The display made is a beautiful one. The meats are arranged with the utmost care, tastefully ornamented, a specialty being the comic placards, in colored crayon. Each placard is a work of art in its way, and a great credit to the artist, Mr. Grierson, Cobourg, nephew of Mr. Winch. There were also a fine stock of poultry and fancy meats. Every animal of Mr. Winch's stock is of prime quality, and the way the orders come in shows that the public think so too. His display in extent and quality sustains his reputation, and that is as high praise as can be given Harry Winch.

Mr. R. Wainwright

comes out this season with flying colors. His business has so increased, through the excellent satisfaction given his increasing customers, that he has had to secure larger premises on George street a few doors south of his old stand, and his beautiful display is ahead of all his past efforts. The stock supplying his choice display of meats is from the following well-known feeders:—1 cow, fed by Wm. Collins, North Monaghan; 1 cow, Wm. Taylor, Douro; 1 cow and lambs from W. A. Hall, Smith; 1 heifer, Mark Curtis, Douro; pair heifers, John Garbutt, Smith; four prime cattle fed by Mr. William Crough, of Eanismore; hogs, fed by Messrs. John Ludgate, J. Hall (Smith), and by himself; sheep from the folds of George Ward, Harvey, T. E. Fitzgerald and T. Hall, Smith. All prime stock. Besides sausages, venison and fancy meats. The new shop is lighted at night by electric light, and the telephone is put in for the convenience of customers. Don't pass Wainwright's new shop if you want the choicest cuts of the choicest meat in the market.

The other Butchers.

Messrs. M. O'Brien, Charlotte street, Arthur White, Simcoe street, N. T. Laplante, Market, J. Mervin, Hunter street, J. W. Heather, Rubidge street, and W. McNairn, George street, had also very creditable displays of excellent meats.

Money to be Made.

It is said that dull times are not known by the agents for the great publishing house of George Stinson & Co., of Portland Maine. The reason of this exceptional success is found in the fact that they always give the public that which is keenly appreciated and at prices that all can afford. At present we understand, their agents are doing wonderfully well on several new lines. They need many more agents in all parts of the country. Those who need profitable work should apply at once, Women do as well as men. Experience is not necessary, for Messrs. Stinson & Co. undertake to show all who are willing to work, not hard but earnestly, the path to large success. It should be remembered that an agent can do a handsome business without being away from home over night. Another advantage—it costs nothing to give the business a trial, and an agent can devote all his time, or only his spare moments to it. Stinson & Co. guarantee grand success to all who engage and follow simple and plain directions that they give. We have not space to explain all here, but full particulars will be sent free to those who address the firm; their full address is given above.

Peterborough House Furnishing Store!

We take this opportunity of letting the general public know of our establishment. People are calling upon us from time to time, enquiring whether this is the CHEAP STORE. One lady enquiring if this is the place where they sell things at half price. Others say, after having purchased elsewhere, if I had only knew of your establishment, I would have done otherwise. These are only some of the kind of expressions used about our business. While we believe a good business fairly and properly conducted, will advertise itself, we also think it necessary to let the public clearly see where we are and what we are doing, by the use of printer's ink. We do not know of losing a single customer after having once secured them, except in cases where we have been injudicious enough to trust unprincipled persons, they have cheated us and left us. we do not wish the custom of such. We would now just say stranger friend, when you are told by some kind friend to go to the House Furnishing Store, do not fail to do so.

TO THE ELECTORS OF No. One Ward.

GENTLEMEN, At the request of a large number of the Electors of this Ward, I have consented to again become a candidate for election. In soliciting your votes, I pledge myself, if elected, to exercise the most rigid economy consistent with the effective prosecution of the corporation service. Contrary to report, I am in favor of the filling in of Spaulding's Bay, but economically, and in a manner not to embarass the finances of the town. I am anxious as a property holder, for the improvement of the Ward, but am opposed to the expenditure of very large sums of money without the express consent of the ratepayers. Soliciting your votes and influence, I remain,

Yours Very Respectfully,
JOHN McNAUGHTON.

Peterborough, Dec. 31st, 1884.

A CARD TO THE Electors of Lakefield.

GENTLEMEN,—Having received at your hands the position of Reeve, which I have held for the past five years, I again solicit your support. When I accepted this position I found the municipality liable for a large amount, I to-day find you placed in the proud position of not owing a dollar, with a considerable surplus in hand, and a lower rate of taxation. As one of yourselves, my earnest desire is the immediate progress of the village, so that it may at an early date become a town. If you consider my opponent a more progressive man, elect him. By doing so, if he is a more progressive man, you will help me, as I am the largest ratepayer, but I think you will agree with me that he is not, and will in the interests of the village, irrespective of party, which I have never allowed to bias me in municipal affairs, give me your hearty support.

Baptist Church in Peterboro'.

Opening of Their New Place of Worship.

On Sunday last the services in connection with the opening of the new Baptist church, Murray street, were held. Since the purchase of the Bible Christian church from the united Methodist body, the building committee have wrought great changes for the better in the edifice, and now the Baptists of Peterborough can boast of having as neat and comfortable a place of worship, in proportion to its size, as is to be found in the district. The additions and alterations include a new porch at the front, and new vestries at the rear. Internally great improvements have been made. The walls have been tinted a warm stone color relieved with pencilling. The ceiling is colored a delicate lavender shade, and the cornice is nicely ornamented. At the junction of the walls and wainscot a line of stencilling in maroon runs round the room, while a similar line runs parallel at the height of the springing of the window arches, over which the stencil becomes two broad bands running concentric with the turn of the arches. The seating has been thoroughly remodelled, and provided with iron ends. A new platform and pulpit have been added in oak with mahogany trimmings and three fine chairs, handsomely made by Mr. D. Belleghem, adorn the platform. Elevated on pillars on either side of the pulpit are two ornate bronze supports to gas jets. The choir is placed to the left of the pulpit, and a new baptismal fount has been supplied. The heating is done by hot air, and in every way the church is a model of modern convenience.

At the morning service, Rev. Dr. Thomas, of Toronto, preached the first sermon to a crowded congregation. Selecting the 12th chapter of St. John, the speaker drew therefrom a lucid and graphic description of the moral elements that should enter into the church. The sermon was an eloquent and effective effort. Rev. Dr. Thomas is eloquent, earnest and impressive, with free delivery and great command of language. We regret that our space forbids us dealing more at length with his splendid discourses.

In the afternoon at three o'clock Rev. Mr. Munro preached a grand sermon to the Masonic fraternity, who were present in large numbers from town and vicinity. The sermon will be found published in full in other columns.

In the evening the church was again crowded to listen to Dr. Thomas, who took for his text, St. Mark, 12, 32—"And the scribe said unto Him, well Master, thou hast said the truth: for there is one God: and there is none other but He."

The sermon was an eloquent exposition of the practical effectiveness of our Lord's teaching, of its adaptation to the varied needs of every degree of human wants, and of the response of the human consciousness to the directness of the divine appeals. Christ's divinity was exhibited in every phase of his earthly career as well as by the imperishability of the religious system he founded. Christ evoked Christian consciousness by his divinity, by his new revelation of the heinousness of sin, by his love, by his mercy, by his judgment and universal human consciousness responded. But no condensation of the sermon can give an idea of the rich stream of thought that flowed through it, or of the eloquent manner its truths were presented.

Throughout the services of Sunday the attendance was large, and the collections liberal. The fine music of the choir is deserving of especial praise. The hymns read with such fervour and effect by Rev. Mr. Munro, were singularly appropriate. The words, as well as the airs selected, were familiar, and there was such congregational singing as is rarely heard in these latter days.

MONDAY EVENING.

There was a very large attendance at the social gathering on Monday evening. Tea was served from 5 to 7:30, from which latter hour a most enjoyable programme was carried out.

The choir gave in grand style the anthem, "O Lord of Hosts," Rev. Alex. Bell read the 11th chapter of Isaiah, and Rev. Mr. McAmmond led in prayer. Misses Gilmour and Roper then gave a duet, after which the pastor, Rev. Mr. Munro, said he could not let the occasion pass without expressing the gratitude due to God for the great success that had attended the efforts leading up to and connected with the opening of the church. When the congregation looked back on the past two months, and reflected on the result, they could only say, "it is the Lord's work, and it is marvellous in our eyes." He also expressed his gratitude for the way the people had received him since his coming to Peterborough about a year ago, for the confidence they had placed in him, and for the kindness which they, as well as others of all creeds, had shown him. When he started to raise funds to purchase and improve the present church he succeeded without solicitation or pressure, and though the subscriptions were payable in two years, most of them had been paid within three months. He thanked all for attendance on the opening services, and would rejoice in their spiritual and temporal welfare.

Mrs. Chambers then sang, "O, the Better Land," and Mr. James Stratton made a statement of the finances. The building and church ground had cost $7,000, which with $2,500 spent in additions, brought the total expenditure up to $9,500. There was a debt of $1,200 that required immediate attention, of this it was hoped to secure $600 this evening.

Mr. Schneider then gave an instrumental solo, and responded to an encore.

Rev. Messrs. Torrance, Manning, De St. Dalmas and Dr. Thomas gave short addresses at intervals, all expressing their pleasure at the occasion, and rejoicing in the spirit of Christian unity that marked the churches in town.

Miss Gilmour rendered an "Impromptu from Schubert," and the subscription list was passed and $528 secured in a short time. After votes of thanks to the choir, ladies, etc., moved by Mr. Wm. Graham, Smith, Rev. Mr. Bennett closed with prayer. The collections on Sunday were $110, and the tea realized $150.

The opening services throughout were eminently successful. Great credit is due to Rev. Mr. Munro, who has been exceedingly diligent and active; and the leading members, in fact the whole congregation, which is not large, are deserving of praise for the liberality which they have responded to the call upon their loyalty to their church.

A Wonderful Discovery.

Consumptives and all who suffer from any affection of the Throat and Lungs, can find a certain cure in Dr. King's New Discovery for Consumption. Thousands of permanent cures verify the truth of this statement. No medicine can show such a record of wonderful cures. Thousands of once hopeless sufferers now gratefully proclaim they owe their lives to this New Discovery. It will cost you nothing to give it a trial. Free trial bottles at Taylor & McDonald's Drug Store. Large size $1.00.

Geo. Andrews, overseer in the Lowell Carpet Corporation, was for over twenty years before his removal to Lowell, afflicted with salt rheum in its worst form. Its ulcerations actually covered more than half the surface of his body and limbs. He was entirely cured by Ayer's Sarsaparilla. See certificate in Ayer's Almanac for 1885.

THE MIDDLE STATE.

"Laicus" Reviews "Theodore."

To The Editor of THE EXAMINER.

The unmanly begging of the question, emanating from the gentleman "shouting for help," in the very best evidence that the contention not only "should be narrowed down somewhat," but that this very much to be desired event has been, in point of fact, already consummated. Unwittingly he affirms that "he has no case and he knows it." But why this unseemly haste? Surely he need not to have given himself that trouble, since his readers are tolerably well qualified to draw their own conclusions without the gratuitous aid of the modest man who "can mystify and help to a decision." A cool and pertinent reminder on their part, to the effect that he has quite enough to do to help himself, would doubtless operate on his unblushing self-assurance like a thunder clap from a clear sky. They might venture to suggest to him also, that a poor advocate ought not to overreach himself in his purblind eagerness to essay the functions of a judge. A trite adage to "learn to labor and to wait," and a second appropriately inculcates the principle of "more haste, worse speed." But giving our would be "sheet anchor" of Protestantism his due, we are constrained to admit that he has scored a point. It is not to be denied that we "came gratuitously before the public," inasmuch as no general and spontaneous invitation from that source was kindly vouchsafed us—a privilege not every day accorded to the ordinary scribe of a newspaper. But since the reading public, suffering for want of intellectual light, has implored our illustrious oracle to give them the benefit of his abounding learning and wisdom, the confidence so generously reposed in him should be, by every right, heartily and efficaciously reciprocated. And, in truth, if he hasn't enlightened and public, ere this, it is manifestly not for the want of good intention, and it is to be imputed to him not in the light of a fault, but rather as an unavoidable misfortune.

WISELY ADMONISHES HIM

ASTONISHED THE UNEDUCATED

Resuming the discussion at the terminus of our last communication, the first topic for attention is the statement that Augustine would have man appear on the last day of the world just as he was when he died, and be judged accordingly. Granted. But would the inference be drawn from this premise that Augustine builds up purgatory with one hand only to afford the other hand employment in tearing down the structure erected? Not necessarily. Immediately that a man dies a particular judgment is passed upon him, never to be modified. A purified soul and body will appear on the last day to hear the particular judgment reaffirmed in presence of the whole human family. Man will be judged of God entirely by the works of this life. No room obtains in a middle state for repentance or rectification of antecedent transgression.

PAYMENT OF THE UTMOST FARTHING

is invariably exacted in the abode intermediate. At the seat of general judgment man must stand upon his merits, and receive an eternal reward or punishment proportioned to the degree of his virtue or wickedness—and this whether or no he has served a term in purgatory. Thus, in brief, teaches Augustine. But, being deluded, some grotesque somersault or other should, of course, be promptly placed to his credit.

With regard to the Jewish belief in a middle state, consult their Talmudical treatise on Benedictions (C. 3.), wherein occurs this passage: "The soul does not immediately go to heaven on its separation from the body, but remains wandering about this world during the space of twelve months, at the expiration of which, it returns to the grave. It endures, however, much torment in purgatory: at length, at the expiration of twelve months it enters into heaven, where it enjoys repose." The matter of wandering about the earth is, of course, fanciful; still twelve months of much torment for almost every Jew, shows that their limbus is with the reservation that it is even more certain of plentiful habitation in addition to being superlatively severe; since the purgatory of Catholicity requires only that some souls suffer for a time, etc., and defines neither the nature nor the extent of the alloted punishment. How does the foregoing testimony compare with the averment that "in the limbus of the Jews there was no purification for any one," etc.? Will the learned Jewish Rabbi be gainsaid and instructed as to the belief of his forefathers by our man "agility"? The Rabbi, if questioned, would tell him that his Jewish ancestors were imprisoned in a middle state, awaiting the advent of the Messiah; that limbus was a place of rest to those who had satisfied the penalty of sin, a purgatory to those still indebted. But to the Christian there is no doubt that Christ was the promised Messiah. Hence, limbus, the middle state, has now no occasion to serve as a temporary receptacle for the undefiled, as the years would have it, since they go direct to heaven, by reason of redemption through Christ. But to those dying

WITH SLIGHT STAINS OF SIN

the middle state serves its antique office of purification.

In order next is the confident assertion that Augustine was the first father that hinted at purgatory, together with an idle attempt to nullify the expressive evidence of Origen touching the same locality. Let us see. By no less than 169 years does the birth of Origen antedate that of Augustine. Says Origen (Homily 6 in Exod. tome 2, p. 148): "He that is saved is saved by fire. When we depart this life, shall we be punished for our faults and not receive the reward of our virtues? We shall suffer for our sins, and receive the reward of our good actions." And again, "But when we shall arrive at that place, who shall bring many good works and little that is evil; this evil the fire shall purify as it does lead, and the whole shall become pure gold." At a later day Origen (in his treatise "On Principles") departing from Christian doctrine, proposed ultimate salvation for every soul without exception, and was censured by his superiors for his heretical departure.

NOT A SOLITARY WORD OF REPROOF,

however, was laid to his charge regarding his exposition of the reality of actual punishment in purgatory. Moreover, subsequent fathers quote his very words in proof of the office of purgatory. Origen is explicit and not to be misunderstood. He taught a purgatory of purging fire, long before Augustine had spoken a word on the subject. Clement also preceded Augustine. He states (Strom. 1, p.p., 794,865) that by punishment after death, men must expiate every the least sin, ere they enter heaven. And Cyprian, too, antedates Augustine Cyprian speaks (Epist. ev. p. 109) of being purified by long suffering in the temporary prison of the future life. Additional testimony of similar purport may easily be produced. No, indeed, Augustine was not the first father that—not hinted at but—clearly and unmistakably taught the "Romish purgatory." But let it be noted that our champion was the first to lay that accusation at the door of Augustine.

As for the hackneyed and

OFT REFUTED CANT

about "well-paid-for masses," the subject, on its merits, is beneath contempt. However, since designing and plausible misrepresentation may have a pernicious effect in misleading many ill-informed but well-intentioned people; suffice it to briefly observe that masses—the sacrifices and oblations of Augustine and the early Christian fathers—are being constantly offered up throughout the Catholic world for the faithful departed, and without regard of payment for the service. And when payment is made, on particular occasions, the fee is comparatively insignificant, and within the easy reach of any poor person. Such as the fee is, it goes to the support of the pastor, as a small modicum of his salary. Presently it occurs to us that somewhere it is written that a pastor is permitted to live from the performance of the duties appertaining to his office, and that the laborer is worthy of his hire. It might, indeed, work charmingly if a Catholic pastor was so constituted as not to require the necessities of life. But, as a matter of fact, God himself has ordained otherwise. Possibly, however, non-Catholic clergymen are happily constituted as above specified; which circumstance, if it be as suggested, would effectually do away with contributions and direct taxes going to the maintenance, not alone of individual pastors, but of whole families. A propos of the practice of testifies Mr. Thorndike, a "good, sound" Protestant theologian. He says, "The practice of the church of interceding for the dead at the celebration of the eucharist, is so general and so ancient that it cannot be thought to have come in upon imposture, but that the same aspersion will seem to take hold of the common Christianity." Thus Bingham, another Protestant writer, and the Greeks to this day—particularly on Saturday of each week—continue to offer up the holy sacrifice for the dead, in compliance with that venerable and truly Christian custom.

CELEBRATING MASS FOR THE DEAD

Furthermore, the distinction between venial and mortal sin is termed unscriptural. Some sins, in Matt. vii., 3, are compared to motes, some to beams—a clear distinction in degree of sin. Is the sinner condemned? his sin is mortal; it kills the soul. Is he consigned to the middle state? his sin is venial; that is a sin that may be excused by way of temporary punishment. The distinction is reason applied to Scripture. Does holy writ instruct us to call ourselves Christians, or to sanctify Sunday? Are these observances consequently anti-scriptural and reprehensible?

Has Augustine, then, announced that purgatory "was without proof and unsupported by any canonical authority"? And this as

AGAINST ALL THAT HE HAS TAUGHT

and written in proof of that self-same purgatory? New surprises constantly in store for us, and the unexpected sure to be gazetted as the most probable of forthcoming events. Several quotations we have already adduced, on the strength of which as being based on the New Testament, Augustine argues "point blank" for the verity of purgatory. For an ad rem sample of his many proofs, take the 32nd verse of 12th Matt., commenting on which Augustine justly observes that, if no sin can be forgiven in the world to come, the argument of Christ has lost its force. There is not, perhaps, in the whole relation of church history another father who has labored so zealously and successfully to demonstrate by way of reason and Scripture, both the propriety and necessity of purgatory and prayer for the dead. Does it stand to reason that this celebrated father would argue in behalf of purgatory from canonical Scripture and

THEN TURN STRAIGHT ABOUT

and assert that his subject was without proof and unsupported by any canonical authority? Has he not an uncommon reputation for intelligence and consistency? No person, in the past, whether blushing unseen or rendered conspicuous, has charged him with the like. And, in the present instance, no "names, dates, books, chapter, verse or page," as all along characteristic of our agile "honest man," have been adduced to substantiate the allegation. Even if Augustine did express himself as alleged, which we warmly deny, we have produced an abundance of evidence from fathers, both before after and contemporary with Augustine, who do positively verify our contention by proof and canonical authority.

At all events the Greek church did not accept purgatory. No? They object only to the notion of material fire—an element, as we have seen, not at all essential. The Greek fathers subscribed to the decrees of the Council of Florence, the fourth article of which recites, that some souls, etc.,

"ARE PURIFIED AFTER DEATH

by the pains of purgatory"—a punishment carrying with it privation from God, the most dreadful of all torment, says the same Council. Moreover, when Claude, the Huguenot, held his famous conference with Bossuet, at the personal solicitation of the former, a council of Greek bishops reiterated their constant and unvarying belief in the doctrine of purgatory. On this head the doctrine of the Greek church is beyond the pale of contention. And ye, too, unmannerly Greeks!

In THE EXAMINER of 4th December the proofs relative to the canonicity of Machabees were concisely and forcibly presented. They remain unanswered; yet at this late day the gentleman who "can clear a gap of two (weeks, and more) at a bound and leave us to admire his agility," comes smilingly to the front and demands the solution of some new problems, else will he take "snap judgment" and assume to himself

THE HONORS OF POLEMICAL KNIGHTHOOD.

Now, as for the Eastern or Greek church that never received the apocryphal books, etc: is he aiming to snatch the Apocalypse also from from canonical Scripture, for that book has been doubted as well as Machabees? Did Laodicea reject Machabees? it also rejected the Apocalypse, and Luther likewise doubted the authenticity of this admittedly canonical book. So if our champion is desirous of expurgating a book from canonical Scripture on account of the doubt attaching to it—in accordance with his own pet canon—let him go bravely ahead with the work, and not leave off until he has made a clean and thorough job of it. Some of the best portions of Scripture, in that event, would experience very rough treatment at the hands of our vandal logician. The Greek church did and does receive Machabees. It condemned the Calvinists for rejecting books from the Scripture, held by the Greeks canonical, by Calvinists apocryphal. Likewise did it condemn Cyril Lucar, at Jerusalem, because "he foolishly, ignorantly, or rather maliciously called them apocryphal." The 14th article of the Greek church declares, "that the books of Tobia, Judith, Wisdom, Ecclesiasticus, Baruch and the Machabees make part of the Holy Scripture." The Greek Bible in common use in that church

HAS ALWAYS CONTAINED THESE BOOKS,

as they are found in the Latin vulgate. Indeed, it was from the Greek Bible that the Latin Vulgate took them. Such, in the regard of Machabees, has been the belief of the Greeks from the earliest times. Taking it for granted that the Greeks understand their own religion, we pass on. Earlier in the discussion we stated, without fear of intelligent contradiction, that the Jews did not deny the inspiration of Machabees. They formally omitted to declare in favor of their inspiration, and that is as far as they went. When Esdras and the Sanhedrim framed the Hebrew canon, some of the "apocryphal" books—Machabees included—had not then been written. Yet inspired writers unquestionably flourished after the time of Esdras—the authors of the New Testament beyond a doubt. Josephus, the eminent Jewish historian, we find, quotes approvingly from the Hebrew apocrypha; occasionally it is cited in the Rabbinical writings, and the Hellenist Jews received the deuterocanonical, or so-called apocryphal, books as well as the oth parts of Scripture. It is certain that the Hebraic apocrypha was

HELD DESERVEDLY IN HIGH ESTEEM

by the Jewish people. Origen says the church honored Machabees as divine; Jerome termed them divine, prophetic, and the Protestant author of the "Scholastic History of the Canon" admits that "the ancient fathers have often cited these controverted books as divine Scriptures and prophetical writings." Nor need we to be informed that prophecy and things divine are of the supernatural order. Augustine's estimate of Machabees is well known and, together with other relevant information, may be perused in our EXAMINER article of 4th Dec. Jerome's "preface and canon" meant to convey the impression that he was not prepared to assume the office and discharge the functions of a general council in settling the canonicalness of any portion of the Scriptures. He had first-rate good sense, and left that topic for the consideration of the church. He knew that the Christian church regarded Machabees as inspired, although they might not be employed to "establish any doctrine," until declared canonical by competent authority. In his "preface," etc., Jerome had reference to this fact—no more, no less. Neither as was it decreed at Trent concerning Machabees "on the 8th of April, 1545"; since, at the time specified, the session of the council which had to do in particular with Machabees had not any existence. When the fourth session occurred, however, the ancient Latin vulgate edition of the Bible—an edition venerable by a general usage of, at least, twelve centuries, and incorporating the very best labors of the illustrious doctor Jerome was most fittingly and advisedly pronounced canonical. Earlier by 14 centuries, the third council of Carthage had promulgated the exact canon subsequently sanctioned at Trent. Protracted through a period of 18 years, the work of Trent was ably, deliberately and thoroughly performed. And, at the termination of the Council, two hundred and fifty-five fathers subscribed to its several decrees, which, in turn, were properly approved by the executive head of the church.

No wise intimidated, our irrepressible knight is still praying valiantly for souls in hell and heaven. But in respect of those imprisoned in a middle state—for whom alone his hearty supplications would be either reasonable or serviceable—he is invincibly repugnant. As Augustine is his particular favorite, let him and learn better manners. In his Enchiridion, c. 110, Augustine observes, that "There is a life so good as not to require them (prayer and sacrifice); another so wicked that, after death, it can receive no benefit from them. When therefore the sacrifice of the altar, or alms, are offered for all Christians, for the very good they are thanksgivings: they are propitiations for those who are not very bad." Renaudot, who has been produced on the other side, in his collection of ancient Christian liturgies, supplies additional evidence in support of purgatory and prayer for the dead. In the liturgy of Chrysostom, p. 78, the Lord is besought to remove the soul of N. deceased "into a place of light, from which grief and lamentation are far removed." In the Alexandrian liturgy of St. Basil, pp. 72, 73, the Lord is petitioned, in regard of the faithful departed, to "grant repose in that place, and vouchsafe to transfer them to the kingdom of heaven." It is a waste of time to produce further testimony touching this subject.

TAKE A LESSON FROM THAT FATHER

"Turn to his Breviary"? Not much. Haven't any such book; never owned one; not intended

FOR THE UNTUTORED LAYMAN.

Has our learned monitor a "Breviary"? Let him peruse it intelligently; it will do him no harm, and may, possibly, broaden the scope of his contracted intellect. Likely enough he is something more than a mere layman; yet his magisterial familiarity with facts ecclesiastical, as they are not, together with a clever facility of preaching against time a propos de bottes, leaves the matter somewhat conjectural. But, be that as it may, we agree with him in the estimate put upon Jerome, who also taught the doctrine of a middle state—ad. Jovin i, lib. 1, p. 538. And, too, Dr. Pusey and Jeremy Taylor, whom "he has run out seemingly in his favor," will teach him the existence of an intermediate state. Space forbids further extension of the article. Meanwhile, let him possess his soul in patience, as the good book inculcates (Luke xxi-19) and his "can discover nothing" problem, in our next, will be essayed minus glove or timorous apprehension.

KEENE.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

"This world is all a fleeting show,"
And it's just the same with the beautiful snow,
It's late to come, and early to go;
So good-by to the fun and the sleighing.

The year is done—so is the skating for the present. It might be November, the atmosphere is so variable. Surely a woman must be ordering affairs in the office of the clerk of the weather.

Our Presbyterian Church is taking a rest. Mechanics all gone for their Christmas holidays. It seems a pity to waste all this warm air, that was so essential to the completion of the spire. But so it is in this world; life is full of wasted opportunities. They should have heard the Rev. Mr. Andrews' wonderful sermon last Sabbath, on "Redeeming the time, because the days are evil;" it might have taught them to work high while the sun shines.

There were glad home-comings on Xmas day. Conspicuous among the many was the gathering of the clan McNeil, who assembled in great numbers to do honor to an aged and beloved relative, who has long brightened their lives with her cheerful, kindly presence and earnest piety. Long may she live, even to the century's close.

The township was well represented at the nomination. The former Reeve Mr. Lang, and the Deputy Reeve Mr. Steward, were elected by acclamation. Some new material is likely to be introduced into the council, Messrs J. Dinsdale and Thos. Thompson being nominated, in addition to the old members, both good and true men. No fault could be found with last year's men in any way, but human nature craves always something new, even at the risk of setting aside what was equally valuable and useful. The old members are Mr. Grady, Mr. Anderson and Mr. Jas. Wood, and it will be hard to improve on the selection.

The Way It Happens.

For the same reason that a horse when overworked, or a man, either, moves more and more slowly, so also do the liver and other great organs when overtaxed, grow slower in action and work abnormally. Liver disease inevitably leads to constipation, and constipation is the beginning of the decay of the physical system. Dr. Pierce's "Pleasant Purgative Pellets" are peculiarly adapted to the treatment of this ailment. Although gentle and easy in their effects, their powerful alterative properties give tone and energy to the whole digestive system, and in curing the constipated habit, insures perfect comfort and convenience.

M. Sheehan, of Oscoda, Mich., writes: "I have used Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil on horses for different diseases, and found it to be just as you recommended. It has done justice to me every time, and it is the best Oil for horses I have ever used." Observe that the name "Dr. Thomas' Eclectric Oil" is on front of the wrapper, as there are imitations of it.

The Arch Fiend of Nations.

Awake, ye drunkards, and weep and howl, all ye drinkers of wine. Joel, i, 5.

Noah did the best and the worst thing for the world. He built an ark against the deluge of water, but introduced a deluge against which the human race has ever since been trying to build an ark—the deluge of drunkenness. In the opening chapters of the Bible we hear his staggering step. Shem and Japhet tried to cover up the disgrace, but there he is, drunk on wine at a time in the history of the world when, to say the least, there was no lack of water. Inebriation having entered, it has not retreated. Abigail, the fair and heroic wife who saved the flocks of Nabal, her husband, from confiscation by invaders, goes home at night and finds him so intoxicated she cannot tell him the story of his narrow escape. Uriah came to see David and David got him drunk and paved the way for the despoliation of a household. Even the church bishops needed to be charged to be sober and not given to too much wine, and so familiar were the people of Bible times with the staggering and falling motion of the inebriate, that Isaiah, when he comes to describe the final dislocation of the world, says: "The earth shall reel to and fro like a drunkard." Ever since apples and grapes and wheat grew, the world has been tempted to unhealthful stimulants. But the intoxicants of the olden time were an innocent beverage, a harmless orangeade, a quiet syrup, a peaceful soda water as compared with the liquids of modern inebriation, into which a madness, and a fury, and a gloom, and a fire, and a suicide, and a retributation have mixed and mingled. Fermentation was always known, but it was not until a thousand years after Christ that distillation was invented. While we must confess that some of the ancient arts have been lost, the Christian era is superior to all others in the bad eminence of whiskey and rum and gin. The modern drunk is a hundredfold worse than the ancient drunk. Noah in his intoxication became imbecile, but the victims of modern alcoholism have to struggle with whole menageries of wild beasts and jungles of hissing serpents, and perditions of blaspheming demons. An archfiend arrived in our world, and he built an invisible caldron of temptation. He built that caldron strong and stout for all ages and nations. First, he squeezed into the caldron the juices of the forbidden fruit of Paradise. Then he gathered for it a distillation from the harvest fields and the orchards of the hemespheres. Then he poured into this caldron capsicium, and copperas, and logwood, and deadly nightshade, and assault and battery, and vitriol, and opium, and rum, and murder, and sulphuric acid, and theft, and potash, and cochineal, and red carrots, and poverty, and death, and hops. But it was a dry compound, and it must be liquefied, and so the arch-fiend poured into that caldron the tears of centuries, of orphanage and widowhood, and he poured in the blood of twenty thousand assassinations. And then the arch-fiend took a shovel that he had brought up from the furnace beneath, and he put that shovel into this great caldron and began to stir, and the caldron began to heave and rock, and boil and splutter, and hiss and smoke, and the nations gathered round it with cups and tankards and demijohns and kegs, and there was enough for all, and the arch-fiend cried, "Aha! Champion fiend am I. Who has done more than I have for coffins and graveyards and prisons and insane asylums and the populating of the lost world? And when the caldron is emptied I'll fill it again, and I'll stir it again, and it will smoke again and that smoke will join another smoke, the smoke of a torment that ascendeth forever and ever.

Drunkenness is the greatest evil of this nation, and it takes no logical process to prove to this audience that a drunken nation cannot long be a free nation. So I go on in this brief series of Sabbath morning discourses, showing you the perils that threaten the destruction of American institutions. I had not time to conclude these subjects last Sabbath morning, and I shall go on this Sabbath morning and the following, at least, discussing these subjects. I call your attention to the fact that drunkenness is not subsiding, certainly that it is not a standstill, but that it is on an onward march, and it is a double-quick. Beginning near by, I have seen more drunken people in Brooklyn and in New York in the last six weeks than in any two years of my life, and so have you, if you have been passing up and down these streets much. There is more rum swallowed in this country, and of a worse kind, than was ever swallowed since the first distillery began its work of death. Where there was one drunken home there are ten drunken homes. Where there was one drunkard's grave there are twenty drunkard's graves. According to United States Government figures, in 1840 there were 23,000,000 gallons of beer sold. Last year there were 551,000,000 gallons. According to the Government figures, in the year 1840 there were 5,000,000 gallons of wine sold. Last year there were 25,000,000 gallons of wine. If I could gather all the armies of the dead drunkards and have them come to resurrection, and then add to that host all the armies of living drunkards, five or ten abreast, and then if I could have you mount a horse and ride along that line for review, you would ride that horse until he dropped from exhaustion, and you would mount another horse and ride until he fell from exhaustion, and you would take another and another and you would ride along hour after hour and day after day. Great host, in the regiments, in the brigades; great armies of them, and then if you had voice enough Stentorian to make them all hear, and could give the command, "forward march," their first tramp would make the earth tremble. I do not care which way you look in the community to-day, the evil is increasing. I call your attention to the fact that there are thousands of people here with a thirst for strong drink—a fact too often ignored. Along some ancestral lines there runs the river of temptation. There are children whose swaddling clothes are torn off the shroud of death. Many a father has made a will of this sort: "In the name of God, amen. I bequeath to my children my house and lands and estate, share and share all alike. Hitherto I affix my hand and seal in the presence of witnesses." And yet, perhaps, that every man has made another will that the people have never read and that has not been proved in the courts. That will, put in writing, would read something like this: "In the name of disease and appetite and death, amen. I bequeath to my children my evil habits, my taskards shall be theirs, my wine-cup shall be theirs, my destroyed reputation shall be theirs. Share and share all alike shall they in the infamy. Hereto I affix my hand and seal in the presence of all the applauding harpies of hell." From the multitude of those who have the evil habit born with them, this army is being inaugurated. And I am sorry to say that a great many of the druggists are abetting this evil, and alcohol is sold under the name of bitters. It is bitters for this, bitters for that and bitters for some other thing, and good men deceived, not knowing there is any thraldom of alcoholism coming from that source, are going down, and some day a man sits with the bottle of black bitters on his table, and the cork flies out and after it flies a fiend and clutches the man by the throat, and says: "Aha! I have been after you for ten years. I have got you now. Down with you, down with you!" Bitters! Ah, yes. They make a man's family bitter, and his home bitter; and his disposition bitter, and his death bitter, and his hell bitter. Bitter! A vast army all the time increasing. And let me also say that it is as thoroughly organized as any army, with commander in-chief, staff officers, infantry, cavalry, batteries, gunships and flaming ensigns, and that every candidate for office in America will yet have to pronounce himself the friend or foe of the liquor traffic. I have in my possession a circular of a brewer's association, a circular sent to all candidates for office—it has been sent or will be sent—and a form to be filled saying whether the candidate is a friend of the liquor traffic or its enemy, and if he is an enemy of the business then the man is doomed, or if he declines to fill up the circular and send it back, his silence is taken as a negative answer. It seems to me it is about time for the 19,000,000 professors of religion in America to take sides. It is going to be an out and out battle between drunkenness and sobriety, between heaven and hell, between God and the devil. Take sides before there is any further national decadence; take sides before your sons are sacrificed and the new home of your daughter goes down under the alcoholism of an embruted husband. Take sides while your voice, your pen, your prayer, your vote, may have any influence in arresting the despoliation of this nation. If the 19,000,000 professors of religion should take sides on this subject, it would not be very long before the destiny of this nation would be decided in the right direction. Certainly sermons setting forth the perils that threaten the destruction of our American institutions would be a very poorly planned course of sermons if they did not speak of drunkenness. Is it a State evil, or is it a national evil? Does it belong to the North, or does it belong to the South? Does it belong to the East, or does it belong to the West? Ah! there is not an American river into which its tears have not fallen and into which its suicides have not plunged. To prove that this is a national evil I call up three States in opposite directions—Maine, Iowa and Georgia. Let them testify in regard to this. State of Maine says: "It is so great an evil up here that we have anathematized it as a State." State of Iowa says: "It is so great an evil out here we have prohibited it by constitutional amendment." State of Georgia says: "It is so great an evil down here that nineteen counties of the State have made the sale of intoxicating drink a criminality." So the word comes up from all sources, and it is going to be a Waterloo, and I want you to know on what side I am going to be when that Waterloo is fully come, and I want you to be on the right side. Either drunkenness will be destroyed in the country, or the American Government will be destroyed. Drunkenness and free institutions are coming into a death-grapple. And how many mothers there are waiting to see if this national curse cannot lift. Oh, is that the boy who had the honest breath who comes home with breath vitiated or disguised? Oh, what a change! How quickly those habits of early coming home have been exchanged for the rattling of the night-key in the door long after the last watchman has gone by and tried to see that everything was closed up for the night. Oh, what a change for that young man; who we had hoped would do something in merchandise, or in artisanship, or in a profession that would do honor to the family name long after mother's wrinkled hands are folded from the last toil. All that exchanged for a startled look when the door-bells ring, lest something has happened, and the wish that the scarlet fever twenty years ago had been fatal, for then he would have gone directly to the bosom of his Saviour. But alas! poor old soul, she has lived to experience what Solomon said: "A foolish son is the heaviness of his mother." Oh, what a funeral it will be when that boy is brought home dead, and mother will sit there and say: "Is this the boy that I used to fondle and that I walked the floor with at night when he was sick? Is this the boy that I held to the baptismal font for baptism? Is this the boy for whom I toiled until the blood burst from the tips of my fingers that he might have a good start and a good home? Lord, why hast thou let me live to see this? Can it be that these swollen hands are the ones that used to wander over my face when rocking him to sleep? Can it be that this is the swollen brow that I once so rapturously kissed? Poor boy! How tired he does look. I wonder who struck him that blow across the temple. I wonder if he uttered a dying prayer. Wake up, my son. Don't you hear me? Wake up. Oh, he can't hear me. Dead, dead, dead! "Oh, Absalom, my son, my son, would to God that I had died for thee! Oh, Absalom, my son, my son!" I am not much of a mathematician and I cannot estimate it; but is there any one here quick enough at figures to estimate how many mothers there are waiting for something to be done? Aye, there are many wives waiting for domestic rescue. He promised something different from that when, after the long acquaintance and the careful security of character, the heart and the hand were offered and accepted. What hell on earth a woman lives in who has a drunken husband! Oh, death, how lovely thou art to her, and how soft and warm thy skeleton hand. The sepulchre at midnight is a king's drawing-room compared with that woman's home. It is not so much the blow on the head that hurts as the blow at the heart. The rum fiend came to the door of that beautiful home and opened the door and stood there and said: "I curse this dwelling with an unrelenting curse. I curse that father into a maniac. I curse that mother into a pauper. I curse these sons into vagabonds. I curse these daughters into prodigacy. Cursed be bread-tray and cradle. Cursed be couch and chair and family Bible with record of marriages and births and deaths. Curse upon curse." Oh, how many wives are there waiting to see if something cannot be done to shake these frosts of the second death from the orange blossoms. Yes, God is waiting, the God who works through human instrumentalities, waiting to see whether this nation is going to overthrow this evil, and if it refuse to do so God will wipe out the nation as he did Phœnicia, as he did Rome, as he did Thebes, as he did Babylon. Aye, he is waiting to see what the church of God will do. If the church does not do its work, then He will wipe it out as he did the church of Ephesus, church of Thyatira, church of Sardis. The Protestant and Roman Catholic churches to-day stand side by side with an impotent look, gazing on this evil which costs their country more than one billion dollars a year to take care of the 900,000 paupers and the 315,000 criminals and 30,000 idiots, and to bury the 75,000 drunkards. Protagoras boasted that out of the sixty years of his life, forty years he had spent in ruining youth; but the arch-fiend of the nations will make the most infamous boast that all its life has been spent in ruining the bodies, minds and souls of the human race.

The church of God is the grandest and most glorious institution on earth. What has it in solid phalanx accomplished for the overthrow of drunkenness? Have its forces ever been marshalled? No, not in this direction. Not long ago, a great ecclesiastical court assembled in New York and resolutions arraigning strong drink were offered, and clergymen with strong drink on their tables and strong drink in their cellars defeated the resolutions by threatening speeches. They could not bear to give up their own lusts. I tell this audience what many of you may never have thought of, that to-day, not in the millennium, to-day that church holds the balance of power in America, and if Christian people, the men and the women who profess to love the Lord Jesus Christ and to love purity and to be the sworn enemies of all uncleanness and debauchery and sin—if all such would march side by side and shoulder to shoulder, this evil would soon be overthrown. Think of 300,000 churches and Sunday schools in Christendom marching shoulder to shoulder! How very short a time it would take them to put down this evil if all the churches of God, transatlantic and cisatlantic, were aroused on this subject. Young men of America, pass over into the army of teetotalism. Whisky, good to preserve corpses, ought never to turn you into a corpse. Tens of thousands of young men have been dragged out of respectability, and out of purity, and out of good character, and into drunkenness by this infernal stuff called drink. Do not touch it. Do not touch it. Is it not time for me to pull out from the great organ of God's Word with many banks of keys this tremolo stop, "Look not upon the wine when it is red, when it moveth itself aright, when it giveth its color in the cup, for at the last it biteth like a serpent and stingeth like an adder?" Aye, is it not time for me to pull on the trumpet stop of the text? "Awake, ye drunkards, and weep and howl, all ye drinkers of wine."

Woman's Suffering and Relief.

Those languid, tiresome sensations, causing you to feel scarcely able to be on your feet; that constant drain that is taking from your system all its former elasticity; driving the bloom from your cheeks; that continual strain upon your vital forces, rendering you irritable and fretful, can easily be removed by the use of that marvelous remedy, Hop Bitters. Irregularities and obstructions of your system are relieved at once, while the special cause of periodical pain are permanently removed. None receive so much benefit, and none are so profoundly grateful, and show such an interest in recommending Hop Bitters as women.

Catarrh—A New Treatment.

Perhaps the most extraordinary success that has been achieved in modern medicine has been attained by the Dixon treatment for Catarrh. Out of 2,000 patients treated during the past six months, fully ninety per cent. have been cured of this stubborn malady. This is none the less startling when it is remembered that not five per cent. of patients presenting themselves to the regular practitioner are benefitted, while the patent medicines and other advertised cures never record a cure at all. Starting with the claim now generally believed by the most scientific men that the disease is due to the presence of living parasites in the tissue, Mr. Dixon at once adapted his cure to their extermination—this accomplished, he claims the Catarrh is practically cured, and the permanency is unquestioned, as cures effected by him four years ago are cures still. No one else has ever attempted to cure Catarrh in this manner, and no other treatment has ever cured Catarrh. The application of the remedy is simple, and can be done at home, and the present season of the year is the most favourable for a speedy and permanent cure, the majority of cases being cured at one treatment. Sufferers should correspond with Messrs. A. H. DIXON & SON, 305 King street west, Toronto, Canada, and enclose stamp for their treatise on Catarrh.—Montreal Star, Nov. 17, 1882. 48-52t

Consumption Cured.

An old physician, retired from practice, having had placed in his hands by an East India missionary the formula of a simple vegetable remedy for the speedy and permanent cure of Consumption, Bronchitis, Catarrh, Asthma, and all throat and Lung affections, also a positive and radical cure for Nervous debility and all Nervous Complaints, after having tested its wonderful curative powers in thousands of cases, has felt it his duty to make it known to his suffering fellows. Actuated by this motive and a desire to relieve human suffering, I will send free of charge, to all who desire it, this receipt, in German, French or English, with full directions for preparing and using. Sent by mail by addressing with stamp, naming this paper, W. A. Noyes, 149 Power's Block, Rochester, N. Y. 45-26-eow.

Itching Piles Symptoms and Cure.

The symptoms are moisture, like perspiration, intense itching, increased by scratching very distressing, particularly at night, seems as if pin-worms were crawling in and about the rectum; the private parts are sometimes affected. Advice to Mothers.

Are you disturbed at night and broken of your rest by a sick child suffering and crying with pain of cutting teeth? If so, send at once and get a bottle of MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP FOR CHILDREN TEETHING. Its value is incalculable. It will relieve the poor little sufferer immediately. Depend upon it, mothers, there is no mistake about it. It cures dysentry and diarrhœa, regulates the stomach and bowels, cures wind colic, softens the gums, reduces inflammation, and gives tone and energy to the whole system. MRS. WINSLOW'S SOOTHING SYRUP FOR CHILDREN TEETHING is pleasant to the taste, and is the prescription of one of the oldest and best female nurses and physicians in the United States, and is for sale by all druggists throughout the world. Notice is Hereby Given, in pursuance of Sec. 34, of Chap. 107, of the Revised Statutes of Ontario, that all creditors and persons having claims against the late of the Township of Monaghan, in the County of Peterborough, who died on or about the sixteenth day of August, A.D. 1884, are hereby required to send by post, pre-paid, or to deliver to Messrs. Poussette & Roger, of the said Town of Peterborough, Solicitors for Elizabeth Ann Dobbin, the Administratrix of the estate of said deceased, on or before the thirty-first day of January, A.D. 1885, their christian and surnames, addresses and description, the full particulars of their claims, a statement of their accounts, and the nature of the securities (if any) held by them, and after the said 31st January, the said Administratrix will proceed to administer the estate and distribute the assets of the said William Fowler Dobbin, amongst the parties entitled thereto, having regard only to the claims of which the said Administratrix shall then have notice, and the said Administratrix will not be liable for the said assets, or any part thereof, so distributed to any person or persons of whose claims she shall not have had notice at the time of such distribution.

Estate of William Fowler Dobbin,

POUSSETTE & ROGER,
52-5t. Solicitor for the said Administratrix.
Dated at Peterborough, 24th December, 1884.

FAIRMOUNT.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

ENTERTAINMENT.

The scholars of Fairmount School gave an entertainment on 'Xmas eve. Although the weather was anything but pleasant they had a full house and their programme was really good. At the close of the first part refreshments were passed around, which helped to "revive the inner man."

Mr. M. B. Meharry occupied the chair, and at the close Mr. Smyth was presented with a very handsome crimson plush album and dressing case, with the following address:

Mr. Smyth:

DEAR TEACHER,—Another school year, with all its duties and pleasures, has passed; our annual entertainment is almost over, and we are on the eve of the merriest time of all the year, but our pleasant anticipations are clouded when we remember that we must no more as teacher and pupils.

We are sorry that you are about to leave us. We feel by your departure we lose a friend as well as a teacher. We cannot say good-bye without thanking you for all your kindness to us, for the earnestness with which you sought to have us improve our time, and for the faithful manner in which you have discharged your duties as our teacher.

We regret that we have so often grieved you by our carelessness and lack of interest in our studies, and we have to ask you to forgive us, and to attribute it to the thoughtlessness of youth rather than the lack of appreciation of your efforts on our behalf.

Please accept this little gift as a souvenir from the pupils and friends of the Fairmount school, and with it the affectionate regards of your pupils.

Signed on behalf of the school,

EMMA McBAIN, DAVID KEYS,
HULDAH WEIR, JOSEPH SANDERSON.

December 24th, 1884.

Mr. Smythe, in replying, said he had not had sufficient practice in public speaking to express his feelings and sincere thanks for these very beautiful and valuable presents, and for the kind regards and truly affectionate feelings which they had expressed by this original and appropriate address.

While he appreciated the true value of the presents, both as regards their elegance and usefulness, still he valued more their sentiments regarding the appreciation of his services as their teacher.

He heartily forgave any annoyances that they had given him, and asked in return forgiveness for any severity on his part, for like "Goldsmith's school master," "if severe in ought, the love he bore to learning was a fault."

He regarded the termination of school associations with an impressive seriousness, but as advancement was his aim, and he hoped the aim of them all, the parting is unavoidable, yet he assured them that they would always have his deepest sympathy and best wishes.

He trusted that the services of his successor might prove as mutually satisfactory as his had, and that they (the pupils) would show him the same respect and prompt obedience they had shown him.

The scholars sang the farewell song to their teacher, which was very appropriate, and after moving a vote of thanks to the chairman, they adjourned, each one plodding his and her way home.

The annual tea social was held in Cavanville on Christmas evening with good success, realizing $64. Some that are good judges say that they had a good tea, and a very good programme, although one speaker was minus. Coming home there was some pretty fast driving done, each young man thinking he had the goer.

Mr. George McBain killed a pig the other day that dressed 490 lbs.—Next.

Andrew McNeil's Winter Underclothing is unexcelled in quality, and is now being sold at 20 per cent reduction to clear out before the season advances.

SMITH.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

At the close of the term the pupils of section No. 1 presented their teacher, Miss Wright, with a silver butter cooler, knife and album, and the following address:

DEAR TEACHER,—As our school is now near the close for the present year, we, your pupils, desire to show our appreciation of your services, so efficiently rendered, for the past two years.

We consider that your judgment has always been used to the best advantage for our benefit, and your friendly and impartial manner has won for you a great deal of respect from us all.

We avail ourselves of the opportunity of presenting you with this butter cooler, knife and album, hoping you will accept them as a token of our good wishes.

We now look forward to the coming year with pleasure, expecting that you will be with us.

We hope that the Christmas holidays may prove a source of personal enjoyment, and that you may return with renewed vigor, to the duties of the approaching season.

Yours sincerely,
The pupils of the 2nd line school.

Miss Wright made a suitable and graceful reply.

CHRISTMAS FESTIVAL.

The C. M. Sunday School gave an Xmas entertainment in the P. C. A. Hall to a crowded house. Singing, recitations and dialogues were the order of the evening. Oranges from a tree heavily laden were distributed to the pupils at the close. A most enjoyable and pleasant evening was spent.

NOMINATIONS.

Nomination of Councillors and Reeve took place on Monday. For Reeve, Messrs. R. C. Strickland and J. Hull; for Councillors, Messrs. John H. McWilliams, William Cox, J. Moore, J. Richardson, sr., Wm. Leonard, T. J. Nelson, A. J. Wright, John Isbister and H. E. Wynne. Dr. Bell was appointed chairman, and Messrs. Strickland, Hull and others addressed the electors.

DUMMER.

On Monday, Dec. 22nd, Mr. Bennett Scott, of Norwood, who has been teaching the South Dummer school for a number of years, was presented with a handsome writing desk and the following address:—

DEAR TEACHER,—We in behalf of the school desire to read you this short address in order to show our gratitude for the general interest you have manifested in our mental welfare. During the two years of your labor amongst us, we realize that you have been a very faithful and diligent teacher. We cannot help feeling sad when we think of our separation; but we recall with pleasure the many pleasant hours we have spent together as teacher and pupils. We ask you to accept this writing desk as a slight token of esteem, and in conclusion wish you a merry Christmas and a happy New Year. Signed in behalf of school,

NELLIE STEPHENSON,
N. McMILLAN.

Mr. Scott, who was completely taken by surprise, made a suitable reply.

On the same day the scholars of S. S. No. 2, Dummer, presented their teacher, Mr. A. Scott, with a purse and two handsomely bound volumes of Goldsmith's and Tennyson's works, and the following address:—

MR. ARTHUR S. SCOTT,—We, the scholars of your school, desire to express our esteem for you, both as a teacher and a friend. As you are about to leave the school, we take this opportunity of thanking you for the interest taken in our welfare during the two years in which you have been our teacher. We wish you every success in the future. Please accept these books and purse as a token of our esteem for you. Signed in behalf of the school by

MAGGIE HOWSON,
THERESA E. WIGMORE,
FRANK McMILLAN,
ANDREW NICOLL.

Mr. Scott replied in appropriate language.

Remnants of Flannel, Remnants of Ticking, Remnants of Cretanne, Remnants of Cotton Goods, at prices you will be pleased to buy them at, now being offered at Turnbull's.

HARVEY.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

The Harvey Council met at the Clerk's office on the 22nd December, 1884; members all present.

Minutes of last meeting read and confirmed.

A large number of accounts was ordered to be paid.

[Owing to pressure on our space we are compelled to omit details of the accounts, which numbered about thirty.]

A resolution was passed authorizing William Trennum to cut and remove all the timber on road allowance, commencing at Burton's Bay, between lots 15 and 16, thence east to concession line between concessions 9 and 10, thence north to the centre of lot 18, as compensation for clearing the said road 66 feet wide and grubbing out twelve feet wide in the centre thereof, Thomas Flynn to inspect the job and report when completed.

On motion the Council adjourned.

BRIDGENORTH.

(From Our Own Correspondent.)

A social assembly was held in the Town Hall, Bridgenorth, on Christmas Eve, and was a very enjoyable hop. The music was provided by Prof. Doucet, of Peterborough, and the spread, laid by Mr. L. Fobert, did great credit to his abilities as a caterer. The committee are to be congratulated on the success which attended their first efforts. We hope soon to have the pleasure of attending another. So, boys, do not allow the winter to pass without a second.

THEN AND NOW.

The year 1884 has witnessed great improvements in the means of communication between the old world and the new. A new Atlantic cable has just been completed, and the rate for cabling has been cut down to forty cents a word for ordinary messages. In 1866 the rate was $100 for twenty words. Then the rate of travel has been materially improved. To-day a vessel crosses the Atlantic in six days and seven hours.

Time is Money.

Time and money will be saved by keeping Kidney-Wort in the house. It is an invaluable remedy for all disorders of the Kidneys, Liver and Bowels, and for all diseases arising from obstructions of these organs. It has cured many obstinate cases after hundreds of dollars had been paid to physicians without obtaining relief. It cures Constipation, Piles, Biliousness and all kindred disorders. Keep it by you.

PASTORAL ON FREEMASONRY.

The Archbishop of Paris has issued a pastoral to his clergy, which contains a very bitter denunciation of Freemasonry, declaring it to be subversive of the well-being of the church and of society, and contrary to the law of God. He appends the strictures of the Vatican on the same subject.

THE POPULAR CARRIAGE BUILDERS.

While thanking the public for the liberal patronage extended to us since commencing business, we beg to inform the inhabitants of Peterborough and vicinity that we have now on hand for the winter season the most superb stock of elegant Sleighs and Cutters ever turned out in the Midland District. In excellence of material and workmanship, tasty upholstering and beauty of finish, they cannot be surpassed, and hardly equalled, in any city or town in Canada. None but the best and well-seasoned material is used, first-class workmen are only employed, and in purchasing our Sleighs or Cutters the customer will not only secure a thoroughly first-class article, but will find the prices most reasonable.

CARRIAGE TOPS.

To make our establishment complete, which was before the best equipped in the Midland District, we have added to it the manufacture of Carriage Tops, and for this purpose have associated with the present firm, in this department, MR A. GIBSON, who has especially fitted himself for the business by his experience in the leading top factories of the Dominion, and all work will be turned out under his personal supervision. Our premises have been specially fitted up for this business, and we make it a principle to use only the very best material. For Bows only Second-Growth White Ash is used, the Rails and Joints are made of the Best Wrought and Swede Iron, while only the very best American Rubber is used for the covers. These Tops combine the latest improvements, and will be found equal to the best, either for strength or durability, style or finish.

OUR HORSE-SHOEING, JOBBING, REPAIRING AND BLACKSMITHING DEPARTMENT

is especially complete. In prompt fulfilment of orders, and Good, Strong, Neat Work, perfect satisfaction is guaranteed. Our Horse-shoer has had a large experience in the best shops, and Tender-Footed Horses will be carefully treated and ultimately cured by having them shod with us.

Good and Stylish Work, at Right Prices, and Square Dealing is our motto.

Our work is its own praise and reward. We have turned out this season over 100 Wheeled Rigs, and all are giving the best of satisfaction and speak for themselves.

It will be to your own interest to visit our shops when you want to buy anything in our line.

Wishing all our customers and friends "A Merry 'Xmas and a Happy New Year."

PETERBOROUGH, JAN. 1, 1885.

A Happy New Year.

With this issue of THE EXAMINER we enter upon the New Year, and right heartily do we wish that advancing days and weeks may bring our readers happiness and prosperity.

On such a day as this we, as travellers, stand upon a mountain top, surveying the route we have passed, and gazing onward into the dim and distant future. All is mystery before us. We know not what may be on the morrow. The scroll of time is crowded with events and circumstances; it is written within and without. But it is sealed with seven seals, and no human hand can break them. Doubtless we must expect anxiety and sorrow in the coming year, but we trust that these may be as passing clouds in a bright day to all who read these lines. Naturally, the end of the old and the beginning of the new year brings with it more or less solemn thoughts and reflections. We cannot help associating gravity and solemnity with the year's close. The completion of a year touches, so to speak, every age and every circumstance of human life, knitting together humanity in the one thought of the onward movement and advance of Time. Retrospect is always sad and mournful. For man, whose days are "few and evil," with his restrained opportunities, his narrow boundary and horizon of sight, a year is, in truth, a deep reality, not to be despised and lightly esteemed. Not to be thought of, even, without minds attuned to its serious contemplation.

The old year has borne away its record, and it is now numbered with the irrevocable past. In our Dominion a fair measure of advancement and growth has characterized the past twelve months. But the indications are that times will not be quite so good in business circles in 1885. Depression and low prices seem pretty general just at present. The country, of course, has not suffered greatly as yet, and one cannot tell how soon the boom of good prices and brisk sales may make its appearance. At any rate we have reason to be thankful that affairs are no worse, that the past year's prosperity has been even what it was, and so we may courageously face the future, if we do so hopefully and with an earnest desire to make the best of things as they are.

The old year has, as usual, produced many vacancies in the ranks of suffering humanity. The mortality, indeed, in our own town and county has been rather excessive. Many a home has been entered by the dread visitant, and to-day grief and sorrow fill many a sad heart. The true Christian, however, sorrows not as those without hope. Though the familiar and beloved faces are gone, yet to him they are "not lost, but gone before." Without this blessed prospect of a life beyond, without the hope of reunion in that golden city whose builder and maker is God, truly we would be of all men most miserable. But this can stimulate us to action, can supply us with the highest motives for faithfully fulfilling our duty, and can lead us to say, "My times are in Thy hand." With these and similar aspirations let us go forward hopefully and cheerily to meet the bright New Year which now dawns upon our pathway.

But, in this our New Year's greeting, we must not overlook the kindness of our numerous friends and supporters. To do so, indeed, were base and cruel. We owe them sincere gratitude and hearty thanks, and here we gladly acknowledge the debt. It is largely owing to their efforts that we can say to day, during the past year THE EXAMINER has made steady and well sustained progress; its circulation has much increased; its influence has extended; it is in truth a very welcome and acceptable visitor in hundreds of homes. Sincerely we tender our best thanks to our numerous patrons for their liberal support, and, in soliciting the continuance of their generous assistance, we promise that no time, effort or expense shall be wanting to serve our advertisers and subscribers to the utmost of our ability, and to make THE EXAMINER the best and most widely circulated paper in the Midland District, if not in the Province of Ontario.

With our very best wishes for the welfare and happiness of all the readers of THE EXAMINER, and in the hope that the future may be prolific to them of peace and prosperity, we cordially wish all our friends and patrons

A HAPPY NEW YEAR!

A fine range of heavy Cottonades, just received at Turnbull's.

The Mayoralty.

The town of Peterborough is much to be congratulated on its securing the services of Mr. Geo. A. Cox as mayor for the ensuing year.

The ratepayers have shown their good sense by electing him to the position by acclamation. There is no man in the town of Peterborough who will suffer more by any mistakes in the management of her affairs, and what we require at the present time, is the strictest economy consistent with a progressive policy. The town is rapidly increasing to a city, and we must have safe men at the helm.

We congratulate Mr. Cox on being elected again by acclamation, which is a sufficient guarantee that the ratepayers have every confidence in his integrity and ability to fill the position.

Received this week at Turnbull's, a choice lot of Scotch, Irish and Canadian Tweeds. Parties buying suits are well pleased with the price and delighted with the fit.

One of the Results.

All who looked below the surface of the disgraceful bribery conspiracy, having for its object the overthrow of the Mowat administration, could not help being convinced that the four parties directly and personally implicated were only the figure heads of a conspiracy of more inclusive composition. There was a great deal of evidence that went to show that the Tory party as a party, was intimately mixed up with those unsavory proceedings. But the tracks were so skilfully covered that so far, no directly conclusive evidence of its complicity has been furnished. To the unprejudiced mind, however, nothing can be more convincing than the official sanction and endorsation given the bribery conspiracy at the late Sir John convention. The result of the resolution adopted, was to father the conspiracy on the Conservative party, which, as a whole will not, we fancy, be overjoyed at the honour. The means employed to oust a Reform administration were justified, and official sanction given to organised bribery as a legitimate political weapon. It is to be gravely doubted if one tenth of the Conservatives of Canada, believe that an attempt was entered into by the Mowat administration to entrap the Opposition and others into an attempt to bribe certain members. That would be asking too much. Completely exonerating the bribery trio, as this does, leaves it to be inferred that the party endorses their methods. Monstrous as this appears, it is only in accord with the past policy and record of the head of the party. If the baser elements of the Conservative party, as represented at the convention, largely consisting of placemen and place seekers, act thus; it is pleasant to believe that the vast mass of respectable Conservatives will decline the honor of sharing the guilt of the members of the most audacious bribery conspiracy ever concocted.

A WORD TO THE RATEPAYERS.

To the Editor of THE EXAMINER:

Some people in this town are making a wonderful uproar about Spaulding's Bay and the sewerage of Peterborough, and about the water works and all that sort of thing; and, then, as if all these things were not enough to terrify us, they threaten us with Asiatic cholera. All this is done, of course, in a most disinterested and patriotic spirit.

Now, as an old resident of Peterborough, I think the young fry are a good deal too fast.

We live in an age of reckless extravagance; our taxes are increasing every year, and they will continue to increase till the town is ruined, unless ratepayers make a united effort to check extravagance in municipal matters and to stamp out wire-pulling and jobbery of every description. I have been asking the settlers around Spaulding's Bay about all the fevers and malaria that we hear so much clatter about, and they tell me that there is hardly any sickness of any kind about the Bay. According to the opinion of the people who reside there, it appears to be the healthiest part of the town; for we often hear of the ravages of fevers in other parts of Peterborough, while there is no sickness at the Bay, except what is manufactured in the over-heated imagination of the Board of Health, and the very accommodating medical correspondents who write on that subject.

Now, with regard to the water works, I am of opinion they may be all right enough to extinguish a fire, or rather to throw water around after the house is burned down, just to show that everything is in good working order, but I am quite certain I shall never fancy river water for domestic use. I have been told that one drop of that water contains sixteen living animals! Now, suppose an Irishman, the next morning after a dance or a christenin', should feel thirsty, and should drink a pint of such water, he would then have more than fifty thousand animalcules dancing a hornpipe in his crop. It is well known that river water is impure from various sources. For instance, sewage, dead animals, of various kinds, all tend to make the water undesirable for family use. They say the filter will separate all these impurities from the water, but how am I to know that the filter is all the time in good repair, or properly constructed? At any rate, the thought of the impurities I have named is not very comforting to a sensitive palate. And, now, before closing this short epistle, let us bid our retiring Council good-bye, with compliments of the season. And while we are willing to give them hearty thanks for all the good measures they have advocated during the current year, we hope they will excuse us if we should make bold enough to point out one or two instances in which they were guilty of downright waste of the people's money. And here let us notice that a short time after the Council took office, they appointed themselves a delegation to Ottawa, at the people's expense, of course. They named a certain number who would go for sure, and the resolution contained a liberal clause, intimating that others might be added to the happy number already named.

Well, the result was that any fellow who was out of a job and stood in well with the Council, could wash his face and join the delegation. A large, assorted crowd went to the Capital. They read a paper at the Minister of Public Works, anent the construction of the Trent Valley Canal, and the Minister of Public Works replied, in the usual political flap-doodle style, and the delegation was happy. I would suggest that the travelling expenses and feed for the delegation, in going to Ottawa, to open up the Trent Valley Canal, was utter waste of the people's money. Once more, we charge the Council with downright waste of the people's money when they appointed a Medical Health Officer for this town. His salary is two hundred dollars a year, and then what would all the silly, nonsensical printing cost in connection with this office? Why, last summer the fences were literally covered with sanitary placards, so that one at first sight would be led to suppose that Barnum's circus was coming, and for all this waste and humbug the ratepayers must suffer.

Let us hope that no Council will again be silly enough to appoint a Medical Health Officer in this town, because it is unnecessary in such a healthy town as ours, and because nine-tenths of the ratepayers are opposed to any such appointment.

Yours, etc,
SPAULDING'S BAY.

THE MIDDLE STATE.

"Theodore" Reviews "Laicus."

To the Editor of THE EXAMINER:

SIR,—Before noticing the later productions of Laicus, permit me again to lay before your readers the three tests which I adopted at the beginning of this correspondence, and to which I have hitherto subjected his teaching with results not very favorable to purgatory.

The first is taken from the "Abridgment of Christian Doctrine," and the second and third from the creed of Pope Pius iv, article ii and xi. They are as follows:

1 Those dying in "venial" sin go to purgatory, and those dying in mortal sin go to hell.

2 That no interpetation of Scripture is to be received unless it has got the unanimous consent of the fathers.

3 That what has been delivered, defined and declared by general councils only is to be received, "all things contrary thereto, to be condemned, rejected and anathematised."

Laicus has not been able to object to these tests, so that the reader may rely on them as manufacture. With these at hand and ready for application, I now proceed to review the letter of December 4th.

Judging from its tone, mine of the previous week had greatly disturbed the equanimity of Laicus. Lost his temper, would be a very mild judgment to record against him. Vexed at the way my three tests, taken from the Roman Laboratory had searched him and proved him wanting, and having no decent excuse to offer for the absurdity of his position, he vents his disappointment in a torrent of abuse. And when he has worked himself up into a towering passion, and utterance begins to fail him—to complete my terror, and to finish his own triumph, he shakes a bundle of suspicious looking documents in our face, and retires amid an outburst of his own music, set to a song in praise of, "Rome eternal faithful Rome."

The writer of that tirade is fit for more, and were it not that more foisted into the same letter, he should have no answer from me.

What seems particularly to have thrown him off his balance, was the short, decisive and unexpected way in which he was for purgatory. The sting particularly felt is that it was by the application of my first test—a piece of admittedly sound Roman Catholtheology that the whole mischief was done.

By referring to my letter the reader will see that the argument in the case was briefly this, all who die in mortal sin go to hell. The Jews who were slain for idolatry died in mortal sin, therefore those Jews slain went to hell.

Thus on incontrovertible Roman Catholic grounds the proof is shown to be all about mortal sinners and hell, so that purgatory is at once, effectually and for ever excluded from the case. Unable to assail either the theology or logic of the argument, and yet unwilling to accept the conclusion, Laicus tries to weaken its force by appealing to prejudice. He says derisively—"the idolatrous Jews must be pitchforked into hell fire direct, whether or no." And taking his own ground, I ask, why not? Rome has left neither him nor the Jews any choice in the matter. Rome manufactured the fork with its two tines and stamped them—one, and the other, mortal sinners to hell. And when it was made and stamped, and authorized, and got the exclusive right of territory to show souls to their respective locations, why should there be disgust—and especially from a devoted champion of the church—because the fork does its work? It is not Theodore, but the theology of Laicus that is responsible for the result. And if he is not satisfied with the location in which his own theology has placed those Jews, it is not for me to interfere, but for him to show, "positively and unequivocally," that they are not where the ought to be, and somehow get them over the fence.

VENIAL SINNERS TO PURGATORY,

This he knows he cannot do, and there is no power in his church to do it for him; and till it is done, however much to his disgust, he must content himself with the fact that there is no purgatory here. Because the patent fork in its operations wont mix up things which differ and pitch souls indiscriminately anywhere, so as to allow Laicus for his own purposes to ignore all distinctions, he tells us that the conclusion to which it has sharply, but truthfully, driven us is "unmitigated bosh." But I want to know where and how the "bosh" comes in.

That the argument to the case is a sound one, and that nothing can get into the conclusion that is not first in the premises he must admit; and looking back to the premises it is clear that the "bosh" is not in the minor, for that is

AN ADMITTED HISTORIC FACT

—there is no "bosh" in facts. It must therefore come in with the major, which is a Roman Catholic dogma resting on papal assertion alone—so that we have here the very interesting fact—the grand spectacle of a Roman Catholic theologian and champion of the church posing in the face of his own theology, and warmly denouncing it as "unmitigated bosh." And the best of it is, this "bosh" is the very foundation on which purgatory is built, for without the distinction between "venial" and "mortal" sin, purgatory could not exist. That is its chief corner stone, and Laicus calls it "unmitigated bosh." I agree with him, and thank him heartily for the description, and as he seems to have a choice vocabulary, and a princely power of applying it, I ask him to go a little further and tell us what the superstructure should be called which is built on "unmitigated bosh."

The next point is the claim of canonicity for the apocrypha. To support this Laicus urged the canon of the third Council of Carthage, but to that I objected on the ground that and test three excludes its testimony.

CARTHAGE WAS NOT A GENERAL COUNCIL,

Besides it was shown that the canons of this council never became authority even to those who framed them, for the church beyond the sea was to be consulted before they could be confirmed, and I asked Laicus to show that this had been done.

He carefully avoids the point, however, and thus confesses his weakness, but to make up for his neglect, and to cover his retreat he pours out a flood of names, fathers, popes and councils thrown together as if at random and if they were not ghosts quite formidable enough to make the boldest opponent tremble. It is a bold stroke, but the trick is too old to escape detection, and Laicus must now take the credit of the venture. And here I beg to remind him that the opinion of individuals is not worth a straw in the case. What we must get is the deliverance of general councils—that is what Rome boasts to have—what her creed absolutely requires—all else is to be anathematised. But not to rob him of too much at once I won't for the present exclude the testimony which he offers us in the names of popes. The councils and popes put forward in the case shall now have our attention. We begin with the third of Carthage. The of this council was sufficiently brought out in my letter of Nov. 27th. We have now to go a little further, and show that part of them—and the part which concerns the question at issue, and which Laicus is constantly urging on us as proof—is a forgery.

In the 47th canon, which contains the list of canonical Scriptures, it is resolved that Pope Boniface should be consulted. And the 48th, it directs that Pope Siricius should be consulted. Now, unless there were two popes at the time, there must be something wrong. But there was only one. Siricius was at the time in Peter's chair, but Boniface was unknown, and did not appear for more than twenty years thereafter, three successive popes coming in between him and Siricius. So that unless Laicus can show that the Council was gifted with prophecy, and remained to wait for more than twenty years to get the advice and confirmation of the coming man, he need not be the least offended if we call that 47th canon in whole, or part, a forgery. And if we take in connection with this the important and well authenticated fact that, neither the African nor the Greek record of this council contains the Maccabees in its catalogue of adopted books, our CONVICTION OF THE FORGERY IS DEEPENED.

That Rome only has them, and that the name of Boniface is introduced, force us to the conclusion that a later hand had something to do with the matter and that the pious tinkering was not without a purpose.—Forgery one.

Next comes Pope Innocent. But the letter of his holiness relied on here has been shown by Cave, Cosin, and others to be a deliberate forgery. It had no existence 300 years after the alleged author's death. Cresconious, a forger, first produced it in the beginning of the eighth century, and even then no one knew that it contained a list of canonical Scripture till it passed under the hand of Isidore one hundred years later.—Forgery two.

Pope Gelasius comes next, and he must follow his predecessor, and for the same reason, and take Isidore with him.—Forgery the third.

The Council of Trullo comes next—held, not in 680, but in 692. It was not a general council, and test three puts it out of court at once. We only wait to remark concerning it, that, when its decrees were sent to Rome for the signature of the Pope, his holiness took the pet and would not sign, and it is rather remarkable to find a Roman Catholic urging in proof canons which an infallible Pope refused to make authority in his church, but a drowning man will catch at straws.

Next comes

and a good deal has been made of this; but alas! for the confidence of man in man, or councils either. It was a time of schism in the church, and two opposing councils sat excommunicating one another—that at Basle calling that a Florence a "schismatic synagogue." Now this "schismatic synagogue" was not a general council, and test three refuses to take its evidence. Moreover, it has been shown by Bishop Cosin that no such thing as a catalogue of canonical Scriptures was ever considered and much less adopted by that Council. The honor of producing one in the name of the council is due to the Dominican Caranza, confessor to Philip of Spain and Mary of England, and who lived and confessed his royal penitents more than one hundred years after the council closed.—Forgery the fourth.

Here I might close, but I cannot resist noticing one reference to Jerome. "Laicus," says: "Nor can Jerome or Origen be made to deny the inspiration of Maccabees * * * St. Jerome remarks, 'it is not what I myself thought, but what they (the Hebrews) are wont to say against us that I explained.'"

The man who can write in that way of Jerome, in face of his "Prologus Galeatus,"

IS CERTAINLY TO BE PITIED.

He is either too ignorant to understand what he writes, or so lost to shame that he has no reputation to keep. The thing is a deliberate misrepresentation of Jerome's position, and part of an old slander intended to weaken his testimony against the doings of Trent. First set going by Catharin, it was repeated in the interests of Rome till searched out and exposed by Dr. Wordsworth; and Laicus, when he has nothing better to produce, hesitates not to repeat the slander on the dead. Honorable man; but then it is on behalf of the church, and the end justifies the means, no matter how dishonorable and mean they may be.

Such is the character of what Laicus has been dishing up to us to establish the canonicity of the Apocrypha. What can the cause be that needs the support of such forgery and misrepresentation.

Laicus either knew or did not know the character of the evidence he produced. If he knew, and has all this while been urging it to deceive us, he has been guilty of the basest conduct and the greatest dishonesty of which a writer could be guilty. If he did not know, then for the work he has undertaken, and in either case he has proved himself to be contemptible and unworthy of credit.

It is not pleasant to have to deal with an opponent who has neither shame nor truth in him, and whose sublime assumptions count on the ignorance of those who hear him, and then deliberately pour out such rubbish to deceive them. But it is necessary sometimes, for the sake of others, to tear the mask off such men, to show to what depths of trickery and deception Rome is ready to stoop, and what willing tools of her tyranny she has got ready to carry out her will, in order to keep her hold on the mind and consciences of men.

I hope Laicus will not escape the notice of his superior, and miss his due for making his church responsible for so much "unmitigated bosh,"

THEODORE.

[We have during the past two months given considerable space to the discussion on the "Middle State," believing it to be of interest to a large portion of our readers. The subject has been pretty fully discussed on both sides, and the arguments apparently pretty well exhausted. Therefore, we must ask the disputants to close the controversy in our next issue, each with a column and a half paper. It will be seen that we are compelled to reduce other matter in our paper to the smallest space; and necessity, not choice, urges us to make the above request, with the hope that both Laicus and Theodore will willingly comply.—ED. EXAMINER.

METHODIST S. S. ANNIVERSARY.

The anniversary services in connection with the Methodist Sunday School were delightfully successful. On Sunday Rev. Mr. Gee preached an excellent sermon. The Christmas evening festival was a great treat—the "Christmas box" giving great pleasure. Among the officers of the school deserving of praise special mention should be made of Miss Kate Buck, Mrs. P. W. Stevenson and Mrs. G. Jones. The receipts of the evening were $23. The school is prosperous, fully equipped and with $70 in the treasury.

PRESBYTERIAN S. S. SOCIAL.

This entertainment was of a happy, unique, and interesting character. The programme consisted of a cantata representing the seasons, and introducing the children's friends, Jack Frost, St. Nicholas, etc. Its presentation was very creditable to all concerned. The presents were distributed from an enchanting fairy bowersenshrining the Fairy Queen. In every respect the entertainment was a decided success, the chief credit for its promotion being due to Mr. W. R. Roxburg, superintendent.

MUNICIPAL ELECTIONS.

The new Council for 1885 will be composed of Messrs. W. H. Stevenson (reeve), H. Reynolds, P. W. Reynolds, J. N. Ackerman and James Greenbank. Messrs. Roxburg and Finlay, nominated as reeve, and Messrs. J. Harper, T. Armstrong and Wm. Nicoll, as councillors, withdrew their candidature.

Sale of China and Fancy Goods,

DURING THE HOLIDAYS, AT COST.

I have decided to close out my entire stock in this line of Goods, without reserve.

I don't propose to sell with the view of buying again or renewing my stock. I intend giving up this branch of my business absolutely.

Purchasers will meet with bargains in China Tea Sets, Handsome Printed Tea Sets, White Granite Ware, Fancy Cups and Saucers of beautiful designs, Glass Sets, Cheese Dishes, Bread Dishes, Ornamental Jugs, &c., &c.

The stock is neither old, shop worn, nor out of style, but comprises New and Fashionable Goods in every line, the whole of which must be cleared off at cost.

I am also offering a choice new stock of Teas, Sugars, Spices, Fruits, Canned Goods, &c., specially for the Holidays at very close prices.

Etc., Etc., Etc., Etc.

This is a time of all times to BUY! to buy to advantage, and turn over your money to make for yourself. FOR THE NEXT THREE WEEKS we crowd on all sail, we call our Reserves on deck. The trade wind we shall raise will be none too stiff for us. Our Ship is gloriously ballasted with Best Goods, and steered by low prices. Welcome the trade wind to the buyers of the Town and County.

Commencing on Saturday, January 3rd, and continuing for 3 Weeks only, until Saturday, January 24th, inclusive, we organize a Grand Clearing Out Sale of General Goods.

A BUSINESS CHANGE, to take place on February 1st, necessitates a general reduction of Stock in all Lines, a reduction that must be made. It's imperative and necessary. The Sale will be for Cash only. There will be a sacrificing reduction in Prices. After 9 years successful trade, we give the public the benefit of a straight-out-at-cost-sale. The Stock is Large, Full and most Complete. We have imported direct, and the lines of Goods are unapproachable value. We will sell you freely AT COST, what we'd rather sell without profit, than not sell at all.

WE OFFER YOU YOUR DELIBERATE CHOICE

Out of what is probably the Largest Stock of Goods in Peterborough to-day—a Stock of many Departments; combined, they embrace every class of Goods for personal or home use.

In Our Ordered Clothing Department!

Single Garments or Suits will be made up at Prices to match our Straight out Sale, and in keeping with good Trimmings and good Workmanship.

If you've read, you'll have to come and see. If you come, you'll have to Buy. The opportunity is a golden one. We ask to be put to the test. We'll please you in material, in goods and in prices. Come! If you don't go away with more knowledge and goods, and less money, then you are not open to your opportunities.

MAN'S ORGANISM

Is the most complex work of the Creator, and when this complicated structure, so exquisitely wrought, is disturbed by disease, the most efficient aid should be sought from the most skilled physicians—for the human body is too precious to be neglected. It becomes the question, then: "What physician shall be employed?"

Dr. OSCAR JOHANNSEN, of the University of Berlin, Germany, has made a lifelong study of ailments of the Nervous and Genito-Urinary System.

HIS REMEDIES CURE

Any Debility or Derangement of the Nervous System, including Spermatthorea, Gonorrhea, Syphilis, Stricture, Impotence, etc., etc.

BECAUSE you may have been cheated and fooled by QUACKS, who claim to cure this class of disorders, do not hesitate to give Dr. JOHANNSEN'S method a fair trial before your case becomes chronic and incurable.

FREE.

A valuable treatise, explanatory of Dr. JOHANNSEN'S system, will be sent by mail post paid and securely sealed from observation, to any sufferer addressing his sole authorized agent for the United States and Canada,

HENERY VOGELER,
51-1y 40 South Street, New York.

Complicated symptoms treated from Dr. JOHANNSEN'S Special Prescription, under advice of a duly qualified consulting physician.

All correspondence held as strictly confidential, and advice by mail free of charge.

A MARVELOUS STORY

TOLD IN TWO LETTERS.

FROM THE SON: "[illegible] St., New [illegible], 1883.

"Gentlemen: My father resides at Glover, Vt. He has been a great sufferer from hemorrhoids, and the inclosed letter will tell you what a marvelous effect has had in his case. I think his blood must have contained the humor for at least ten years; but it did not show, except in the form of a scrofulous sore on the wrist, until about five years ago. From a few spots which appeared at that time, it gradually spread so as to cover his entire body. I assure you he was terribly afflicted, and an object of pity, when he began using your medicine. Now, there are few men of his age who enjoy so good health as he has. I could easily name fifty persons who would testify to the facts in his case.

Ayer's Sarsaparilla

Yours truly, W. M. PHILLIPS."

FROM THE FATHER: "It is both a pleasure and a duty for me to state to you the benefit I have derived from the use of

Ayer's Sarsaparilla.

Six months ago I was completely covered with a terrible humor and scrofulous sores. The humor caused an incessant and intolerable itching, and the skin cracked so as to cause the blood to flow in many places whenever I moved. My sufferings were great, and my life a burden. I commenced the use of the SARSAPARILLA in April last, and have used it regularly since that time. My condition began to improve at once. The sores have all healed, and I feel perfectly well in every respect — being now able to do a good day's work, although 73 years of age. Many inquire what has wrought such a cure in my case, and I tell them, as I have here tried to tell you, AYER'S SARSAPARILLA. Glover, Vt., Oct. 21, 1883. Yours gratefully,

HIRAM PHILLIPS."

AYER'S SARSAPARILLA cures Scrofula and all Scrofulous Complaints, Erysipelas, Eczema, Ringworm, Blotches, Sores, Boils, Tumors, and Eruptions of the Skin. It clears the blood of all impurities, aids digestion, stimulates the action of the bowels, and thus restores vitality and strengthens the whole system.
